VACATION BASEBALL TRIP

For the first time this year a new departure was tried in the baseball field and a trip was arranged for the spring vacation. The trip was a decided success both in developing the men early and in the number of victories. Bowdoin invaded a wholly new territory when entering New York and New Jersey, but has every reason to feel proud of the showing made in that part of the country.

Fourteen men left Brunswick on Friday, March 29, to make the trip. The team went first to Fort Andrews at the mouth of Boston Harbor. Here the coach, John Irwin, has a summer hotel which was opened for the team and where the fellows remained until Wednesday.

It is perhaps peculiarly fitting that a Bowdoin team should go to Fort Andrews, named after the famous Massachusetts War Governor, and one of the distinguished Bowdoin graduates. And certainly the Bowdoin fellows on the trip were most handsomely treated by all the men of the fort. Every courtesy and kindness was shown us. We were given the use of the baths at the Fort, their baseball diamond and most hospitably welcomed wherever we went. It was a decided treat to see all the inside conditions of army life, to inspect the guns, see the drills and just how a modern fort is conducted. Every man we met, officers and privates, appeared to consider a Bowdoin man his special guest. To Major Davis, Lieutenants Long, Lomax and Winslow, to Sergeants Kearney, Humphries, Corporals Willis, Hornbuckle, in fact, to all, we feel much indebted, and our only wish is that the members of the Fort will believe that we appreciated all that was done for us. Every Bowdoin man at the Island truly went away with a most high and favorable impression of the U. S. Army.

Bowdoin, 2; Fort Andrews, 0.

The first baseball game of the season was played on the afternoon of Saturday, March 30, with the team from Fort Andrews. The game was well played for one so early in the season and was encouraging as a starter. Sparks pitched for Bowdoin and struck out ten men. Smith who pitched for the Fort, was found quite a proposition, fanning eleven.

Brown, 8; Bowdoin, 2.

Bowdoin met with her only defeat on the trip in the game with Brown at Providence on April 3. The game was by no means as easy as the score would indicate, the Bowdoin team losing by costly errors at critical places. Sparks pitched a nice game having eight strike-outs to his credit. During the first three innings neither side scored. When Brown came to the bat in the last of the fourth, Budlong started off with a single, then a combination of unfortunate errors of Hanrahan and Stanwood and one single by Elrod gave Brown four runs before Bowdoin could steady down. In the fifth Brown again scored, by means of four errors and two base hits, running in three runs. Brown again scored in the sixth. Bowdoin secured her two runs in the seventh. An error by Jones placed Harris on first, Abbott received a pass, and a hit by Bower scored two men. Manter, Brown and Hanrahan made a pretty double in the eighth. The summary:

Bowdoin, 8; Fordham, 4.

On Thursday afternoon, April 4, Bowdoin won a decisive victory over Fordham University at Fordham Heights, New York. The game was exciting throughout. Bowdoin hit a fast pace from the first and kept it up throughout the game. In the first inning Fordham scored two errors. The first man up received a pass, and an error by Files put two men on bases. A single by Coffin with two out scored these two runs. In the first of the second Bowdoin scored one run, Files reaching first on a pretty hit and was scored by an error of Maloney. Fordham failed to score in her part of the inning. In the first of the third Bowdoin cinched the game by winning in four runs. Abbott led off with a base hit, an error by the catcher and another at first put Stanwood and Bower on. Abbott was now out at the plate on a ground ball, and Files reached first, making three men on bases. Hanrahan came to the bat and made a pretty hit which scored Stanwood and Bower. Lawrence sacrificed, which advanced Hanrahan a base, and then Files and Hanrahan both scored on an error to third. Manter got on bases, but Sparks was put out at first retiring the side.

No more scoring was done until in the last of the fourth Fordham secured two more runs on two errors by Manter. This was all the scoring Fordham did. Bowdoin added another run in the eighth on a hit by Hanrahan followed by a hit by Manter. In the ninth Bowdoin added two more runs, Harris making a two-base hit and Stanwood and Bower each a single. Bowdoin played swift ball throughout, making but two errors and hitting very hard and safe. Files pitched a fine game, having 8 strike-outs to his credit. A considerable crowd of graduates were present at the game and showed their enthusiasm by spirited cheering throughout.

Bowdoin, 6; Seton Hall College, 1.

On Friday, April 5, Bowdoin travelled over to New Jersey and played the final game of the trip, winning from the strong Seton Hall College team at South Orange. Bowdoin led from the start. The team hit remarkably hard this day. Scamman pitched the first six innings after which he was relieved by Sparks. During the first two innings neither side scored. Bowdoin scored one in the third on a single by Stanwood and Files, three times in the fifth on base hits by Stanwood and Hanrahan, and a long three-base hit by Files, again in the sixth on two two-baggers by Manter and Abbott, and again in the seventh on a single by Bower. Seton Hall got her score in the eighth on a base hit and error. Bowdoin had eleven hits in the game for a total of fifteen bases. The summary:

THE MARCH QUILL

A story of the woods, and one of the sea; an appreciation of Wordsworth as a teacher, and one of Thackeray as a philosopher; a posy of medieval lyrics, and the translations of them into modern English; a poem of love, and one of imaginative moral suggestion; these, with the Gray Goose Tracks, and the comments of the Postman, make up the contents of the March Quill.

A Woods Tragedy is the story of a stubborn fight, in the waters of Caribou Lake, between a cow moose and a hungry bear. It is put into the mouth of an old Penobscot trapper, and is told in a lively, picturesque style that is interesting and effective. The sympathy of the reader is sure to be with the moose defending her young calf, and so it is worth while to record that the result of the fight was a bearskin rug in a Philadelphia home.

The Message of Wordsworth has been heard, at least in substance, in Memorial Hall, where it was awarded the Sixty-Eight Prize. It is a just and thoughtful statement of the teaching of Wordsworth in regard to the conduct of life, and particularly in its application to the present conditions of American life. The subject is more important than popular, and the treatment of it in this brief essay is sympathetic and forcible.

In Thackeray as a Philosopher, the writer does little more than hint at the grounds for thus classifying Thackeray. Of course, in these days when the word 'philosophy' is employed with so much looseness, and every kind of writer, from Plato to Mr. Dooley, is likely to be called a philosopher, it would not be difficult to make out a case for Thackeray; but to establish his claim to that designation requires a little closer grappling with the theme than was, perhaps, possible within the limits of this brief article.

The Men of Gloucester tells, in a form that is partly narrative, of the hardships and perils of the Gloucester fishermen. It is the work of an alert and sympathetic, rather than a vivifying, imagination; though there are touches of dialect and description that are graphic and admirable.

Medieval Lyrics are presented in the original Latin, and in English translation. The first law of rhythmical translation, according to Rossetti, is, "Thou shalt not turn a good poem into a bad one." The law is not violated in the case before us, and, indeed, is hardly applicable, because the original poems are not good ones. They have a certain interest, but it is chiefly historical. The translators, by a judicious use of freedom in translation, have made as much as possible out of their material.

The poem "To—" shows a greater sensitiveness to emotion, and to certain aspects of nature, than to rhythm and cadence. It has merits, but they are those of thought rather than of form.

Ad Astra expresses a pleasing conception in graceful and musical lines. It is not a new idea, that a 'jesting Fool' may have tender and deep thoughts; Shakespeare has taught us that; but in this little poem the idea is given a suitable setting, and a poetic utterance.

Mozart, Patrick Henry, and the rest of them, in Gray Goose Tracks, hit upon rather a slender topic for their symposium, but Dr. Johnson makes one remark which justifies his reputation for good sense,—"Let us not seek to perpetuate an evil custom by clothing it with the magic name of Tradition."

EXPENSE AND EARNING BLANKS

The college asks every man to fill out the Expense and Earnings blanks this week and hand them in at once. The failure of a few men to do this definite service to the college will block the whole investigation and delay the publication of the report, which should be issued and distributed at once. The value of this report, if it is based on complete returns, is beyond question, and it is a duty of the students to help the college in its compilation.

Vol. XXXVII. APRIL 19, 1907 No. 1

Introducory Possibly one of the unfortunate conditions in the conduct of yearly institutions, such as of necessity is a college periodical, is the fact that each year new men must assume the duties of directorship just when the older men have had service enough to render their experience valuable in conducting a paper. Regarding the paper wholly from a literary standpoint it would certainly be much better if a consistent, regular policy controlled it from year to year. But this, of course, is obviously impossible; and when we as the new board assume our duties, it is not for us to commence by stating plans and ideas for a paper which has already had so long an existence as the Orient, but rather for us to say that it will be our desire to maintain the same general lines of policy and to try to reach the same plane of excellence which we believe the Orient has generally maintained. If this line of policy were to be stated as introductory, we might simply say as follows, that we hope to keep the paper up-to-date in its news department; to increase the alumni department and make it really interesting to the graduates; and to advocate editorially for the college more emphasis on the scientific courses as looking towards strengthening them in every direction; and in the athletic field, widening of the outlook and the extension into out-of-state fields. In some directions we may fall short, in others perhaps succeed, in all we trust that we will be regarded with charity and that it will be remembered that the college paper is handled only by college undergraduates as an outside duty.

The Bugle About one month ago the faculty recommended to the president of the Sophomore Class that an effort be made to limit the 1909 Bugle Assessment to five dollars for each member of the class, and to limit the total cost of the Bugle to $500. This action was taken after considerable deliberation and chiefly out of regard for the reputation of the college.

It has admittedly been the policy of each board to try to go the preceding board “one better,” and this series reached its highest point in last year’s Bugle. No doubt the 1909 Bugle Assessment to five dollars for each member of the class was assessed nine dollars. And further, there have been sold up to date, including the books bought by several fraternity chapters for exchanges, but 325 copies. This means that scarcely enough Bugs were sold last year to supply each Bowdoin student with one copy, to say nothing of sending Bugs to friends as a means of advertising the college. This was only natural for it is hard for any student to buy many “gift books” at a dollar each, and it comes especially hard on the Junior, who is the most enthusiastic purchaser of his year book, for he has already sunk nine dollar in its fortunes.

One more point. Even when the Bugle does get outside of the college, it does not fairly represent Bowdoin. For a person seeing an up-to-date Bugle first admires it then thinks as follows: the book is a fine one, but Bowdoin is a small college, and if one class produces such a book, assessments must run high at Bowdoin. The result is that our Bugs are far from fulfilling their obvious purpose of favorably advertising the college, for they not only reach an extremely limited number of outsiders, but to those they do reach they bear a false impression.

To bring the expense of the Bugle within rational limits, which are in accordance with the general run of Bowdoin expenses and the pocketbooks of Bowdoin students, is perfectly possible. For instance, the 1906 Bugle, which as usual, was considered one of the very best at the time of its production, cost but $900. And in the opinion of a former Bugle business manager, consulted by the Orient, the $500 limit suggested by the faculty is very reasonable, and the expenses may easily be kept within it by a few sane changes of policy, it perhaps being possible to radically reduce the price of the separate copies. The Orient hopes that this matter will receive the thoughtful attention of every Bowdoin man, especially of the present Sophomore Class, whom it directly concerns, and in the meanwhile the Orient wishes success to the 1908 board, which it is understood has already taken steps toward a more conservative policy than that followed last year.

Communication

To the Editor of the Orient:

I feel sure that I shall be voicing the sentiment of every alumnus who was fortunate enough to be at Fordham Field on Thursday of last week if I thank heartily whoever was responsible for that Easter trip for the baseball team. It seems to me that it was nothing less than an inspiration; at all events it was an inspiration to those of us who have longed (and in vain) for ten or twelve years to see a Bowdoin team at work. The only thing I can think of that would be any better would be to have the opportunity come a little later in the season after the various teams have struck their gait. If this is impossible, however, we shall all be glad of a repetition of this season's performance. I am sure also that I am not in error in saying that if the game had been on Saturday afternoon instead of Thursday and if there had been no uncertainty in regard to the date of the game, as there was, unfortunately, the number of alumni that would have been present would have been both a revelation and a happy surprise to the team.

The number of Bowdoin men in New York and vicinity is rapidly increasing and it would perhaps be well worth while to arrange a game or two a year in or near New York if for no other reason than the increased interest in the college that such a game would awaken among them. It seems to me, however, that there is another much stronger reason for so doing. There are undoubtedly more boys preparing for college in Greater New York and its suburbs than in any equivalent area in the country. It is true, of course, that many of these boys have their future college selected several years before graduation and that many others come under strong influence from one institution or another, but it is also true, I believe, that there are many who are undecided up to the very last and even then make a decision because of some one thing that seemed especially attractive in connection with the college finally chosen. I can readily see why Bowdoin College should be a myth to a boy in this section who has had nobody to inform him in regard to it. I find that it is a well-known name to him when used in connection with achievement in letters or politics, or some other field of the world's work, but he does not think of it as a place where, in addition to the educational side, undergraduates have the same interest in athletics and kindred matters as pervades the colleges with whose customs he is more familiar. A baseball game or a football game, played almost under his nose, with some college whose athletic record he is perhaps following closely, would do more than almost anything else to make him familiar with the name of Bowdoin.

A chance to invite one or more boys to see a football game or a baseball game between Bowdoin and some college in this locality would be a splendid supplement to the efforts some of us are already making to introduce these same boys to Bowdoin. For this reason particularly I sincerely hope that the trip this year may serve to establish a precedent and, if this prove to be the case, I am confident that the college will gain much in the years to come.

Yours very truly,

George E. Carmichael, '97.

TWO BOWDOIN BOOKS

The two Bowdoin books, "Bowdoin Verse" and "Under the Bowdoin Pines," for copies of which a subscription paper has been kept during the winter at the Library desk, are just out. They are both edited by J. C. Minot, '96, and the whole college should feel grateful to him for the time and care which he has put into their preparation. He should feel well rewarded by the results of his labor for he has produced something which every Bowdoin man will want and prize as soon as he sees it.

"Bowdoin Verse" contains a few more than one hundred poems selected carefully and with good taste from those which have appeared during the last fifteen years in the undergraduate publications of the college, some of the poems being contributed by alumni, but most of them having been written by students while undergraduates. It has been the aim of the editor in selecting the poems, not only to consider their merit, but also to favor those in which the college or some phase of college life was taken as a theme.

"Under the Bowdoin Pines" is a book of Bowdoin stories compiled from those which have appeared in the Bowdoin Quill. The book contains nineteen stories of college life “under the pines” and three historical articles which relate to the Thordike Oak, Longfellow and Hawthorne.

The books are very attractively bound, and one contains as a frontispiece a picture of a path through our pine woods, while the other has a new and artistic view of the chapel. Only five hundred copies of each volume have been printed and as more than three hundred copies of each already have been bought by the alumnae, students desiring copies should apply for them immediately at the Library or of W. M. Harris, ’09. The books cost $1.25 separately, or $2.00 for both if bought together.

THETA DELTA CHI HOUSE PARTY

The Eta Charge of the Theta Delta Chi Fraternity held its annual house party on the Friday before vacation at its chapter house on Maine Street. The house was tastefully decorated, and the party was a perfect success. In the afternoon a reception was held, the patronesses being Mrs. William DeWitt Hyde, Mrs. Frank E. Woodruff, Mrs. Hartley C. Baxter, and Mrs. Frank W. Shorey, and in the evening after dinner had been served at the house, a program of 23 dances was enjoyed.

Among those present at the dance were: Miss Edith Weatherill, Miss Edith Woodruff, Miss Lulu Wood, of Brunswick; Mrs. Hall of Andover; Miss Parker of Smith College; Miss Hattie Brazier, of Wellesley; Miss Helen Dana of Smith; Miss Gertrude Soper, of Mt. Warren, '10, is at present working on the Boston & Maine Railroad.
A number of students will take part in the Dickens Carnival to be held May 2.
Coach Morrill will be at Whittier Field every afternoon from 2:30 to 5:00.
Seth G. Haley, '07, has been elected principal of the North Grammar School at Freeport.
Fordham College, that Bowdoin recently defeated by a score of 8 to 4, has beaten Princeton, 3 to 1.
The Intercollegiate Athletic Meet usually held at Mott Haven, this year, will be held at Cambridge.
The Track Association made between one hundred and fifty and two hundred dollars from the Indoor Meet.
Professor Houghton was in New York last week to attend the reunion of his Senior Society at Yale, Class of 1873.
The annual reception and dance of the Zeta Psi Fraternity will take place on the afternoon and evening of May 24.
John Leydon, '07, has resigned his position as tenor on the choir of the Central Congregational Church at Bath.
A next Sunday chapel will begin at five o'clock, and this will be the regular time for Sunday chapel during the rest of the year.
The Oxford County Club was pleasantly entertained last Tuesday evening by Marsh, '09, at the Delta Kappa Epsilon House.
John Leydon, '07, has accepted a position as teacher of Mathematics and German at Worcester Academy, Worcester, Mass., next year.
Invitations have been issued by the Beta Sigma Chapter of Beta Theta Pi for a reception to be held from four to six o'clock on April 26, at their chapter house.
Quinn, one of Harvard's track coaches, has been putting in the present week with the Bates track team. J. J. O'Donnell of Boston, will coach the Bates team this season.
Phil Clark, '04, who won his B as a high jumper, during the first three years of his college course, and later won his H at Harvard, when taking a postgraduate course, has been spending the past week here coaching the high jumpers.
The rooms in South Maine which were damaged by the fire have been thoroughly repaired and are now ready for occupation. Hardwood floors have been put in and the rooms are now among the best in college.
The Bowdoin team at Fordham was most loyally supported by a Bowdoin contingent although so far away from home. Owing to a misunderstanding in regard to the day of the game, possibly fewer were there than would have been but as it was a goodly number of Bowdoin graduates were out to cheer on the team in its entrance into these new fields. About thirty alumni were present.

The following is modest notice recently printed by the Thornton Academy Periodical:
Wanted—By the whole school. A new gymnasium fully equipped and erected by the Fall of 1908.
Kimball, '10, has received the appointments as alternate to take the examinations for entrance to both West Point and Annapolis. In case either of the candidates from this district fail to pass the examination Kimball will have a chance to try.
The baseball game which was scheduled with Tufts at Brunswick for this week Wednesday, had to be cancelled owing to the poor condition of the grounds. Special effort is to be made to secure this game for a later date, in order that the fellows may have a chance to see a game with this college at home.
Last Wednesday evening Bowdoin was well represented in cast of the "Elopement of Ellen," which was presented in the Town Hall. The play was given under the auspices of the Young People's Union of the Universalist Church, and was excellently played. The men on the cast were L. C. Whitmore, '04, J. B. Draper, '10, W. S. Linnell, '07, L. H. Fox, '06.
Much interest is being felt by the students in a Dickens Carnival, for which arrangements are being made by a committee of ladies connected with the Saturday Club, and which is to be given in the Town Hall on the evening of Thursday, May 2. It is to be a benefit for the Curtis Memorial Library of Brunswick, so beside giving the promise of a good time, is the incentive of helping a worthy object. This carnival bids fair to be the social event of the year, for both the college and the town, and no student will probably fail to be present.

FACULTY NOTES

During the vacation Professor Woodruff attended the meeting of the New England Classical Association at Andover, Mass.
On April 5 Professor Robinson attended the meeting of the New England Section of the Society of Chemical Industry and was elected to the executive committee.
Professor Robinson was recently elected to the editorial board of the American Journal of Public Hygiene which is published in Boston.
Last Sunday Professor Woodruff preached at the West Church in Portland.
Professor Chapman and Professor Robinson were at the meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Boston on April 6.

DEUTSCHER VEREIN

Last Saturday evening Professor Carr of the University of Maine spoke to the members of the Deutscher Verein at their meeting in Hubbard Hall. His subject was "Adolf Pichler," a Tyrolean poet of the 19th century. Professor Carr's word-pictures of the Alpine scenery were extremely vivid and his narration of the plots of Pichler's principal works held the closest attention of everyone present. At the close of the address refreshments were served in the Verein room after which an adjournment was taken to the Theta Delta Chi House where a most social time was enjoyed.
IF YOU WANT TO MAKE MONEY THIS SUMMER

We have a proposition by which a good man can, in three months, make more than enough to defray his college expenses for the next year.

There is no outfit to buy and no catechism which you have to learn. All you need is your own gray matter and a little help from us from time to time.

If you will write us, we will gladly explain how we propose to make your next college year free from financial worry.

NOTICE

The students who met with loss in the recent fire in South Maine Hall, wish to thank the students and faculty of Bowdoin College as well as the people of Brunswick, whose generosity enabled them in a large measure to replace their destroyed property.

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION ELECTIONS

Just before the Easter Recess at the last meeting of a very successful year, the Association listened to the sixth of the series of talks on the Ethics of the Profession. It was given by Professor W. T. Foster on "Teaching," and was much appreciated. After the lecture a business meeting was held at which it was voted that a committee be appointed to collect old clothes and magazines from the students, and to send the collections to Dr. Grenfell on the Labrador Coast. The elections for next year were then held and resulted as follows:

Corresponding Secretary—Harold H. Burton, '09.
Recording Secretary—Robert D. Morriss, '10.

NEW TRACK CAPTAIN

Philip R. Shorey, captain of the 'Varsity Track Team, felt obliged last week to resign his position, and Dwight S. Robinson, '07, was elected by the team to take his place. Shorey was offered an excellent position on one of the Eastern Steamship Company's steamers and so has arranged to be absent for the spring, although he will be present to graduate with his class in June. Shorey will run on the team this year just the same, and will be in Brunswick frequently. He has arranged to train while in Boston at Cambridge. As he could only be here seldom, he thought it best not to retain his position as captain. D. S. Robinson, the new captain, is a distance runner, having won second in the two-mile in the Maine Meet in 1904; first in the mile and first in the two-mile at the Maine Meet, and third in the two-mile at the New England Meet in 1905; and second in the mile, third in the two-mile at the Maine Meet, and third in the two-mile at the New England Meet at Brookline in 1906.

Snow has been compelled to withdraw from the debate on account of ill health.

On May 14th Bowdoin will meet Cornell in debate in Memorial Hall, Brunswick. The question will be: "Resolved, That the solution of the Street Railway Problem Lies in Private Ownership." Bowdoin will

COLLEGE RALLY

The fourth annual college rally was held in Memorial Hall last Thursday evening and proved to be the most successful of the rallies yet held at Bowdoin. A large number of Bowdoin alumni were present, and these with the student body and "prep" men made the gathering a very enjoyable and enthusiastic one.

Music was furnished by the Bath band—and this with the cheering made the historic walls of Old Memorial ring with true Bowdoin spirit. Linnell, '07, led the cheering.

As each man entered the hall he was given a very attractive souvenir. This was in the form of a button or rather badge four inches in diameter on which was a picture of old "Joe Boyd" surrounded by the words "Men may come and men may go, but Joe stays here forever." A pamphlet of Bowdoin songs was also distributed. The speakers were then introduced by Chairman Fulton J. Redman, '07, who made an able presiding officer. The first speaker introduced was Professor Chapman of the Class of '66. He said among other things, that when Bowdoin teams played, the whole college was behind them. He spoke of the necessity of every man in college trying to make the teams—to make them for Bowdoin, not the trips; to make them for the college, not for the glory of his fraternity. He also added a few words concerning the hard practice required before contests, labor never known to the public.

The next speaker was Hon. Herbert M. Heath, '76, of Augusta, who gave some reminiscences of his college life. He emphasized the fact that Bowdoin is the real college of manhood, and that more that is worth learning is learned from manhood than from books. Then he spoke of Bowdoin State officials, and said that our present governor is a Bowdoin man with the prospects that the next governor, whether republican or democratic, will be a Bowdoin man.

The third speaker was H. W. Jarvis, '91, who said that Bowdoin men were to be found in every large city in the United States—and that these alumni were of very great value to the Bowdoin men fresh from commencement, for Bowdoin men hang together.

John Clair Minot, '06, spoke briefly and in a humorous vein of the brighter side of college life, both undergraduate and alumni. He stated that he had prepared a more elaborate speech but had philanthropically given it over to be delivered by the following speaker, Charles T. Hawes of Bangor.

Mr. Hawes can usually be relied upon to talk of Bowdoin matters in a way which rouses the enthusiasm of Bowdoin men, and was well up to his standard on this occasion. He paid eloquent tribute to President Hyde, Doctor Whittier, and Coaches McClave and Irwin and others who had done and are still doing much for the advancement of the college in athletics and educational lines. He closed with an exhortation to all undergraduates to keep the college spirit first in their minds, first over class and first over fraternity.

After a short intermission in which punch was served and cheers were given, Chairman Redman introduced Judge Seiders, '72, of Portland, who said, that of the many things a man learns at college none are of more value than honesty and robust manhood. His address was both eloquent and brilliant.

Coach Irwin aroused much enthusiasm by stating that the prospects for a winning baseball team were excellent—that every player on the team knew the game, played the game and was "game."

The next speaker was George E. Fogg, '02, who spoke on Bowdoin spirit—and said that the inscription on the buttons might well have read "men may come, and men may go, but Bowdoin spirit remains forever."

Last came Professor Robinson, who in his usual interesting and informal manner, told many witty stories. Among other things he said he had suffered twice for the college—once as a Freshman and again when he came back to college thirty-three years ago as a tutor, a position fully as embarrassing as that of a Freshman. He added that one has to overcome many things to obtain success in life, and that the time to begin is in college.

The gathering broke up to the good old tune of Phi Chi.
BASEBALL

PORTLAND, 8; BOWDOIN, 3.

On Friday, April 19, Patriot’s Day, Bowdoin played two games with the fast Portland Independent Team on the Pine Tree Athletic Association Park in Portland. The morning game was lost to Portland by the score of eight to three. Scammon pitched for Bowdoin, and did well up to the sixth inning when Portland succeeded in batting out a victory. In the afternoon Sparks pitched for Bowdoin and Williams for Portland. Portland won three to two in a well-played game. The day was very cold and ill-suited for ball playing. The summaries of the two games:

BATES, 5; BOWDOIN, 3.

In a loosely played game on a cold and windy day, Bowdoin lost its opening home game in an exhibition contest with Bates on April 20. Both teams played raggedly at times, although the unseasonableness of the weather accounts for this to some extent. Bates scored two runs in the first inning. A base on balls put Bridges on first, he stole second and third and scored on Stone’s hit. Stone scored on a hit by Bowman. Johnson flew out, and Bowman was caught by Files to Manter. Jordan struck out. No scoring was done in the second inning, but in the third Bates scored twice on two passed balls. In the second half of the third Bowdoin scored two runs on an error by Bowman, a pass to Bower, and a pretty sacrifice by Files followed by a hit by Lawrence. Bates scored again in the eighth and Bowdoin in the ninth. Bates’s elastic eligibility rules permitted Stone to catch for the Bates team, he proving one of the mainstays of the visiting team.

BOWDOIN, 3: MERCERSBURG, 3.

In a well-played game on Monday afternoon the Bowdoin and Mercersburg Academy team played eleven innings to a tie. The Academy team had to leave on the 5:10 train, so it was impossible to complete the game. Both teams started in rather raggedly, but the last part of the game was as pretty an exhibition of well-played ball on both sides as could be wished. Sparks pitched for Bowdoin and proved quite effective, striking out eight men. The Mercersburg team played snappy baseball from the start to the finish of the game. Each team scored one in the first inning. Bowdoin added another in the last of the second, and in the added another in the last of the second, in the Bowdoin made her third run in the fifth and Mercersburg tied the score in the eighth.

A NEW GERMAN COURSE

A new course, to be known as German 9 and 10, will be inaugurated next year. It will be a course in the German drama of the nineteenth century and will consist of very careful study of the modern movements in dramatic literature. The class will begin with several plays of Ibsen and a brief study of his life. They will also read at least one of Tolstoi's novels and some of the works of Zola and Maeterlinck. With this as a background, the class will begin to read the more important dramatic works of the latest period, such as selections from Hauptmann, Sudermann, Byerlien, Hoffmansthal, Fulda, and others.

All the German works will be read in the original language and a part of the requirement will be to study the dramatic structure of each play taken up. This course will be limited to those who have had at least two years of German in college and only in very exceptional cases will work done in preparatory school be accepted.

The lectures in German, which have been given in past years, will be omitted and in their place the class will use Kluge's "Geschichte der Deutschen Literatur." Side by side with this they will study the political history of Germany from a text-book which has not yet been fully decided upon. The subject matter studied in literature will be illustrated by readings from Thomas' "German Anthology." The course will be conducted entirely in the German language.
The Alumni News An arrangement has been made by the Orient Board in regard to the matter of alumni news, which it is confidently hoped will satisfy and be advantageous for all parties concerned—the alumni, the college, the students, and the Board. The arrangement has been brought about by the kind offer made of his services by the Secretary of the General Alumni Association.

The plan is to turn over all the editing of alumni notes and obituaries to the Secretary of the Alumni Association, who will fill one page of each issue with matters of interest to the alumni. For instance, this week there is published a list of all the secretaries of the graduate classes and from now on as long as the arrangement holds there will appear some of the usual alumni notes, which will be confined in each issue chiefly to one or two of the graduate classes.

The Alumni Association is led to undertake this work by the feeling that the bond between our alumni and the college could be much strengthened with benefit to both parties. And it is with this especially in view that the notes are to be grouped in each issue under one or two classes, for the college has appropriated money to purchase and to send copies of the Orient to the alumni who are not already subscribers, but who are members of the class directly concerned with the alumni notes in that particular issue.

The Orient is glad to have this opportunity to make the paper what it should be to the alumni, but it does not want the alumni to feel themselves limited to the alumni page. That page is merely for the alumni notes, and the Orient columns are open to all graduate communications, the more the better,—and remember, we need a college band.

Athletics Bowdoin has just had her fourth annual athletic rally and the occasion was a great success. Now is the time to show that the rally did us good. Bowdoin cannot live forever on her past reputation. She must be doing something in the present. We must show a spirit that brings us, one and all, to every game, and keeps us there fighting to the finish. The old victories were not easy ones, and we must win to-day whether the odds on us are great or small. The baseball team is working hard and the student body is turning out well to support it. We must keep this up, and there is another thing that needs our attention and help.

Two years ago there were more than a hundred men doing track work, now there are seventy. If we are to turn out a team that can win the Maine Meet as it was won two years ago, there must be more material from which to pick. No man can tell whether or not he is fitted for some form of track athletics unless he goes to the field to make a try and the variety of events is so great that there is a chance for everyone. Besides this, in the winning of the meet the seconds and thirds, which cannot be foreseen, are always very important. Any form of track athletics offers healthy exercise in the open air and there is no reason why twice as many men as there are out at present, should not be on the field every day. It may take one, two, three, or even four years for a man to develop himself into a point winner—many will remember as an example that point that "Blossom" Schofield... won last spring in the last event of the Maine Meet of his Senior year, after he tried to gain that honor during each year of his college course. Bowdoin needs every athlete of every calibre, and as another college paper puts it "no athlete was ever made by absent treatment,"—and remember we need a college band.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN TO SPEAK HERE

On Monday morning at 10.20, Hon. William J. Bryan, the well-known Democratic candidate for United States President, will speak to the students of Bowdoin in Memorial Hall. He will leave Portland on the 8.15 electric, reach Brunswick at 10.15, be received by Professor Robinson and Professor A. Johnson on behalf of the President and Faculty, and taken immediately to Memorial Hall. There he will be introduced by Prof. Robinson, and will speak to the students. Mr. Bryan will have to leave again for Portland on the 11.20. In Portland he will be tendered a reception in the afternoon, and in the evening will attend a banquet, where he will make a short speech on the "Political Issues." Later in the evening, at eight o'clock, he will speak in the Auditorium on the "Average Man." Tickets for seats in the auditorium may be bought for 35 and 50 cents.

Mr. Bryan is on a two weeks' trip through the East, and on this trip he is to be heard by three colleges, Dartmouth, Bowdoin, and Colby. It is needless to say that the whole college will greet him at Memorial Hall.

THE DICKENS CARNIVAL

On May 3 the ladies of Brunswick will present a "Dickens Carnival" in the Town Hall, in which a large number of college men will take part. The scheme is to have every one of Dickens' characters appear on the stage in groups representing the book in which they are found. After the appearance of all the Dickens characters a social dance will be held. The idea of a Dickens Carnival is not an entirely new one in Brunswick, since it was tried here about fifteen years ago, and was one of the most successful entertainments that has ever been given in the town. The profits of the carnival will go to the Brunswick Public Library. Besides the entertainment and dance there will be three booths where ice cream, candy and fancy articles will be on sale. The booths will be made to represent The Maypole Inn from "Barnaby Rudge," the "Old Curiosity Shop," and Boffin's Bower from "Our Mutual Friend." A dress rehearsal is to be held in the Town Hall on Thursday evening, May 2.

ALUMNI NOTES

By the kindness of the editorial board, the Secretary of the General Association of the Alumni is to supply each issue of the Orient with a page of items respecting Bowdoin graduates. Of these none are more efficient and faithful friends of the college than the class secretaries. No apology, therefore, is needed for printing their post office addresses. Every one of them welcomes a letter of news from an individual classmate and will share it with others. The names of a few nominees are included in the list where the compiler understands that either a vacancy exists or that no class secretary has been chosen.

DELTA UPSILON HOUSE PARTY

The Bowdoin Chapter of Delta Upsilon will hold a reception and dance on the afternoon and evening of May 10. The committee in charge of the party will be R. E. Sawyer, '07, P. G. Bishop, '09, and T. C. Cummins, '10.
TENNIS

Manager Morrison of the Tennis Team announces that, as soon as the courts are in condition, there will be a tournament for the selection of a captain. He wants as many men as possible out for the tournament. The four best will then play a round robin series, the winner of which will be captain of the team this year. There will also be an Interscholastic Tournament, open to all Maine preparatory schools, on May 14, 15, and 16. The 'varsity schedule will be announced later.

Communication

To the Editor of the Orient:

Will you permit me through the medium of your columns to say a few words to the undergraduate body expressive of a feeling which is, I think, universal among the alumni of the College, that is, a feeling of satisfaction that an athletic team representing Bowdoin has this year been brave enough to venture out of the usual routine and to undertake an invasion of New York State. The value of such a trip as that recently taken by the baseball team, in widening the athletic reputation of the College, can hardly be estimated. The local contests, in which local conditions in Maine oblige our teams to engage, are, of course, very important; but in order for Bowdoin to hold its proper place in athletics among the Colleges of New England our teams must be seen more frequently outside the local circles.

The writer is one of a large number who believe that the policy of those in charge of Bowdoin athletics should look toward fewer contests with the Maine Colleges and more with the other small colleges of New England. Much has been said on this topic and I hope the movement in the direction named has been taken up in earnest. So successful a baseball trip as the recent one, when our representatives defeated the teams of two colleges notoriously strong in athletics in this vicinity, should certainly serve as a precedent for future managers to follow.

Last fall for the first time in many years our football team played Wesleyan at Middletown. Are we to play the Wesleyan team in the fall of 1907? Believe me, every alumnus hopes that such a game is being arranged and all the friends of the college are watching expectantly for the announcement of a definite arrangement to that effect. It is certainly true that a contest in football, baseball, tennis, or track athletics, with Dartmouth, Amherst, Williams or Wesleyan, will do more to determine Bowdoin's true athletic standing among the colleges than all the contests in which we engage in Maine in an entire season.

Let the good work go on.

Yours very truly,

ALUMNUS

New York City, April 13, 1907.

CLASS OF 1870

Congressman Alexander, '70, recently spent two weeks in Louisiana with the Rivers and Harbors Committee, visiting the inland waterways of that State. His sail up Bayou Teche took him through the land of Evangeline, where "the name of Longfellow," he says, in a brief letter to a classmate, "is a household word." He adds: "The poet's description of the country, with its winding bayous, its fertile lands, its delicious climate, and its beautiful roses, so abundant as to be without money value, is as faithful as if he had wandered along the banks of the Teche and tarried at Garden City. Yet he never saw this country."

MR. BRYAN'S ADDRESS

Bowdoin men enjoyed a rare treat, Monday morning, when Hon. William J. Bryan, the great Democratic leader, addressed them in Memorial Hall. Although brief, Mr. Bryan's speech was a masterpiece and made a deep impression upon the students and others who composed his large audience.

Mr. Bryan, upon his arrival, was escorted to the hall by Professors Allen Johnson and F. C. Robinson. Professor Robinson presented the speaker, referring to his relations to this college first as a friend and secondly as a benefactor, Mr. Bryan being instrumental in securing to Bowdoin the Philo Sherman Bennett prize fund.

Mr. Bryan touched upon three subjects, public speaking, ambition, and faith. He held that an orator is made rather by contact with great events rather than by any inborn talent. The orator should impress upon the audience his subject rather than his personality. Eloquence he considered to be composed of intimate information on, and enthusiasm for, the subject in hand. Clearness and brevity of statement were the best services one could render to the cause of truth.

In regard to ambition, the second topic of his speech, Mr. Bryan held that ambition is especially commendable in a young man, but only so long as he has a laudable controlling purpose. He spoke, with deep feeling, in favor of universal education, arguing that civilization can only reach its highest point when the greatest number are perfectly developed both in mind and heart. But selfish ambition he believed to be unworthy and ineffective, since only by unselfish service can a man become great.

Faith he believed to be a very important element in success. First, faith in oneself; not egotism or vanity, but the higher confidence which enables one to undertake great works. Secondly, faith in one's fellow-man, for, at bottom, the human heart is a true democracy and great deeds cannot be achieved without identifying oneself with this democracy. But without faith in God these other two go for little. There is a wide gulf between the man who does what is right because other men are watching him and the man who does what is right from a sense of duty to an omnipotent and personal God. He who has faith in such a God fights a winning fight and his opponents, lacking this faith, must be put to rout.

Owing to the close train connection the students did not have time to assemble for a demonstration at the station after the speech. Without exception, however, the students were both pleased and gratified by Mr. Bryan's visit and would gladly have listened to a far longer address.

The gentlemen who were on the platform with Mr. Bryan were Hon. George Fred Williams, member of Congress 1891-3, and Democratic candidate for Governor of Massachusetts, 1895, 1896, 1897, and Sheriff Pennell of Cumberland County. Mr. Bryan was accompanied on his trip by Col. A. C. Drinkwater of Boston, and Mr. Alexander Troup of Connecticut.

THE SYRACUSE DEBATE

The annual debate between Bowdoin and Syracuse was held in Crouse Hall, Syracuse, Wednesday, April 24. Mr. Hancock presided. The question for debate was, "Resolved, That, granting the willingness of Cuba, the annexation of Cuba to the United States would be for the interests of the United States." Bowdoin had the affirmative, Syracuse, the negative.

The first speaker for the affirmative was Redman, who said that the keynote of the present situation in Cuba is uncertainty and that annexation to the United States will supply stability in place of this uncertainty. He quoted the examples of Hawaii, the Philippines and Porto Rico and the testimony of men in the Department of Commerce and Labor and the Bureau of Statistics to show that under annexation and the consequent stability a highly developed Cuba would ensue, which would import from the United States $200,000,000 worth of products annually. He concluded with the statement that we have to sell what Cuba needs to buy.

The first speaker for the negative was Ellwood, who in a very eloquent manner, tried to show that the United States would be violating her sacred honor by annexing Cuba on account of her four previous promises not to do so. He closed by expressing the hope that the brilliant page in our national history caused by our freeing Cuba from Spain would never be blotted by her annexation to the United States.

The second speaker for the affirmative, Roberts, began by indicating that the four promises referred to were not promises but were expressions of intention and that, under the question, Cuba is willing, a sufficient change is made in the circumstances to permit a change in our intentions without its being a question of honor.

He continued the economic argument by showing how this two hundred million dollar increase in our exports would favorably affect some of our fundamental industries, such as the iron and steel, the cotton, the flour and meat, and the shipping industries.

Flouton, the second speaker on the negative, argued that the Cubans were unfit, socially, to become United States citizens and he tried to picture how it would seem to have our Congress packed with black senators from Cuba.

The last speaker on the affirmative, Hupper, began by citing the cases of Arizona and New Mexico, and comparing their condition and population with those of Cuba, favorably to Cuba. He next advanced the economic argument by showing how the annexation and development of Cuba, whose staple product is sugar, would place the United States on a safe and sound economic basis for the production of the sugar we consume and would obviate our having to import one-fifth of our sugar from Europe under a high tariff which necessarily sets the price for the duty-free sugar.

The last speaker for the negative was Kennedy. He showed that the annexation of Cuba would injure our beet-sugar industry, but he accidentally admitted that beet-sugar could not be produced under four cents a pound, twice the cost of sugar production in Cuba. He then closed with more prophecy as to the undesirability of Cuba socially.

In the rebuttal Ellwood reviewed his first speech and reiterated the argument of the four-fold promise. Redman met one of Kennedy's arguments by showing that annexation would be a decidedly paying business proposition. Flouton accused the affirmative of talking merely of dollars and cents, arguing only the economic issue and dodging the others. Roberts explained that the affirmative laid more stress on the economic issue because it was fundamental. He also attacked the chief argument of the negative, the social contention.

Kennedy then summarized the arguments of the negative. Hupper closed the debate with what was easily the best speech of the evening; he summed up the case of the affirmative in a concrete figure of a fortress and an opposing army. He indicated those of the affirmative's arguments which their opponents had failed to meet, claiming that the latter's arguments were less essential in the consideration of the question.

The judges, Mr. Hanlin Lamond, editor of the Nation, Mr. Alfred H. Montague of New York City, and Mr. Albert E. Wilcox, principal of the East Rochester High School, retired for a few moments and then brought in a unanimous decision for the affirmative. After the debate there was a reception at the Phi Kappa Psi House.

BOWDOIN, 10; BOSTON COLLEGE, 3

In a loosely played game on both sides Bowdoin won from Boston College on Whittier Field last Saturday. The game was uninteresting and one-sided from the first. Bowdoin hit harder than in any previous contest, but the fielding was ragged at times. Files pitched well, and the work of Lawrence both behind the bat and with the stick, was noteworthy.

MUSICAL CLUBS’ CONCERT

On Monday evening of this week the College Glee, Mandolin and Guitar Clubs made their annual appearance in Memorial Hall. Especially well received were the selections of the Club quartette, F. E. Kendrie, the violin soloist, A. O. Pike, vocal soloist, and F. R. Upton, the reader, who was encored four times. The clubs have done good work this year, and the trips have all been successful, for this the college should give credit to A. H. Ham, '08, who has managed the clubs, to A. O. HANICAP ATHLETIC MEET

Next Monday there will be a Handicap Athletic Meet at Whittier Field. There will be handicap contests in all events. The meet is open to all men who have been out for track this spring and will be in the nature of trials. A shingle, designed by Stephens, '10, giving the points won and the handicap, will be given to the winners of first, second, and third place in each event. This idea has been carried out at Harvard under Coach Lathrop with great success and if successful here, will be kept up in the future.

LEWISTON WINS INTERSCHOLASTIC DEBATING CHAMPIONSHIP

On Friday, April 26, Lewiston High School won from Gardiner High School in the final debate of the Bowdoin Interscholastic Debating League which was held in Memorial Hall. Over 250 people were present at the debate and both schools were well represented by supporters of their team. The Lewiston delegation considerably enlivened the evening by cheering for the members of their team, and by giving their school yells before and after the debate.

The question debated was, “Resolved, That Senate Bill No. 520, Relating to Shipping Subsidies, as Reported to the National House of Representatives, Should Become a Law.” The team from Gardiner which had been coached by Ammie B. Roberts, '07, had the affirmative side of the question and was composed of Harrison Berry, Harold Holt, and Frank Cobb, with Ralph Parker as alternate. The Lewiston team which did credit to the coaching of W. S. Limnell, '07, had the negative, and its members were George Keist, Franklin Fisher, and Harold Marston, with Rodolph Roy as alternate. Professor Chapman presided over the debate, and the judges were Professor R. C. McCrea, Professor Allen Johnson, and Scott Wilson, Esq., of Portland.

After the debate a reception was tendered to the members of the teams and their friends by the Christian Association, in Hubbard Hall and both Hubbard Hall and the Walker Art Building were kept open for the benefit of the visitors until the teams left for Brunswick.

Sunday Tennis  It has only been within the last year that the practice seems to have started of using the tennis courts on Sunday. It is with regret that the Orient notices this course and we desire to register a strong protest against the continuance of this plan. We do not desire to pose as rigid moral critics nor expect Bowdoin students to be saints in embryo, but certainly such conduct is beneath the dignity of college men. It is not that there is anything intrinsically wicked in the playing of a set of tennis on a Sunday afternoon, if it were only in the tennis itself that the matter lay, but we must remember how it appears to others. When we consider how many visitors there are to our campus on Sundays in spring and also how the electrics are carrying crowds past the courts all day, we must think what an impression of Bowdoin a stranger would receive. A small matter too often gives an evil impression which it takes years of work to convince the holder of it, is wrong. The fellows may have an entirely innocent intent but the action is still working harm to the good name of the college. Fellows may say: "Why is it any worse to play a game of tennis on Sunday than to go for a walk or go canoeing?" It is not, as far as the sport goes; but when we go for a walk we are off by ourselves, but when we play tennis we are under the shade of Bowdoin and are involving more than just ourselves. It is not in the game that the harm is, but in the effect produced. Let us not be selfish. It never was a Bowdoin custom; and let us have respect enough for the views of others and for the good name of the college to see that it never be permitted to become such. The Orient believes that the best sentiment of the college will forbid the continuance of such practice.

The Selfishness of College Men  The heading of this editorial may possibly seem harsh to some and yet it expresses what is true in only too many instances in regard to the financial support of undergraduate interests. Just at this time the various spring college interests are soliciting funds and are meeting with the usual difficulties. Some fellows seem to think a manager is nothing better than a beggar. Some pay up promptly, some sign subscriptions and never pay, and some refuse to help at all. It is not because these students are not interested in college organizations, that some are so niggardly in their support, but rather because they are so inordinately selfish that they much prefer to spend the money on themselves. It is only too often that a manager will receive a reply to a request for a subscription to the effect that, "I can't give you much this year, our house party is so expensive;" or "I went to Lewiston to the show last night and have got to go light for the rest of the month, and don't know when I can pay you." Now the Orient certainly approves of house dances and all such occasions, but is it not showing selfishness to let a trip to Bath or a dance interfere with college subscriptions? Athletics and the other organizations have got to be supported and why should a part expect the rest to bear the burden of their responsibility? Investigation quickly shows us that each branch of athletics is supported practically by its student subscriptions, and yet a fellow who is willing to give ten dollars to go to a dance is just as willing that another should bear his share of expense in contributing to athletics. The support of the regular undergraduate college interests should be the first duty of the college man. Every man should be willing to do something and should plan to do so. There are a few possibly who cannot do so, and of course all cannot give the same amount, but it is not just that a man should economize in his college subscriptions while he is spending freely in every other direction. We are glad to say that by no means the majority of Bowdoin students act this way, but we would like to give this precept to the student body that, only too often, it is not economy that impels a man to refuse a subscription, but selfishness.

BOWDOIN TIME TABLE

On returning after the Easter vacation, it was found that an innovation had been introduced in the form of a Bowdoin Time Table. This was a simple folder put on sale at the Library by one of the students and which contained the times of nearly everything a Bowdoin student has any need to know. It contained the office hours of the college officials, the times the Art Building, Town and College Libraries are open, the times of delivery and collections of all mails, the times the express offices are open in Brunswick, the office hours of the Brunswick doctors and dentists, the days and times of closing of the Brunswick stores, the present railroad time table, the timetable of the electric roads, and a few other similar items of interest.

Since the issuing of the time table the evening collection of the campus mail box has been changed from 8 to 8.30 P.M.

LIBRARY NOTES

"New Chronicles of Rebecca," a new novel by Kate Douglass Wiggins, was put upon the market April 17. In this novel the characters of "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm" figure largely. It is a story glowing with humor, full of human kindness and winning realism.

"Wunisssoo" is the title of a new book just received at the library written by William Allen, who was president of Bowdoin from 1820 to 1839. The book was written while President Allen was in Brunswick and was not published until thirty years had elapsed. It is a poem in four cantos, and is dedicated to the memory of his wife.

The Library has recently received of Francis R. Upton, Esq., of the Class of 1875, a copy of Boydell's Illustrations of the Dramatic Works of Shakespeare. This American edition was one of the notable art books of the middle of the last century and is bound in two giant folios which make an interesting addition to our Shakespearean collection.

The schools who are members of the League are Edward Little High, Lewiston High, Gardiner High, Leavitt Institute and the Alpha Sigma Club of Brunswick. The standing of the several teams will be reported in the Orient from week to week.

Last week the athletic committee of Brown announced that in the future all athletic relations with Dartmouth would be severed. The reason for this action arises from the dispute in the Brown-Dartmouth baseball game last Saturday over a decision of the umpire. It seems that a Brown player was running from first to second when a batted ball struck the second baseman's glove and bounded so as to hit the runner. Capt. Skillin of Dartmouth claimed that the runner was hit by a batted ball and was therefore out, and when the umpire refused to sustain this theory the Dartmouth team withdrew from the field.

PROF. CHAPMAN AT SUNDAY CHAPEL

Prof. Chapman gave an interesting talk in Sunday chapel. He said in part: There is nothing that we know so little about and yet nothing which so vitally concerns us as temptation. Evil in one form or another presents itself to each of us every day. The two ways of meeting temptation and turning it aside, may best be illustrated by two examples from the ancient Grecian mythology. By being bound to the mast, Ulysses withstood the enchanting songs of the Sirens. The Argonauts passed the Sirens in safety, because they knew the sweeter music of their companion, Orpheus.

From these examples the two ways of meeting temptation are evident. First by self-restraint, or assertion of the spiritual power over that of the corporeal. Second, by the possession of something that is infinitely superior to all the power that evil has at its command. This something is found in the love of God, the possession of which banishes all thoughts of evil.

Fred H. Cowan, who for nearly three years was principal of the Bar Harbor High School, and one of the most successful instructors in the history of the school, has taken an excellent position as junior master in the Girls' Latin School of Boston. Mr. Cowan was selected from a long list of applicants, and is filling the position with entire satisfaction.

Mears, a prominent Philadelphia and Bar Harbor real estate agent, has been spending the winter in Philadelphia as assistant manager of Mr. Mears' office. He will return to Bar Harbor about May 1, and with his bride, formerly Miss Madolin B. Tompkins of Waterbury, Conn., will move to their new home on High Street.

CLASS OF 1903

Andrew P. Havey, who has served for the past winter as representative from Sullivan in the 73d legislature, has been one of the busiest men in the House. Although a Democrat, he succeeded in carrying a nominally Republican town by over 150 votes. The Bangor News has the following to say of him:

It might not be amiss just at this moment to recall that Representative Havey of Sullivan, the next to the youngest member in the House, has won quite a record in the council halls of the State this winter. He has been a hard worker and a student of all interests affecting his locality, either directly or indirectly. As a member of one of the most popular legislative clubs, he has been a notable figure, and one of the best entertainers. He has been called upon at many critical moments to render service to the law-makers. It is doubtful if anyone in the House can show a better record. There are the seven measures that Representative Havey has pushed through to a successful conclusion:

Smelt law for Gouldsboro Bay.

Close time on lobsters during the months of July and August between Petit Manan Point and Schoodic Point.

Incorporation of Hancock and Sullivan Bridge Co.

Extension of the charter of the Winter Harbor Trust Co.

Repeal of the special laws of 1893 and 1903 relating to the taking of codfish, hake, haddock, etc., in Frenchman's Bay.

Incorporation of the Prospect Harbor Village Corporation.

Authorization of the Benvenue Granite Co. to construct and maintain crossings in Sullivan.

S. O. Martin has recently received an appointment to the Bureau of Corporations at Washington. The Bureau of Corporations is under the supervision of the Department of Commerce and Labor. Mr. Martin will assist in the investigation of the Tobacco Trust.

THE APRIL QUILL

It was indeed a happy chance that brought together in the heart of a hurrying modern college life these old canvases of the Walker Art Gallery, and the serene ladies and elegant gentlemen of an older day could furnish much material for the foundation of correct standards of artistic judgment, if there should appear several articles similar to the "Notes" by the writer in the April Quill. Why, moreover, with such an interpreter, so skilled in the fine values of color and form, could not a college course be organized for the study of the principles of artistic expression and the rudiments of art criticism?

As a well-ordered and well-written study of the literary development of a particular era and country, "Characteristics of Modern Irish Poetry" is excellent. Brief excerpts illustrating the different notes of the poetry would have enriched the essay. The feverish enunciation of nationality which marked the poets of '48 was natural in view of their ignominious national condition, but we can hardly subscribe to the generalization of our author, that "the dominant note of this poetry was that of all worthy imaginative poetry, the doctrine of nationality." The realm of the imagination is a world, a soul's country, to which no man has set bounds.

The later Celtic verse, as the writer well says further on, has not the limitations of appeal of the "Nation Poets" and triumphs by force of pure poetry.

The "note of rebellion" mentioned by the writer is not alone in and because of the Fenian episode; it is in the heart of the Celt. He is a rebel against the actual. According to Matthew Arnold's dictum he rebels "against the world of circumstance." He would rather follow the glint and gleam of faery than tread any commonplace path of conformity.

The wit of a Yankee countryside is always a bit bold and coarse and its best portrayals suffer from seeming exaggeration. The present example, "The Picnic at Mountfort," has much merit—a central incident, well-sustained humor, and descriptive ease. The writer seems to understand his type of characters and lets them speak out naturally. In view of the recent success of "Mr. Pratt" he would seem to do well to exercise his power. But amusement and artistic satisfaction must not be confused. Few Yankee yarns contain both.

"Phil," as a sympathetic treatment of the youthful idealist, is consistent in language, and good in its direct and vivid descriptions. The first half could have been condensed with enhanced effect.

This youth "cultivating a sort of isolation," the writer has developed into a high-souled, self-effacing dreamer. But is it owing to a lack of art on the writer's part or to the natural skepticism of ruthless reviewers, that above the words of confident idealism there intrudes the thought, that he might have become a mere ne'er-do-well, soured, as are many, by isolation?

The episode of the officer's second coming produces a certain dissatisfaction; and disillusionment, temporary and necessary precursor of such buoyant optimism, is painted in far too vanishing colors. The elevation of spirit and manifest sincerity of this sketch are marked, but the proper artistic effect is marred by a tendency to a sermonizing style.

"In Remembrance," the first poem of the number, has much of the sweetness and pathos of old romance. It is a regrettable oversight of printer or proof-reader that marred the dainty motto by substituting "tempos" for "temporis," and if the verse "As in a mirage of dissolving charms" jars by its accentuation, it is straightway condoned by the grace of the closing stanza. "The Living" is a good example of didactic verse, with a forceful plea. "Let us," that long-suffering exhortation, is not overdone here, but it is well to have it excluded as completely as possible.

In "Edith" the genuine dignity of the sonnet-form and the general elevation of tone are so marked that the question raised by the seventh line is soon answered by the supposition of an evident omission and misprint, and dissatisfaction with the verse "Thou wert destined midst [better 'mid?] brilliant courts to shine" may be credited to a certain captiousness in readers.
and reviewers which makes it distasteful for them to be forced to think too closely of accents and tročhés and iams, despite even Shakespeare’s irregularities.

Sonnets and much serious verse we have had and now we would emphasize the good plea and good advice of the editorial in this Quill by asking if some one will not liven the Quill’s spring numbers with some lyrics of lighter vein, some ballade or rondeau. The Postman points out two pleasing selections of verse, the second of which suggests the fierce vigor of Henley without his lyric perfection. The titles of the best essays of the month might be of interest to the Postman’s readers and perhaps occasionally the quotation of some really striking paragraphs of prose.

DARTMOUTH, 5; BOWDOIN, 4

In an exceedingly heart-rending game to watch from the Bowdoin side, the Bowdoin team lost to Dartmouth at Hanover on May 1. Bowdoin led up to the last of the eighth, when a remarkable batting rally on the part of Dartmouth gave her five runs and the game. Bowdoin played fast ball, except in this inning, and Sparks pitched a nice game throughout. It was Dartmouth’s four clean hits that gave her the game more than any wildness on the part of the Bowdoin team. The batting of Bower was a feature of the game.

No scoring was done until the third when Bower reached third on a three-bagger and scored on a bunt by Lawrence. Bowdoin scored the remainder of her three runs in the fifth. Manter flied out. Sparks made a base hit. Harris struck out. Sparks stole second and Bower got another single, putting two on bases. Stanwood scored both these runs on a hard, clean hit between first and second. Stanwood then scored on a two-base hit of McDade. Files struck out. This stopped Bowdoin’s scoring for the game. Dartmouth made five runs in the eighth. Two errors by Bower and one by Sparks, aided by two singles and two two-base hits did the business.

THE DICKENS CARNIVAL

The Dickens Carnival proved to be one of the most successful amateur entertainments ever presented in Brunswick. About ten months ago the ladies of the Saturday Club decided to give a Dickens Carnival for the benefit of the Public Library. The matter was placed into the hands of a committee consisting of Mrs. Franklin C. Robinson, Mrs. Leslie A. Lee, Miss Abbie Martin, Miss Laura A. Hatch, Mrs. Byron Stevens, Mrs. William H. Macdonald and Miss Helen Varney. The committee decided to represent the following books: "Our Mutual Friend," "Bleak House," "Dombey and Son," "David Copperfield," "Barnaby Rudge," "Old Curiosity Shop," "Great Expectations," "Pickwick Papers," "Little Dorrit," "Martin Chuzzlewit," "Nicholas Nickleby," "Oliver Twist," "The Chimes," "Christmas Carol," and "The Cricket on the Hearth."

To give a faithful representation of these books, it was found that it would be necessary to get together two hundred characters, the largest amateur production ever attempted in the town of Brunswick. Dickens was not a writer of the twentieth century, and in order to give an exact reproduction of his characters the committee found that it was largely a question of costumes, but the Brunswick garrets and shed chambers yielded an unlimited store of antiquities, and the result was an array of hoopskirts, poke bonnets, tightly laced waists, and other paraphernalia of olden times that would have delighted the eye of Dickens himself.

The entertainment lasted for three hours during which time Brunswick people were introduced to some of the most famous characters in fiction. After the carnival a grand march was held, led by Professor Franklin C. Robinson and Mrs. Leslie A. Lee.

Among those characters worthy of especial mention was the Rev. Herbert A. Jump as Mr. Pickwick, Mrs. Byron Stevens as Mrs. S. C. Wyman, Professor W. T. Foster as Sergeant Buzfuz, Mr. Lewis H. Fox as Barnaby Rudge, and Mrs. F. C. Robinson as Mrs. Carney in Oliver Twist.

CORNELL DEBATE

The debate between Cornell and Bowdoin, to be given under the auspices of the Cornell Congress and the Bowdoin Debating Council will be held in Memorial Hall, Tuesday evening, May 14, at 8 o'clock. The question to be debated is as follows: That American Cities Should Seek the Solution of the Street Railway Problem in Private Ownership. The speakers for Bowdoin, who will have the affirmative are Redman, '07, Kimball, '07, and Hupper, '07. The Cornell speakers are: A. H. Winder, R. C. Edlund, and D. T. Smith.

Youngman, a graduate of the Harvard Law School, and coach of former Harvard Debating Teams; and the third judge will probably be a member of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology faculty. Debating Team

The victory of the Bowdoin Intercollegiate debating team over Syracuse on May 3, is the seventh debate in which the college has participated. Previous to nineteen hundred and five, debating was carried on at Bowdoin in a desultory fashion. No regular instruction was offered and the fact that any debates occurred was due to voluntary efforts on the part of those students most interested. Under even this spasmodic arrangement our intercollegiate debates met with results that were highly pleasing. These led to the establishing in nineteen hundred and five of a professorship in Argumentation. Since that time Bowdoin has fought for forensic honors with two colleges and with two universities. The debate at Syracuse marks her fourth consecutive victory.

In no line of college activity have we been so successful and in no line so eminently fortunate in the possession of men. The team that has for the past two years won such an enviable reputation for itself and the college has been recruited solely from the ranks of the Class of 1907, and the debate with Cornell on May 14th will mark the close of its labors. In debating as in all other college activities, there is a crying need for men. A glance into the future shows us that the team which will debate Syracuse next year (according to the two-year agreement) must be made up of men whose experience has been limited to class-room debates. From this it is apparent that to maintain the pace that has already been set there is need of new men, men with natural ability and a willingness for hard work. Such men have also been in Bowdoin, and we trust we will come up to the occasion next year.

Training

The Maine meet comes a week from to-morrow, and four perhaps five more championship ball games are on the schedule. It is not till now that most of the students wake up to the need of hard, conscientious training. A man to be in condition to run a race, must faithfully train, must not smoke, must be careful about what he eats, and must get eight full hours of sleep. Every man who comes out for any varsity team, by so doing signifies his intention to try to do something for the college, and any man who tries to do something for Bowdoin should try to do his best, which in this case he can do only by training. This word of warning comes late, for only one week of training is possible before the Maine meet. But this word for training is needed and a recent event has almost forced the college paper to make some comment on it.

Training should mean that every man while he is trying to be a varsity man, should not go to functions whether dances or razoons, that will keep him up after half-past ten. It is less than two weeks ago that several Sophomores did attend one of these functions, went for two or three miles over country roads, ran through some woods, and did not get back to the campus until two o'clock in the morning, to say nothing of the Freshmen who accompanied them. As it happened no one was injured, but the chance of injury was run with some of Bowdoin's track honors at stake, and as it was, for the following two days, most of the Sophomore and some of the Freshman track candidates were lifeless on the field. In Amherst this spring, a Senior who played on the Varsity ball team was thrown off the team because he neglected his training and stayed out late at a dance. At Amherst they could afford to lose him and put another man in his place, but here we can afford to lose no one, we can make no examples of the men who do wrong, our only solution of the problem lies in everyone doing right.

DR. ABBOTT AT CHAPEL

Dr. Lyman Abbott, editor of the Outlook, New York City, and the second of the Bowdoin College Preachers, gave a short and interesting talk in chapel last Sunday.

In part he said: Self sacrifice is not the reluctant giving up of petty pleasures and amusements for gain, but a voluntary giving up of great things for the benefit of humanity.

General Armstrong after the termination of our Civil War, immediately set about to encourage and promote the education of the Southern negro; a gigantic task and after untiring and persistent work, followed by success, these words were found in his diary, "I have never known self-sacrifice," showing that from his great interest in his work to help others, he never thought of self-sacrifice on his part. That was true self-sacrifice for it was an unknown self-sacrifice. Dr. Grenfel in his efforts to aid the people of Labrador, said to me one day, "I need no pity, I incur no self-sacrifice and besides I'm the only doctor there." Here's a man taking so much interest in his charitable work, that never a thought that he was sacrificing himself ever occurred to him. But this is true self-sacrifice.

When the students leave college they shouldn't seek to obtain both manliness and success, but if manliness alone is sought, success will inevitably follow.

DR. ABBOTT'S QUESTIONNAIRE

A number of students took advantage of the opportunity to meet Dr. Lyman Abbott informally at a questionnaire held in the Christian Association rooms Sunday evening. He first answered those questions which pertained to religion. Dr. Abbott believes that the life of God is expressed in the soul of man, that the kindness of man is a reflection of the kindness of God, that the love of man is a reflection of the love of God. He believes that a young man should associate himself with that church in which he can do the most good and from which he can get the most good.

Of the professions Dr. Abbott spoke especially of the law. No country affords better opportunities for the study of law than the United States. He thinks a post-graduate course in one of our universities preferable to that offered in any of the foreign countries.

Dr. Abbott said that there is always an opening either in the country or city for a young man with health, energy, intelligence, and good morals.

Those who attended the dance of the Sigma Lambda Nu fraternity of Lewiston High School last Friday evening, were Crowell, ’10, Weston, ’10, Wandtke, ’10, Atwood, ’10; Hanson, ’10, and Hall, Medic.

Last Tuesday afternoon the Kappa Sigma ball team played two games. In the first the Alpha Sigma team of Brunswick won from them by a score of 8-6, and in second the Medics won in a five-inning game by a score of 14-1.

The Class of 1887 is beginning to get together to try for the graduates’ cup at Commencement. Clarence B. Burleigh of Augusta, who is secretary of the class, is to hold a little reunion of the Maine members of his class here on next Sunday.

There has been some rumor of the Tennis Association intending to build a college tennis court this spring. The Association, however, will be unable to do so because of lack of funds, the Athletic Council being willing to only loan the needed money.

Charles Poole Cleaves, ’05, a former member of the Bowdoin Quill Board, and now a Unitarian minister, also the erstwhile author of “A Case of Sardines,” had a story called “The Lost Bargain” in the May number of the Black Cat Magazine.

Sawyer, who played for Hebron in the game against the second team, Wednesday, is a brother of Sawyer, ’07, and will enter college in 1908. Men from the team who will enter Bowdoin next year are Caldwell, Captain; McFarland, Upton, Wilson and Keogh.

Last week the examining committee of the Trustees and Overseers of the College were here. The visitors were Gen. Joshua L. Chamberlain, of Brunswick; John A. Morrill, Esq., of Auburn; Rev Charles C. Torrey, of Yale College, and Charles T. Hawes, Esq., of Bangor.

FACULTY NOTES

Professor Sills has been ill for some days with the mumps.

One of the Bowdoin professors received a letter from Germany addressed to the Herr Professor Doctor—Bodowin, and the Medicinal School of Maine.

To-day Prof. Files will go to Boston to attend the meeting of the New England College Entrance Certificate Board. The next day, Saturday, he will be present at the meeting of the New England Modern Language Association.

BOWDOIN WINS FIRST CHAMPIONSHIP GAME

Last Wednesday afternoon, Bowdoin beat Colby at Waterville by a score of 4 to 3 in ten innings. This is Bowdoin’s first championship game and gives her a good start. A bonfire was built in front of the chapel to celebrate the victory. On the same afternoon Bates beat University of Maine at Orono by a score of 4 to 3, and Hebron Academy beat Bowdoin second on Whittier Field by a score of 7 to 5.

BOWDOIN MEN IN HARTFORD, CONN.

There is getting to be quite a little colony of Bowdoin men in the city of Hartford. Rev. Edward P. Parker, D.D., ’90, and Dr. Phineas H. Ingalls, ’77, have long been counted among the first citizens of the city, and within a few years Geo. B. Chandler, ’90, Jas. E. Rhodes, ’97, Dr. W. H. Smith, ’99, Dr. Henry A. Martelle, ’01, James B. Perkins, ’03, and Frank Day, ’05, have located there. Dr. Parker is the oldest pastor of the city and has been the beloved head of the Second Congregational Church of Hartford for 47 years. He was given a D.D. by Yale in 1874 and has for many years been on the governing boards of Yale. Dr. Parker delivered the address of Bowdoin when Hubbard Hall was dedicated two years ago. Dr. Ingalls is in the front rank of Hartford medical men where he has practiced for 25 years. He has also been an officer of the Connecticut National Guard, serving as brigade inspector. Mr. Chandler has recently moved to Hartford from Chicago where he was long with Gimn & Co. Mr. Rhodes is in the law department of the Travellers’ Insurance Company. Dr. Smith is superintendent of the Hartford Hospital.

CLASS OF 1893
J. W. Lambert has been chosen by the school committee to fill the position of principal of the Bar Harbor High School, left vacant by the resignation of Fred H. Cowan, ’01. Mr. Andrews is the first of the score of young Bowdoin men in the employ of the International Banking Corporation to leave its employ.

THE HANDICAP MEET

Last Monday a handicap meet was held on Whittier Field in a drizzling rain. The results were not phenomenal, but were satisfactory and we have every reason to be encouraged by them. There are now in college, not counting Shorey, only ten of last year’s points in the Maine meet. This means new men are needed and the work done by new men last Monday was the most encouraging feature. Several large handicaps were given which made all the finishes close. The results were as follows:

100-Yard Dash, First Heat—Smith, ’09, handicap 5 yards, first; Atwood, ’09, scratch, second; Stetson, ’08, handicap, 6 yards. Time—10.3. Second Heat—Bass, ’07, handicap 13 yards; first; Scates, ’09, handi-

BOWDOIN WINS CORNELL DEBATE

Last Tuesday Bowdoin won its debate with the team representing the Cornell Debating Congress, and recorded its fifth consecutive debating victory. The debate was awarded to Bowdoin by a unanimous vote of the judges, but the debate was a close one, it being extremely difficult to pick the winner until the last rebuttal speech was made, and even then many doubted whether Bowdoin would win. The debate was well worth winning, for though the Cornell team was not the 'varsity team, it was a team of good debaters, and might be styled the second 'varsity since two of the men were 'varsity alternates. The feeling was all of the most friendly type and it is hoped relations with Cornell may be continued.

Governor William T. Cobb presided over the debate, introducing the speakers as their turns came.

The question for debate was Resolved, That American Cities Should Seek the Solution of the Street Railroad Problem in Private Ownership. Bowdoin had the affirmative, and was represented by F. J. Redman, '07; Phillips Kimball, '07; and Roscoe H. Hupper, '07, with William M. Harris, '09, as alternate; while the Cornell team which defended the negative was composed of A. Heber Winder, '08; Roscoe C. Edlund, '09; and David T. Smith, '08, with H. T. Kent, Jr., '08, as alternate. Mr. Kent, however, did not accompany the team to Brunswick.

Mr. Redman opened the debate for the affirmative by showing that municipal ownership of street railways, which nowhere exists in the United States, would result in much complication because of the interurban car lines, in greater expenditure to the cities than is possible with their present debt limits, and in corruption since our cities are now corrupt would not be rendered less so by the entrustment to them of a new important business enterprise.

Mr. Winder, the first speaker for the negative, pointed out as evils of the system of private ownership, corruption of city politics, over-capitalization, high fares, and poor service. He showed that the system of private ownership was the result of inertia allowing things to move along the course of least resistance and not the result of thoughtful planning and statesmanship. He also pointed out that the problem of ownership of street railroads is absolutely local and should be decided by each city.

Mr. Kimball, the second speaker for the affirmative, showed that municipal ownership would result in poorer service and greater expense using an illustration supposed conditions in New York under municipal ownership.

Mr. Edlund, who was the next speaker for the negative, attempted to refute the arguments in favor of the regulation of street railroads as private enterprises since this would have to be the solution of the problem with private ownership. He also proposed and supported the theory of municipal ownership and operation.

Mr. Hupper devoted the entire of his main speech to rebutting the arguments of the first two speakers on the negative. His speaking was extremely effective and refuted most of their arguments, especially those in regard to the municipal corruption, over-capitalization, and high fares resulting from private ownership. He refuted the arguments in regard to municipal regulation and control by quoting examples of the same from Massachusetts and showing that the methods of Massachusetts were applicable to all United States cities.

Mr. Smith, the last speaker for the negative, claimed that municipal ownership is superior to private ownership, because under private ownership roads are run entirely for profit, and under municipal ownership entirely for public service. He proposed and defended the theory of municipal ownership with private operation. The order of speaking in rebuttal was Edlund, Redman, Winder, Kimball, Smith, and Hupper. All the rebuttal speeches were good, but it was here probably that Bowdoin won the debate, Mr. Hupper's rebuttal speech being very exceptionally good.

The judges, who, after considerable discussion, unanimously gave the debate to Bowdoin, were: Professor Bruce Wyman, of the Har-
BOWDOIN ORIENT

BOWDOIN, 5; BATES, 2

The decisive winning of the game with Bates on Whittier Field on last Monday gave Bowdoin three straight victories for the state championship. The game was a fine exhibition of baseball, Bowdoin having no errors recorded against her. Bowdoin's fine batting won the game. Bates took the lead in the first inning. Bridges got a base on balls, Wight sacrificed advancing him a base. Wilder hit safely, scoring Bridges, and Rogers made a two-bagger that scored Wilder. This was all the scoring Bates did.

For Bowdoin Manter scored in the second on two hits and a passed ball. In the third G. Bower scored on a hit, a sacrifice by McDade, and a hit by Files.

It was Stanwood's fine two-base hit that was the great sensational play of the game when he scored Abbott and G. Bower in the fifth and clinched the game. Bowdoin added another run in the seventh.

The fine backing up on the part of Abbott was a feature of the game, when by his handling of Stanwood's poor throw to third base he succeeded in cutting the Bates winner off at the plate.

MAINE FORFEITED TO BOWDOIN

The baseball game scheduled for University of Maine to be played at Brunswick last Saturday, was forfeited to Bowdoin as the U. of M. failed to appear with a complete team. Owing to a missing of the train by five of the Maine team only seven arrived in Brunswick. It was a source of regret to both managers that the game had to go in this way, but it really was the only possible course as the Bowdoin schedule is complete from now on and it was found absolutely impossible to add another game. In fact, Bowdoin has had to give up playing a postponed game with Tufts owing to the fact that the faculty would not grant another date. After the declaring of the championship as a nine to nothing victory for Bowdoin, Maine accepted two Bowdoin players and an exhibition game was played. This resulted in a victory for Bowdoin, two to one. The game was well played on both sides. Files pitched for Bowdoin and Dow for Maine. The summary:

COLLEGE COMMONS

The question of the advisability of having a College Commons or dining room where all the undergraduates of Bowdoin may eat together has been discussed at some length by both the faculty and the student body during the last few years. Undergraduates have generally hailed it as a new idea and will doubtless be surprised to learn that from 1829 to 1834 students of Bowdoin College ate at a College Common. Without attempting to discuss the advantages or disadvantages of reviving this custom the ORIENT wishes to present the facts taken from the college records which show that the idea was once tried here at the request of the students and that it was a failure.

Upon the records on file at the Treasurer’s office appear the following:

Sept. 5, 1826.—Voted to erect a building to be used as a College Commons or Eating Club for the students, and to apply to the state legislature for financial aid.

Sept. 2, 1829.—Voted that Joseph H. McKeen act as a committee to procure or erect a suitable building for a College Commons, $1,750 to be appropriated for same.

Sept. 1832.—Voted that the trustees pay $169.00 to College Commons, the same being in payment for the Commencement Dinner.

Sept. 1834.—Voted that the sum of $120.00 be payed to Joseph H. McKeen in full for claim on the college for losses on account of College Commons.

Sept. 1849.—Voted that for the next course of medical lectures the Commons Hall be used as a lecture room, unless required by the faculty of the college for a Commons.

The hall referred to as Commons Hall, is the low brick building on Bath Street, now used as the carpenter’s work shop.

MASS-MEETING TO-NIGHT AT SEVEN

To-night will be held a mass-meeting to organize Bowdoin spirit for to-morrow’s meet. We have enrolled in the catalog 288 students, of these 288 should go to Memorial Hall to-night, and 288 take the 8.03 train for Waterville to-morrow.

BOWDOIN BULLETIN

The statistics of the incomes and expenditures of Bowdoin men collected by Professor Foster a few weeks ago have been put in book form along with some interesting reading matter and will be ready for distribution in a short time in the form of a Bulletin.

The Bulletin contains, not merely suppositions to show how a man might work his way through college, but facts and figures which show that during the years 1906-07, 167 Bowdoin students earned a total sum of $37,799.39, or an average of $225 per man. The Bulletin contains a table showing the income men have had from special sources; the possibilities for work at the college; a table of necessary college expenses; an average expense account compiled from the statistics handed in to Prof. Foster; a discussion on the questions, "Must a Self-Sustaining Student Fall Below in Scholarship?" "Is the Self-Supporting Student in Danger of Losing the Best of College Life?" "Is the Man Who Works His Way in Danger of Injuring His Health?" and "Does the Student Who is Working His Way Lose Social Standing?"

If there exists in the mind of anyone a doubt that Bowdoin is a democratic college, that doubt should be quickly dispelled by a glance at the Bulletin. He will be more than ever convinced that money does not give a college man standing among his fellows, but only elements of character and qualities of head and heart can give him true distinction in the college world.

DEBATING COUNCIL DINNER

The annual banquet of the Bowdoin Debating Council will be held at Riverton Park Saturday evening, June first. After dinner speeches will be made by all the members, F. J. Redman, '07, being toastmaster. The invited guests will be Judge William L. Putnam, '55; Dr. Edward Stanwood, '61; Hon. Herbert M. Heath, '72; Professor Henry L. Chapman, '66, and Professor W. B. Mitchell, '90. At this banquet gold medals will be presented to Redman, Snow, Hupper and Roberts, the members of the debating team which defeated Syracuse University, and medals will be presented to the Cornell team.
thing more is necessary. During the last few years, the general departments have been receiving constant additions, but the science departments have remained the same. In view of the modern demand for scientific work and the fact of the large number of men who are taking these courses, this is hardly the policy to continue. We might add to what is said in the article referred to, that the college has excellent facilities now for conducting work in drawing. The large room originally intended for mineralogy on the third floor of the Science Building offers a fine chance for such work. The Orient hopes that an opportunity for broadening the curriculum along these lines will be offered and in behalf of the student body most heartily unites with the Bowdoin Club in its petition to the Governing Boards. This is just what we want and need.

Christian Association Policy

Now that there really is a Christian Association in Bowdoin it has before it an extremely important question of policy. This is whether it shall affiliate with the national organization of the Young Men's Christian Association, so becoming a chapter in the national fraternity bound to obey the rules of the national body, or shall continue as it has started, sever connections with the national organization, adopt a new constitution and become as strong as possible as a local society.

The conditions are as follows: By the constitution and practice of the Y. M. C. A. only persons who are members in good standing of an Evangelical Church, shall be eligible for active membership, and the holding of office. Any other man of good moral character may become an associate member and enjoy all the privileges of active membership except those of voting and holding office. During the last two years this important section of the Y. M. C. A. constitution has been disregarded at Bowdoin without making any break with the national organization, with the result, however, that all the men who held office last year and who will hold office next year do not happen to be members of evangelical churches.

To those especially interested in the work of the Association, it has seemed that here as at Amherst, most good can be done by an Association in which membership shall be open to all students, and which honestly tries to help the religious side of the college. There are many opportunities for the Association to do good, and the officers want the Association to

Scientific Work at Bowdoin

We are very glad to publish this week the item from the Bowdoin Club in Boston in regard to the discussion recently held at a meeting of that club on the subject of "Bowdoin's Immediate Future." And particularly pleased are we to note that some of the friends of the college are coming to realize the necessity for more scientific work in the curriculum and that a beginning at least has been made that will look towards this end. This is not the first time that the Orient has called attention to the need of courses in mechanical and perspective drawing and more emphasis along all scientific lines. It may not be possible now to establish a complete engineering course, but certainly opportunity should be given so that students desiring a scientific course may get enough preparation here that they may receive a diploma from M. I. T. or other scientific schools in two years, and not in three or four as is now the case. Our opportunities for work in Mathematics, Physics and Chemistry are excellent but some-do this in the best possible way. With this in view several of the officers have to-day gone to the Y. M. C. A. State Convention at Augusta to learn what the attitude of the National Organization will be to us if we break away, or what arguments they have to offer in favor of our remaining affiliated with them.

Whether or not the Bowdoin College Christian Association keeps her old constitution or adopts a new one, the Northfield Conference is open to every Bowdoin man, and the Christian Association is trying to get a good number of Bowdoin men to attend it this summer. It lasts from June 28 to July 7, and is something worth the while of every college man's attending at least once during his college course. It is a unique way of meeting of men of honest purpose who are to make up with us a generation that will soon represent what is called the United States. A longer account of the conference appears in another part of this issue.

Everybody Out!

McMichael, '07, was at his home in Boston a few days last week.
Trials for the men who are to go to Waterville to-morrow were held Tuesday.
Hon. George E. Weeks of Fairfield was the guest of his son, Weeks, '10, last week.
Fisher and Marston of the Lewiston High Debating Team attended the Cornell Debate, Tuesday evening.
The tennis teams which came to the Interscholastic Tournament were entertained by the several men who are trying for assistant manager.

The trial competition for the Alexander Prize Speaking took place to-day before a committee composed of Professors Mitchell, Hutchins and Foster.
C. E. Stetson, '07, has gone to Fryeburg Academy where he will teach Chemistry for the remainder of the year. Stetson will take the place of Henderson, '05, who has gone to Mexico.
A curious coincidence is the fact that in six ball games this year Bowdoin has been scored on in the opening inning, and in four of them the opposing team has scored two runs.
The reading of the commencement parts took place yesterday evening in Banister Hall and more will be read to-night. The committee to judge them were Professor Sills, Moody and Woodruff.
Manter and Robinson stayed home from the trip to Wesleyan and Tufts on account of the Track Meet. The team was in charge of Allen, '07, who made the same trip last fall with the football team.
Rev. Mr. Hull of the Class of '07 is asked to preach the annual sermon at the North Cumberland County Conference of Congregational Ministers and Churches which convenes at New Gloucester June 11-12.
Word has been received from no less an authority than a recent graduate that the engagement of Mr. E. H. MacMichael, '07, is to be announced this spring. The Orient takes great pleasure in publishing this notice.
According to the Chicago Tribune, there were eleven killed and one hundred and four injured in football last fall, which is a marked decrease from the year previous when eighteen were killed and one hundred and fifty-nine injured.
On April 28, Rev. Mr. Hull of the Class of '07, preached in one of the larger Congregational churches in the suburbs of New York City. He preached there again May 12, and is considering settling there, and taking graduate work under Brander Matthews, and Dr. Lawrence, who is a Bowdoin man of the Class of 1898, in Columbia University, with the view of M.A. degree.

TRACK MEET TO-MORROW at Waterville

At a Freshman Class meeting Tuesday, Frank E. McGlone was chosen Toastmaster and Warren E. Robinson, Historian. The committees were as follows: Banquet Committee, Crosby, McLaughlin, Dugan, Cane Committee, Atwood, Mikelsky, Lander; Ode Committee, Hale, Edwards, Stephens.
Professor Hugh Black of Union Seminary, New York, will be the college preacher next Sunday.
Professor Black is only thirty-nine years old, was graduated from Glasgow University, Scotland, held pastorate in Scotland until a year ago, when he came to this side as a special preacher to the colleges of the United States. His volumes on “Friendship” and “Work” are very popular.

FACULTY NOTES

Dr. Whittier was in Washington over Sunday. He attended there a meeting of Pathologists and Bacteriologists.
Professor Lee has been invited to lecture before the Appalachian Mountain Club of Boston next month. He will lecture on a trip he took last summer to Mt. Katahdin.
Professor Ham visited Lincoln Academy on Thursday—that being the Bowdoin Preparatory School assigned to him.
Professor Sills attended the Episcopal Convention held at Portland, Wednesday.
Professor Burnett last Thursday and Friday attended the annual convention of registrars of the New England Colleges, held at Wesleyan College, Middletown, Conn.

NORTHFIELD CONFERENCE

The twenty-second annual conference of men from the Eastern and Canadian colleges held under the auspices of the International Committee of Young Men’s Christian Associations will meet this year at East Northfield, Massachusetts, from June 28 to July 7. At this conference, which is held in one of the most beautiful sections of New England, six or seven hundred men will represent almost every college and university in the East.
The conference meetings consist of Bible classes, mission classes, classes to study immigration or social problems, a general convocation in the morning and again in the evening to hear some one speak on the problems which are confronting the present generation all over the world. Among the leaders of the religious classes are Professor Lucius H. Miller of Princeton, Rev. H. E. Posdick of Montclair, N. Matthews, Professor Henry B. Wright of Yale, and Professor Henry T. Fowler of Brown. Besides these, the most prominent speakers for the general convocations will be Rev. William Lawrence, Bishop

Every afternoon will be entirely free from conferences and will be devoted to athletic sports, or whatever the delegates wish. A series of baseball games is played for the college championship, over a hundred men usually enter the tennis tournament, and every one else has an opportunity for exercise and enjoyment in swimming, playing golf, taking part in the Fourth of July athletic meet or walking through the surrounding country. No one is required to attend any meetings or conferences unless he so chooses, and there are many enjoyable features of the conferences such as receptions, fraternity dinners, and serenades that cannot be dwelt on here.

The conference is open to everyone whether a member or not of the Christian Association, and it affords an opportunity for a pleasant and very profitable week obtainable in no other way. The expenses are as follows: Registration fee, $5 for ten days, or 60 cents a day; board and lodging in the Northfield Seminary building $12 for the ten days, or board alone costs $9, it being possible to hire tents for four people at prices varying from $4 to $10 for the whole tent, according to its furnishings. The railroads usually grant a one and one-third fare for the round trip, which therefore would not cost more than $8.

It has been some time since Bowdoin has had more than a single representative at the conference, and this year she should make a better showing. Already four or five men are sure of going, but more should take advantage of the opportunity. Further information can be obtained from J. F. Morrison, '08, or the members of the Northfield committee, L. Adams, '08, A. L. Robinson, '08, and L. F. Timberlake, '09, who can obtain pamphlets in regard to the Conference. All registration fees must be received at Northfield before June 22, and all applications for tents before June 15.

BOWDOIN ALUMNI SING ESPERANTO

At the January meeting of the "Bowdoin Club," of Boston, Doctor D. O. S. Lowell (Bowdoin, '73), delivered by request an address on Esperanto. Dr. Lowell is the vice-president of the Boston Esperanto Society, and instructor in Esperanto at the Roxbury Latin School. He took up such points as the need of an international language, the kind of one needed, whether Esperanto met this need, the structure of the language itself, read, recited and distributed specimens of the literature, and as a climax a chorus of the members present, led by the doctor himself, sang in lusty Esperanto an old Bowdoin song which he had hastily translated. We give the first stanza:

"68 WAR SONG"

(Air, "Tramp, tramp, tramp")

When the bonny moon is seen
Glinting down on Bowdoin green,
And the little stars are twinkling in the sky,
When the dusky shadows fall
Round the North of Winthrop Hall,
Then we'll muster '68 to do or die.

Alumni Notes

Charles Edward Clifford, Esq., one of the few surviving members of the Class of 1847, died at his home in West Falmouth, Maine, April 20, 1907, at the age of seventy-eight. Mr. Clifford, the eldest son of Hon. Nathan Clifford, Justice of the U. S. Supreme Court, and Hannah Ayer, daughter of Capt. James Ayer, was born 2 Nov., 1828, at Newfield, Me. He received his early education in his native town, but was prepared for college at the North Yarmouth Academy. His course at Bowdoin was interrupted in his Sophomore year, because he was supposed to be engaged in certain undergraduate mischief, and he continued his studies at Harvard where he graduated in 1850. It subsequently became known that he was innocent of the offense and in acknowledgment of the injustice done him many years before, a degree with his Bowdoin class was voted him in 1902. After graduation he studied law with his father, was admitted to the bar, and practiced his profession at Portland, being associated for a time with his younger brother, Hon. William Henry Clifford. He served as United States Commissioner from 1878 to 1896, and won a reputation for eminent fairness and a judicial mind. He gave up all professional practice in 1896 and lived an out-door life at his West Falmouth home where he had resided for several years before.

In politics he belonged to the Democratic party, though at the time of the Greenback movement he was a prominent supporter of Governor Piaisted. In religion he was a Unitarian and a regular attendant at the First Parish Church when in the city. Of a singularly retiring disposition, he was characterized by great force and earnestness when his convictions were aroused. He was a strong man, a safe counselor, a modern example of Puritan virtues.

Mr. Clifford married Antoinette Ellis Ayer who survives him with two sons and one daughter.

MAY MEETING OF BOWDOIN CLUB OF BOSTON

The last meeting and dinner of this club for the present season was held at the University Club, May 4th. Austin Cary, 87, Professor of Forestry at Harvard, and Alfred E. Burton, '78, Dean of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, spoke on "Bowdoin's Immediate Future." The advisability of strengthening the college curriculum on the side of practical mathematical work, so that better preparation could be gained for subsequent professional work in engineering and technical schools was the subject chiefly discussed. It appears that the engagement of a single instructor competent to teach mechanical drawing, descriptive geometry and practical surveying, would make it possible for graduates of the college who had elected those courses in addition to the chemistry physics and mathematics now offered, to take the degrees of any of the technical schools of the country in two years instead of three or four as at present. These opportunities are offered at many other colleges and there is no doubt that their establishment in the Bowdoin curriculum would attract to the college a good many men who go elsewhere under present conditions. The discussion was general and it was voted to present the matter through a committee to the governing boards of the college. Thirty-five were present, including Professor Chapman from the college.

SPRING FOOTBALL PRACTICE

Ross McClave, as next year's football coach, has sent word that Bowdoin must have regular spring football practice to turn out the team he wants next fall. From now on every afternoon, Capt. Crowley will be on the Delta, and spring football practice will be carried on after about four o'clock. The work will be principally in getting form for kicking and in handling the ball. Every man who intends to try for the team next fall should get football shoes and whatever else may be necessary from Assistant Manager Simmons and turn out on the Delta every day.

PRIZES FOR ECONOMIC ESSAYS

FOURTH YEAR

In order to arouse an interest in the study of topics relating to commerce and industry, and to stimulate an examination of the value of college training for business men, a committee composed of Professor J. Laurence Laughlin, University of Chicago, Chairman; Professor J. B. Clark, Columbia University; Professor Henry C. Adams, University of Michigan; Horace White, Esq., New York City, and Hon. Carroll D. Wright, Clark College, have been enabled, through the generosity of Messrs. Hart, Schaffner and Marx, of Chicago, to offer again in 1908 four prizes for the best studies on any one of the following subjects:

1. An Examination into the Economic Causes of Large Fortunes in this Country.
2. The History of One Selected Railway System in the United States.
3. The Untouched Agricultural Resources of North America.
4. Resumption of Specie Payments in 1879.
6. The Case against Socialism.*
7. Causes of the Rise of Prices since 1898.

*Other phases of Socialism were suggested in previous years.

8. Should Inequalities of Wealth Be Regulated by a Progressive Income Tax?
10. The causes of the recent Rise in the Price of Silver.

A First Prize of One Thousand Dollars, and a Second Prize of Five Hundred Dollars, in Cash, are offered for the best studies presented by Class A, composed exclusively of all persons who have received the bachelor's degree from an American college in 1896, or thereafter; and a First Prize of Three Hundred Dollars, and a Second Prize of One Hundred and Fifty Dollars, in Cash, are offered for the best studies presented by Class B, composed of persons who, at the time the papers are sent in, are undergraduates of any American college. No one in Class A may compete in Class B; but any one in Class B may compete in Class A. The Committee reserves to itself the right to award the two prizes of $1,000 and $500 to undergraduates, if the merits of the papers demand it.

The ownership of the copyright of successful studies will vest in the donors, and it is expected that, without precluding the use of these papers as theses for higher degrees, they will cause them to be issued in some permanent form.

Competitors are advised that the studies should be thorough, expressed in good English, and although not limited as to length, they should not be needlessly expanded. They should be inscribed with an assumed name and whether in Class A, or Class B, the year when the bachelor's degree was or is likely to be received, and accompanied by a sealed envelope giving the real name and address of the competitor, and the institution which conferred the degree, or in which he is studying. The papers should be sent on or before June 1, 1908, to J. Laurence Laughlin, Esq., University of Chicago, Chicago, Illinois.

ART BUILDING NOTES

Professor Hutchins has been working this week in the Art Building to get photographs of the paintings of the two Walker sisters of the portrait of Sir Joshua Reynolds, and of the Titian Drawings. From time to time Prof. Hutchins makes photographs of the paintings to add to the collection which the college keeps.

The Art Building has received as a gift from George Ahearn, Esq., of New York, a copy of the catalog of his large and valuable collection of paintings, very recently given to the Metropolitan Museum of New York. It is a catalog illustrating each picture, there being also a short descriptive notice of the artists whose work is represented. Such an example of munificent support of artistic interests in the United States goes far to offset the frequent assertion of foreign critics that this is the land of the dollar only.

MAINE INTERCOLLEGIATE TRACK MEET

The thirteenth annual track meet held by the four Maine colleges at Waterville last Saturday was the closest that has ever been held. The score at the end was as follows: University of Maine, 46 1/2; Bowdoin, 45 1/2; Bates, 23; and Colby, 11. The result was uncertain until the last event had taken place, though for a long while it looked as if U. of M. was going to have it in a walk. From start to finish the contest was really between Maine and Bowdoin and when all but the pole-vault and the broad-jump had taken place Maine had 46 points, while Bowdoin had 28. Of the eighteen points needed to tie the score Bowdoin got seventeen and a half.

Of course it is hard to lose the meet after coming so near to winning it, but every man went into it for all there was in him and it was a good, fair meet with entirely impartial officials. In so far as chance played a part in deciding the contest, Bowdoin did not seem to be much favored, especially in the arrangement of the men in the trial heats. As usual there are a lot of "ifs" which might have changed the result, but we should give the team credit for doing their best and make up our minds to win the meet here in Brunswick next year. The team was well supported and after the meet was over the Bowdoin aggregation showed that we can be good losers as well as winners.

It was a surprise to many to learn that in the trial heats of the 220-yard dash and the low and high hurdles only the winners qualified for the final heats, which came hard on us, since all four seconds in the 220 were Bowdoin men. Only first and second men qualified in the quarter-mile. Both of these arrangements are directly contrary to the rules of the N. E. I. A. A. which requires one heat for second men and three men to qualify in the quarter.

The mile was run in very fast time, the record being reduced from 4 min. 43 2-5 sec. to 4 min. 38 4-5 sec. Fortier of Maine was first, Colbath of Bowdoin, second, and Hick of Maine, third.

The quarter-mile was won by Wyman of Maine; St. Onge of Maine was second; Chandler of Colby, third. Time, 53 1-5 seconds.

The 100-yard dash was won by Atwood of Bowdoin in 10 2-5 seconds with Williams of Bates second, and Trask of Colby, third.

The 120-yard hurdles were won by Knight of Maine; Fraser of Bates, second; F. T. Smith of Bowdoin, third. Time, 16 3-5 seconds.

The half-mile was won by Irish of Bates; Bates of Maine, second; Knowlton of Maine, third. Time, 2 minutes, 6 1-5 seconds.

The 220-yard dash was won by Wyman of Maine; Williams of Bates, second; Trask of Colby, third. Time, 23 2-5 seconds.

The two-mile was another record-breaking event. It was won by Bosworth of Bates in 10 minutes, 18 4-5 seconds. Capt. Robinson of Bowdoin was second. He had not been feeling as well as usual on account of a cough he had last winter, but he led the race till the very last. Dyer of Maine was third.

The 220-yard hurdles were won by Knight of Maine; Clayton of Maine, second; Fraser of Bates, third. Time, 26 4-5 seconds.

In the field events Bowdoin won points in everything but the discus.

The running high jump was won by Meserve of Maine; Pennell of Bowdoin, second; Higgins of Maine, third. Height, 5 ft. 6 in.

The discus was won by Tribou of Colby; Hetherington of Colby second; Schumacher of Bates, third. Distance, 106 ft. 6 3-4 in.

The running broad jump was won easily by Atwood of Bowdoin with Morrill of Bowdoin second. Bass of Bowdoin, and Knowlton of Maine, tied for third place. Distance, 21 feet.

Warren of Bowdoin won the hammer-throw with Morrill second and French of Bates, third. Distance, 114 ft. 9 1/2 inches.

In the pole-vault Winchell, Burton and Deming, all of Bowdoin, tied for first place at 9 feet, 8 inches.

The shot-put was won by Morrill of Bow-
Bowdoin; Farwell of Maine second; Schumacher of Bates, third. Distance—39 feet 9 inches. In a try for a record Morrill put the shot 40 ft. 3 inches, falling short of the Maine State record by 4½ inches.

Bowdoin, 9; Tufts, 7

Bowdoin won a victory from Tufts at Tufts’ oval, on Thursday, May 16. The game was rather loosely played on both sides. Bowdoin had the game won a number of times and then threw it away, but finally succeeded in clinching it in the tenth inning. The batting was heavy on both sides, but Bowdoin exceeded having fifteen hits to her credit. The error column shows seven for Bowdoin and four for Tufts.

In the first inning Bowdoin scored one run on a single by McDade followed by another hit by Stanwood. In the first of the second Bowdoin added two more runs. Lawrence reached first on a hit, and Claude Bower on an error, these two were then scored on a hit by Harris. Tufts secured her first runs in the last of this inning when two hits netted her two scores. Tufts added another run in the third. The score remained tied until the last of the sixth. Sparks passed Ropes, and then Gallagher reached first on an error. These two men scored on a hit by Boyd. Bowdoin added three runs in the first of the seventh, and then Tufts added two more in her half. In the last of the eighth it looked as though Tufts would secure the game when Atwood, the Tufts runner, ran home with two men out, but he failed to touch third base and so was out. Bowdoin tied the score in the ninth, and then added two more in her half of the tenth on three hits by Lawrence, Claude Bower and Harris.

Bowdoin, 2; Wesleyan, 7

Wesleyan defeated Bowdoin in a slow and uninteresting game at Middletown on May 15. Bowdoin played loosely at times, and batted very poorly. Bowdoin’s four costly errors helped Wesleyan add to her runs while Wesleyan made only two errors. Bowdoin made one run in the third and one in the fourth, while Wesleyan scored three runs in the third, two in the fifth and one each in the seventh and eighth. McCathran proved effective in the box for Wesleyan. Files pitched well for Bowdoin. The summary:

DR. BLACK AT CHAPEL

Faith was the theme of Dr. Black's address at Sunday chapel. He said in part: Faith is the core of religion. It was upon Faith that Christ founded his religion and by faith he caused it to be diffused into all parts of the world. By the use of the word "Faith" God meant the apprehension of the reality of the spiritual world. It is difficult at times to preserve this apprehension. One of the best examples that we have of it is Wordsworth in the "Ode on the Intimations of Immortality," which well suggests the absolute supremacy of Christ. Jesus lived so that he was ever in that world of faith. It became his point of view, and his first object was to seek the spiritual world. We, on the other hand, drift away from this standpoint because of our regard for external things. If to-day we possessed full faith, all problems that confront us could easily be solved, for all problems on earth are at the bottom religious problems.

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

Last Friday two members of the Christian Association cabinet and two other regular members represented Bowdoin at the State Y. M. C. A. Convention at Augusta. On Friday evening after the banquet, a conference was arranged with Mr. Clayton S. Cooper, an International Y. M. C. A. Secretary, to get his advice on next year's policy for the Bowdoin Association. After the conditions had been explained, Mr. Cooper advised us to keep the name of Bowdoin Christian Association, and yet keep the regular Y. M. C. A. constitution giving to the article concerning membership a very liberal interpretation. The purpose of the constitution in limiting the active membership to members of evangelical churches was merely to make sure that all who held important offices should have an earnest interest in Christian and religious work and thought, and when next fall the national Y. M. C. A. Convention is held it is probable that the wording of the membership section shall be made to include more men, and to be a fairer test of purpose without changing its spirit.

Mr. Cooper, who is an extremely busy man, nevertheless showed considerable interest in the work at Bowdoin, and agreed next year to give us the valuable aid of his experience, by spending one or perhaps two days at Bowdoin in the fall, organize the classes in Bible Study and outline a strong course of study, for it is planned to make the Bible Study classes a special feature of next year's work.

INTERSCHOLASTIC MEET

To-morrow at 10 o'clock will be held the trial for the Interscholastic Meet on Whittier Field, and the finals will begin at 2 P.M. Special efforts have been made to make the meet a success, and entries have been received from fourteen schools: Portland High School, Westbrook Academy, Deering High School, Hebron Academy, Bar Harbor, Westbrook High School, Bangor High School, Edward Little High School, Kent's Hill Seminary, Oak Grove Seminary, Thornton Academy, Abbott School, Skowhegan High School, Lewiston High School. Over 100 men are entered and the contests should all be interesting. The admission in the morning is fifteen cents, and in the afternoon is fifty cents.

A RARE BOOK

The Library for this week has been sending out the following notice to Bowdoin alumni with ballots for the new overseer, and the program of commencement week.

An appropriate gift for a lover of Longfellow is the poet's first book, written at the beginning of his professorship at Bowdoin, suggestive of Outre-Mer in style and content, and published for the first time on the hundredth anniversary of his birth. Only two hundred and fifty copies were printed from type that was at once distributed.

Twenty copies now remain unsold. Bound in full leather with gilt tops, these are for sale at the College Library at the original price of three dollars, postpaid.

COMMENCEMENT SPEAKERS

Those who have been chosen from the Senior Class to speak on Commencement Day are: George A. Bower, Edward A. Duddy, Seth G. Haley, Roscoe H. Hupper, William S. Limnell, and Charles W. Snow.

BOWDOIN WINS FOURTH CHAMPIONSHIP GAME

Word was received Wednesday night that Bowdoin had won its fourth championship game, defeating University of Maine at Orono, 6 to 5.
A Chance to Cheer Up

It has often been the policy of the Orient to make its editorial columns a medium for finding fault with things in general, or at least in advocating some radical change. It seems fitting, however, to pause once in a while and look things over to see where the college stands. It is particularly appropriate to do this now for two reasons. The first is that we do not wish to become famous for our "belly-aches," and the second is that the college has so much to be thankful for that it is only proper to stop a moment to enjoy the prosperity.

The baseball team now stands at the head of the Maine Intercollegiate League, and we should show enough pleasure about this, to make the team stay there if only for the sake of seeing us smile. We didn't win the track meet, we will have to admit, but the old Bowdoin spirit was evident when in the face of an eighteen-point handicap, we came within a quarter of an inch of pulling out a victory in the last two events. Next year we shall have nearly the same team with additions from the Freshman Class, and that is something for which to be thankful. As to football, spring practice is going on and Ross McClave is coming in the fall.

Our debating team speaks for itself. It was also the best advertisement that the college could have had. The fact that Bowdoin, a college of less than three hundred students, defeated teams from the University of Syracuse and the Cornell Congress, was heralded over the country where people have talked about it and marveled at it.

The flag is flying every day from Memorial Hall. The campus presents a picture worthy of any artist's brush, in fact, prosperity is seen on every hand. Spring is here all but the weather and that will be along soon.

Questions of Bowdoin Policy

A member of the faculty recently suggested to the Orient that in planning the policy of the college it would be a great aid to the faculty and to the boards, if the undergraduate sentiment were known in regard to the college's important questions. With a view to determining the undergraduate opinion, the Orient will print from time to time, editorials on questions concerning the college, supposing that if these editorials are let pass unchallenged they may be considered to represent fairly the side taken on the questions by all undergraduates, and that if anyone disagrees with an editorial he will immediately send a communication to the Orient, for publication, stating his reasons for disagreement.

Among the questions that are now before the college there are three at least upon which the opinion of the undergraduate may be of interest and perhaps of some value: To what extent should Bowdoin develop along lines of scientific instruction, to what extent could she grow in numbers to advantage, and should an auditing committee be organized not only to audit the accounts of the athletic team managers, but those of the Christian Association, the Glee and Mandolin Clubs, Dramatic Club, and College Publications.

The first of these questions was dealt with last week in connection with petitions from the Bowdoin Club of Boston to the Board of Trustees asking for courses in mechanical drawing, descriptive geometry, and surveying, which should enable a student after graduating from here to get a degree at such a school... as M. I. T. in two years (except perhaps in the mechanical or electrical engineering departments). This question will be considered again when the Orient has gathered certain statistics it is now seeking to compile.

The second question amounts to asking what is the ideal size for Bowdoin. We want Bowdoin to remain a small college, but we want it to be the best and strongest small college possible. We now have registered 288 students, who while they keep Bowdoin out of the class of smallest colleges, yet leave room for many more without endangering our ideal. The present conditions of accommodation must be considered and are as follows: In the dormitories there is room for 188, in the fraternity houses 114, and about Brunswick the present number is 86. So before we state our ideal limits of growth let us see how these accommodations lend themselves to the practical problems of expansion. The town of Brunswick of course can hold almost an unlimited number of students but how many we cannot exactly state; the fraternity houses are full, but there remain the dormitories. These now have room for 188 students, and are occupied by 143, we evidently have an opportunity for 45 new men to find room, and if more than 45 should apply for rooms nothing would seem to prevent the college according to its original plan, from erecting a fourth dormitory to the south of Appleton Hall, and so balance Winthrop Hall on the north side of Maine Hall. With this new dormitory we should then have room for about 100 new men, or discounting 9 for men who would or do now prefer to room alone, we have room for 100 new men.

And is not 100 new men just what we want? An extra hundred would mean a total of 388 or about 400 men. Enough so that the college could afford to pay her professors higher salaries, and keep them here after she gets them, enough so that the college may work out of debt, enough so that Bowdoin could support her organizations without forcing half-a-dozen duties upon one man, enough so that the students could pay for their athletics, clubs and class functions, without being drained to the limit, enough so that both first and second teams could be made of good material in every branch of athletics, enough to solve the fraternity problem, enough so that those living on the campus should outnumber those off the campus, and so keep college spirit which really lives on the campus wide awake, enough to fill Memorial Hall at every meeting, enough to make the Bowdoin pines ring and crack with Bowdoin cheers, and yet not too many to injure the small college ideal of personal contact and individual instruction. One hundred more men is then what we want for Bowdoin, and the best way to show our loyalty to her is for each man to bring to Bowdoin next fall, at least one promising member of 1911.

COMMUNICATION AS TO RHODES SCHOLARSHIPS

TRINITY COLLEGE, Oxford, April 30.

Dear Editor:

I have recently received several letters in regard to the future selections of Rhodes scholars from Maine and this may be a matter of college interest.

Under the scheme adopted by the Rhodes Trust Committee for Maine in conference with Dr. Parkin, the four Maine colleges were to select in turn a representative at Oxford for three years. But as the scholarship is properly a state and not a collegiate foundation, it has, I think, been rightly decided that after each college has sent one Rhodes scholar, the selection shall henceforth be made by a committee from all the Maine colleges.

Next year the University of Maine will select a representative and the circuit will be complete. The following year no Americans will be sent to Oxford as the Trust provides for only two from each state at one time. In the spring of 1910 and every two years out of three thereafter, the examinations will be open to the whole state and the contest for election will be between the different colleges.

These facts ought to attract the attention of some in the lower classes at Bowdoin, reminding them not to forget the High School Greek and Latin which alone is necessary to pass the simple qualifying examination.

Yours truly,

DAVID R. PORTER, '06.

TENNIS TOURNAMENT FOR CAPTAINCY

Since the last issue of the Orient the results in the tournament have been as follows:

In the first round Martin beat Goodspeed, 6-4, 5-7, 6-3, 6-8, 8-6.

Second Round: Brown and Piper, won by Brown by default; Kingsley and Martin, won by Martin, 6-1, 6-2, 6-0; Pike and Hyde, won by Hyde, 6-1, 8-10, 6-3, 8-6. Haines and Linnell, won by Haines, 6-4, 6-1, 6-0. Haines, '08, Hyde, '08, Martin, '10, and Brown, '09, will play a round robin for captaincy.

Round Robin: Haines and Hyde, won by Hyde, 4-0, 2-6, 6-4, 6-3, 0-4; Brown and Martin, won by Martin, 6-0, 6-1, 6-0.

The Vermont tennis team will be unable to come to Bowdoin this year.

The Maine Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament will be played at Brunswick on May 27, 28 and 29.

MASS-MEETING

Last Friday night a mass-meeting was held in Memorial Hall to arouse enthusiasm for Saturday's meet. Nearly every student turned out. Kimball, '07, presided and introduced Professors Sills and Foster, who gave short but snappy speeches. Then Captain Robinson was called upon, and he responded in a manner befitting the occasion. After cheering each member of the team, the meeting broke up with Bowdoin cheers.

GLEE AND MANDOLIN CLUBS

On May 10 the Glee and Mandolin Clubs held a business meeting in the Christian Association Room. The clubs had come out ahead financially this year, by over $125, and decided to have the surplus divided among the members rather than spend it on a banquet. This is the first time for several years that the clubs have had a surplus, and great credit for this year's success is due to Arthur H. Ham, the manager. The clubs gave concerts at Bath, Ellsworth, Bangor, Oldtown, Augusta, Farmington, Livermore Falls, Westbrook, Saco, Kennebunk, Portland, and Brunswick, everywhere met with responsive audiences, and made a showing in every way creditable to Bowdoin.

The elections for next year's club resulted as follows: Leader Glee Club, W. J. Crowley, '09; Leader Mandolin Club, J. E. Crowley, '09; manager, N. W. Cox, '08; assistant manager, R. O. Brewster, '09.

ADDRESS BY HON. HERBERT M. HEATH

An address on Public Speaking will be given by Hon. Herbert M. Heath, May 28, in Hubbard Hall at 7 o'clock instead of May 21, as previously announced.
College Notes

Simmons, '09, entertained his father over Sunday. H. M. Smith, '09, spent Sunday with friends in Fairfield. Coach Irwin spent a part of last week at his home in Boston.

The track team sat for their pictures Tuesday afternoon in front of the grand stand.

There will be an informal dance at the Delta Upsilon House on the evening of May 29th.

The University of Maine Dramatic Club presented "As You Like It" at Brewer last Friday evening.

C. E. Stetson, '07, who is teaching chemistry at Fryeburg Academy, spent Sunday on the campus.

D. T. C. Drummond, '09, has left college on account of sickness and will not return this spring.

Kendrie, '10, has been chosen to lead the chapel choir for the year beginning Ivy Day. Cushing, '09, will be organist, and Tuttle, '10, blower.

The men who are trying for assistant manager of the tennis team are: S. F. Brown, F. B. McGlone, P. B. Morr, E. P. Pickard, W. H. Sanborn, and A. W. Stone.

Last Wednesday the Alpha Sigma team of Brunswick High School, was defeated by Edward Little High School on Whittier Field by a score of 4 to 3 in fourteen innings.

Some enterprising man made a very artistic Phi Chi on the ground in front of the chapel, Monday night. The material used was sods taken from Barrett Potter's lawn.

The New England Press Club will meet to-night in Boston, and Bowdoin will be represented by P. H. Powers, '68, for the Quill, and by A. L. Robinson and N. S. Weston for the Orpheus, respectively.

The Boston Herald speaking of the strict enforcement of Sunday laws in Boston, recommends that Monday recitations in all schools and colleges be abolished in order not to interfere with perfect rest on the day before.

P. G. Bishop, '09, spent last week at Kittery breaking in on the electric cars where he will work as conductor this summer. Other Bowdoin men who will work there this summer are Sewall, '09; Nulty, '10; Youlant, Medic; Small, '07; and Kingsley, '07.

The Intercollegiate games between the great Eastern colleges and universities will be held this year at Cambridge in the stadium on May 31 and June 1. The meet will be a great exhibition of high class athletics and will be closely contested. The University of Michigan is expected to send one of the strongest competing teams.

Two vacancies have occurred on the Board of Overseers, one of which the alumni fill with an elected representative. There have already been sent out by the Secretary of the Alumni Association, nomination blanks, and now according to the plan adopted in 1889, he is sending out an eligible list of nominees from which the new overseers will be elected. Those alumni on the "eligible list" are Levi Turner, '86; Ernest B. Young, '92; Frederick A. Fisher, '81; and Thomas J. Emery, '68.

The men who went on the Worcester trip to compete at the N. E. I. A. A. games were Atwood, '09, Pennell, '09, Colbath, '10, and Warren, '10. Captain Robinson and Manager Law will accompany the men but will not compete. B. C. Morrill, '10, was entered in the meet but at the time of going to press he was not expected to go on the trip because of ill health.

The Dramatic Club has decided not to give a presentation this year. The reason for this is that J. A. Bartlett, '06, who was to take the leading lady's part and act as coach for the club will not be able to give enough of his time to the production of the play to make it a success, unless he should come to Brunswick nearly every day, and this would be demanding too much of him if the play were to be staged only in Brunswick as seemed to be the probability.

The following addresses have been arranged this semester for students of the debating course: Memorial Day Addresses: R. C. Clark, at Vassalboro; W. M. Harris, at Good Will Farm; A. J. Voorhees, at Dennysville. Preparatory School Addresses: W. S. Limnell, at Thornton Academy; A. B. Roberts, at Bath High School; A. T. Gould, at Yarmouth Academy; J. F. Morrison at Yarmouth Academy; W. M. Harris, at Yarmouth Academy; F. V. Delavina, at Yarmouth Academy. Addresses on Dr. Grenfell in Labrador; A. T. Gould, at Portland, Bangor, Lewiston and other cities.

SOPHOMORE THEMES

The fourth themes of the semester for Sophomores not taking English 4 will be due Tuesday, May 28, and the last themes will be due Thursday, June 6th. During each semester a student has the privilege of writing, if he wish, one double theme of one thousand words instead of two five-hundred word themes.

1. Is Trial by Jury a Failure?
2. The Cornell-Bowdoin Debate.
3. A Description of an Athletic Contest (The Maine Intercollegiate Track Meet or the Bowdoin-Bates Baseball Game.)

CLASS OF 1843

CLASS OF 1846

CLASS OF 1858

Rev. William Henry Savage died at Montreal, Canada, May 1, 1907. He was the son of Joseph L. and Ann (Stinson) Savage and was born in Woolwich, Maine, 27 September, 1833. His parents removed to Norridgweock in his infancy and he received his early education in that town, preparing for college at what was then the Bloomfield Academy. After graduating with high rank he became Professor of Mathematics and Natural Philosophy at Delaware College, Newark, Del. Subsequently in order to assist more effectively in the education of his brother, Rev. Minot J. Savage, he entered into the wholesale flour trade in which he was engaged for a time in Portland and in Boston. In 1862 he raised a company for the Seventeenth Maine and served till he was forced to resign on account of disability. Regaining his strength he again entered the army as lieutenant in the Seventh Maine and was brevetted captain for gallant conduct in the assault before Petersburg, Va. He became a student of theology at Andover, Mass., completing the course in 1867. During this period he refused to be considered a candidate for the chair of mathematics at his Alma Mater. He was also offered the presidency of Carleton College at Northfield, Minn. His first pastorate of three years at Holliston, Mass., was followed by one of five years at Jacksonville, Ill. During a part of this period he was a trustee of Illinois College. For a short time he was pastor of the Congregational Church at Hannibal, Mo. His beliefs becoming too advanced for the pulpits of that denomination he returned to Massachusetts in 1876 and for ten years was the successful pastor of the Unitarian Church at Leominster. Then followed pastorates at Watertown, Mass., and at Hyde Park, Mass., in each of which he won the affection and respect of his people. In the fall of 1905 ill health which could be directly traced to his army experiences, led him to retire from his professional work. The closing months of his life were spent with his daughter at Westmount, P. Q. "A modest, brave, honest, unselfish, gentle-hearted man and minister," a fellow alumnus styles him in an article in The Christian Register of May 9, 1907.

BOWDOIN, 4; BATES, 3

In what was by far the most exciting game of the year Bowdoin won her second game from Bates at Lewiston on last Saturday, and thus gave her five consecutive games for the state championship. The game was intensely interesting throughout and it was only Bowdoin's superb rally in the ninth that gave her the game. The game ran to ten innings, as have three games this year. The score was tied in the ninth with Bates 3 to 1 in the lead and one man out, and then won in the next. Sparks pitched finely for Bowdoin and kept five hits well scattered. For the first four innings neither side scored and both sides played brilliantly. In the last of the fourth Abbott made a fine throw home and caught Rogers at the plate. In the first of the fifth C. Bower drew a pass and then scored on a wild pitch. It was in the last of the sixth that proved the disastrous period for Bowdoin. Jordan led off with a hit. Cobb sacrificed, advancing him a base. Wilder then got on bases on a base on balls which made two men on. Johnson flied out, but Rogers got a timely hit scoring two runs, and then scored himself on an error by Manter. Bridges was out. This stopped the scoring. It looked as though this would be sufficient to win the game as neither side scored in the seventh or eighth. In the first of the ninth Files was first to the bat and flied out. The people now began to leave the field considering the game practically over. But it wasn’t, for Lawrence got a base on balls and then Manter cracked out an elegant three-base hit scoring Lawrence. C. Bower, with a pretty single, scored Manter and tied the game. Sparks struck out, and then Rogers gave two passes, filling the bases. Johnson now came into the box and saved the game for the present by catching a pop fly of McDade’s, with three on. Bates retired without scoring in her half. Stanwood led off in the last of the tenth with a two-base hit, and then Lawrence on a timely hit scored Stanwood and won the game. Bates retired one, two, three in her half. Bowdoin showed up brilliantly at the bat and played well throughout, although a number of costly errors were made.

Bowdoin, 6; U. of M., 5

At Orono, on Wednesday, May 22, Bowdoin won from the University of Maine in baseball. The day was cold and a hard wind interfered with good playing. The close of the game was exciting. Bowdoin led up to the last of the eighth inning, but in Maine’s half she tied the score, one run being forced in with the bases full. In the first of the ninth Bowdoin came to the bat and dispelled Maine’s chances by scoring two runs more in two hits and two errors. In the last of the ninth Maine added one run but was unable to secure enough to tie. The feature of the game was the home run by Manter. Abbott played a very brilliant game, both in the field and at the bat.

Memorial Day Speakers

No fewer than 17 Bowdoin men were among Maine’s Memorial Day orators this year. The alumni, with the places where they spoke, were as follows: Gen. J. L. Chamberlain, '52, of Portland, at Gorham in the afternoon; Hon. F. M. Drew, '58, of Lewiston, at Bath; Hon. L. A. Emery, '61, of Ellsworth, at Ellsworth; Hon. H. M. Heath, '72, of Augusta, at Sherman's Mills in the afternoon and at Patten in the evening; Prof. W. E. Sargent, '78, of Hebron, at Greene; Prof. Geo. C. Purinton, '78, of Farmington, at Presque Isle; Hon. O. D. Castner, '79, of Waldoboro, at Jefferson; Rev. J. L. Quimby, '95, of Gardiner, at Gardiner; Geo. C. Webber, '95, of Auburn, at Auburn; John Clair Minot, '96, of Augusta at Augusta; Ralph W. Leighton, '96, of Mt. Vernon at Sidney; Rev. H. E. Dunmack, '97, of Augusta, at Norridgewock; and Frank L. Dutton, '99, of Augusta, at Belgrade. The list of speakers also included four Bowdoin undergraduates, as follows: A. J. Voorhees at Dennysville; W. M. Harris at Good Will Farm; R. C. Clarke at Vassalboro and R. L. Taylor, Jr., at Phillips.

RECENT BOOKS BY RECENT GRADUATES

That the helpfulness of a book may not be measured by its size is the thought suggested by Hugh F. Graham's (Class of 1898) Standards of Conduct, an eighteen-mo of only sixty-eight pages. Feeling that the study of ethics should be encouraged, the author has issued this little text-book. The aim is one that all will approve, but the examination of each new instrument offered shows how difficult it is to be philosophical without using terms and phrases that are meaningless or worse to beginners, or to be perfectly simple without seeming to some to be silly. Whatever may be its success with classes, this careful expression of his own thought is sure to aid the writer in his professional labors.

Bowdoin is proud of the scientists she numbers and has numbered among her older alumni. If one stops to count the recent graduates now engaged in scientific research under the auspices of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, he is encouraged to believe that the mantle of the elders will not fall to the ground on their departure. Dr. Oliver P. Watts (Class of 1889) of the University of Wisconsin, has recently published the results of his investigation of the Borides and Sili- cides as No. 145 of the Bulletin of the University. The pamphlet itself and the accompanying bibliography bears evidence of his painstaking and efficient labor.

The demand for carefully compiled family genealogies is ever apparent. That the demand is genuine is shown by the otherwise rather curious fact that they are the only class of books of which the selling price is sure to be maintained, if not increased, with the lapse of years. Mr. A. L. Dennison (Class of 1895) has recently published one relating to this surname which includes several Bowdoin graduates and many past residents of Brunswick and Freeport.

A few helpful compilations come to be known by their authors' names as if they were books of pure literature and of great inspirational power. Your Webster means the dictionary, not the orator. Poole refers to an index to magazines, not to the dramatist. The writer ventures to predict similar fame among workers in New England local history and genealogy for the admirable bibliography by Charles A. Flagg (Class of 1894) of the Library of Congress that has been recently issued in an attractive octavo of 256 double column pages by the Salem Press Company. Its full title is its best description, for the subsequent pages fulfill the promise of the first; a guide to Massachusetts local history being a bibliographical index to the literature of the towns, cities and counties of the State, including books, pamphlets, articles in periodicals and collected works, books in preparation, historical manuscripts, newspaper clippings, etc. Among many helpful features which the author's experience in historical research as well as in bibliography led him to introduce, is that of a series of county outline maps, inserted at convenient points, and showing at a glance the relative position of the towns to whose history the adjacent pages are a key.

ZETA PSI HOUSE PARTY

The fifth in the series of fraternity house parties was held at Bowdoin College, last Friday, Lambda Chapter of Zeta Psi being the host on this occasion. The chapter house on College Street was tastefully decorated with cut flowers, palms, ferns, and smilax.

The afternoon reception held from three to five was very largely attended. The guests were received by Mrs. William DeWitt Hyde, Mrs. Henry Johnson, Mrs. George T. Files, [Continued on page 65.]
there is a considerable number of men in Bowdoin who are not working their way through college, or who do not even pay a part of their own expenses, what this pamphlet rightly emphasizes is that there is plenty of opportunity for a man to work his way, and that money has nothing to do with social standing. The polished youth of the city and the husky product of the farm meet on the same basis. It is true that no charitably inclined State is enabling us to lower our tuition, but the generosity of staunch and loyal alumni has placed at the disposal of the college, scholarships that furnish instruction wholly or in part for one hundred men.

Interesting and illuminative reviews of the Bulletin have appeared in the editorial columns of the Boston and New York papers. A leading Boston daily after having summed up the subject matter of the Bulletin, concludes thus: "Bowdoin always has been and is to-day a college where a deep and lasting impress of manhood is given along with an excellent education. It is good to find, also, that no aspiring youth need keep away from the place of the "whispering pines" by fear that he cannot finance himself through the four years of his course. It is still the mission of the small colleges to provide learning—and that of the best sort—for those who are unable to meet the expenses of university life in the large cities. Long may they remain of their own special flavor and usefulness."

Questions of Bowdoin Two weeks ago the Orient Policy, published an account of II. Scientific Courses the May meeting of the Boston Bowdoin Club, accompanied by an editorial strongly favoring the action taken by the club at that meeting. The action taken was to petition the Board of Overseers to establish at Bowdoin, elective courses in Mechanical Drawing, Descriptive Geometry, and Surveying; and to hire as an instructor in these courses a new man at a $1,200 salary. The idea being that a student by taking these courses as counting toward his regular A.B. degree, could after graduation receive a degree from some such technical schools as the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in two years, whereas without these courses it would take him three years.

It is not the purpose of the Boston Bowdoin Club or the wish of the students to establish here a complete scientific course and try to turn Bowdoin into a Dartmouth. Bowdoin has an important place to fill as an excellent small village giving instruction in the liberal arts leading to the A.B. degree. It is not Bowdoin's place, however, to remain behind the times, and neglect the scientific trend of modern thought. She should not neglect, as has seemingly been done in the recent past, the need of growth in our scientific courses; she should rather enlarge them, and keeping up with the times, offer such scientific courses as may well be considered to lead to an education in the liberal arts.

Such an extension, by the addition of three practical scientific courses, is the suggestion of the Boston Bowdoin Club which is heartily supported by the Orient. The Orient in a desire to learn how such courses would be received if offered next year, has made somewhat incomplete canvass of the fraternities, asking what men would elect one of more of these courses next fall. The figures obtained were as follows: Mechanical Drawing, 51; Surveying, 28, and Descriptive Geometry 18, which greatly exceeded expectations. But even if we subtract a liberal half of these numbers for such as are merely attracted by a novelty, we yet have an expression of opinion from the student body that should have some little weight.

There is one more point. This is in regard to expense to the college. It is, of course, foolish for anyone to advocate the establishment of these courses if they are not to be first-class ones. That is, it would be a great mistake to hire an instructor for $1,000 next year and try to run these courses for that amount. It is better to have nothing at all than to have a poor makeshift, so if the college is to go into this, she should hire at least a $1,200 man and supply him with good apparatus, paying for a starter perhaps $600. This makes a total of $1,800 which at first seems large, but if we remember that each student by tuition and dormitory room-rent pays at least $150 to $175 to the college, this $1,800 does not appear so formidable, for, at the most, 12 additional men would cover it. And 12 additional men is by no means an impossible number, to be drawn by this magnet of courses, as may be inferred from the fact that the Orient while making its recent canvass, ran across, entirely without solicitation, two men who said they each knew of one additional man whom these courses would attract to Bowdoin next fall.

The Orient, then, strongly advocates the establishment of these three new courses, the obtaining of a new $1,200 instructor, and the payment of a sufficient sum to get good apparatus. On this subject the Orient especially solicits communications on both sides.

Mrs. Wilmot B. Mitchell and Mrs. Hartley Baxter. Mrs. Franklin Robinson dipped punch and Mrs. Allen Johnson poured coffee, assisted by Miss Sarah Merriman of Brunswick, and Miss Alice Webb of Rockland.

At six o'clock the members of the fraternity and their guests left on a special car for New Meadows Inn. Dancing began at nine o'clock and continued until a late hour, after which the chapter house was turned over to the young lady guests for the rest of the night. Among those present were Miss Mae Low of Bath, Misses Mae Despeaux, Louise Weatherill, Sarah Merriman and Bertha Stetson of Brunswick, Miss Florence Freeland of Fairfield, Miss Vivian Littlefield of Bangor, Miss Rena Saunders of Lubec, Miss Marion Cobb and Miss Alice Webb of Rockland, Miss Abbott of Waterville, Miss Margaret Page of Damariscotta, Miss Louise Edwards of Deering, Miss Carrie Johnson of Hallowell, Miss Betty Bates, Miss Emily Moore, and Miss Mitchell of Portland, Miss Charlotte Hubbard of Wellesley, Miss Faith Randall of Augusta, and Miss Lou Lawrence and Miss Growley of Northampton, Mass.

The delegates from the other fraternities were: Thomas R. Winchell, Alpha Delta Phi; Paul Blanchard, Psi Upsilon; F. A. Burton, Delta Kappa Epsilon; A. James Vorhees, Theta Delta Chi; R. E. Sawyer, Delta Upsilon; C. F. Doherty, Kappa Sigma, and Willis E. Roberts from Beta Theta Pi.

COLLEGE SINGS

It might be appropriate at this time to say something about the college sings. At these sings, the whole college gathers on the steps of the Walker Art Building soon after supper, and sings the old Bowdoin songs and the popular airs of to-day. Last year two or three were held, and were a very successful addition to the college routine. The warm weather is almost here now, and on the next warm, pleasant evening, Bowdoin should get together on Walker steps. This is something that could well be done under the leadership of the Glee Club leader, and the Orient suggests that he take the initiative by posting a notice or in some other way soon calling a meeting for the first sing.

WORCESTER MEET

The twenty-first annual track meet of the New England Intercollegiate Athletic Association was held at The Oval, Worcester, last Friday and Saturday. Considering the few men Bowdoin sent, and the injury which occurred to Atwood’s knee in the trials Friday, we did very well. In the trials, Atwood, ‘09, qualified in the broad jump—and Morrill, ‘10, in the shot-put; Warren, ‘10, and Pennell, ‘09, who were entered in the hammer throw and high jump respectively, failed to qualify, though Pennell came close to doing so, equalling the jump of Reserve of University of Maine.

Saturday, Morrill, ‘10, took first place in the shot-put—with a put of 39 ft. 9 in., thus winning Bowdoin’s only points.

Atwood was unable to compete in either the 100-yard dash, or broad jump, because of his injury, which, however, is only temporary, and Colbath, ’10, ran in the mile but did not get placed.

In the trials, Friday, Shaw of Amherst did the high hurdles in 15 seconds, thus breaking the world’s record—but in the finals 15 2-5 was the best time he could make—which, however, is the record of the New England colleges.

Horrax of Williams, broke the high jump record, clearing the bar at 5 ft. 11½ in., the previous record being 5 ft. 10¾ in. Gram of Tech. did the 220-yards dash in 22s., beating the record held jointly by Cloudman of Bowdoin and Swasey of Dartmouth, by 1-5 of a second. Udale of Tech. made the record time of 9 m. 32 4-5 s. in the two-mile run. Following is the summary:

FOOTBALL RULES FOR 1907

The official football rules for the season of 1907 have finally been adopted, and the rule book will be issued within a few weeks. At the meeting of the intercollegiate governing committee in New York last Saturday, final action was taken on the rules. There will be few changes of importance, it having been decided to give the new game another year's trial before passing official judgment upon it. The rules have all been codified and changed in order and arrangement completely.

The most important changes made at the meeting are:

In case of a forward pass, the man behind the line who receives a forward pass must be at least one yard behind the line. This change was adopted to remove the ambiguity as to whether the end or the tackle is on the end of the line in certain plays.

A forward pass crossing the goal line on the bound or rolling, whether before or after being legally touched, shall count as a touchdown for the defenders of the goal, instead of resulting in the forfeiture of the ball as formerly. A change previously adopted, substitutes a fifteen-yard penalty for the loss of the ball on an unsuccessful forward pass.

There shall be a penalty of five yards for a deliberate attempt to draw an opponent off side, as by a false start.

There shall be a penalty of fifteen yards if a player interferes with the ball when an opponent is making a fair catch. The penalty formerly applied only to interfering with the player.

The kicker and the holder of the ball are exempt from the ruling that none of the players shall be out of bounds when a place kick is made.

Recognition of two lines of scrimmage is made in the rule defining the line in compliance with the neutral zone rule.

If the captains fail to agree on the time of halves when a short game is desired, the referee shall order thirty-five minute halves after ten minutes.

The rule regarding touching the ball is changed to read: "If the ball is put in play by kicking, instead of snapping it back, no player of the side may touch it until it has been touched by an opponent or until it has gone ten yards into the opponents' territory."

A new official, the field judge, was created to act as an assistant to both the umpire and the referee. He will occupy a position well back of the defensive team and nearest the side of the field opposite the linesman.

A meeting of eastern managers has been called for June 7 to decide upon some method of selecting officials in the East.

IVY DAY

For more than forty successive years Bowdoin classes have celebrated Ivy Day at the end of Junior year. To-day is the time for 1908 to follow this Bowdoin custom. May her Ivy Day surpass all that have gone before! In honor of the day, this issue of the Orient is made a special feature. In the morning at ten o'clock came the annual ball game on Whittier Field. In the afternoon came the regular literary exercises, consisting of the oration, poem, and presentations. After the planting of the Ivy, occurred Seniors' Last Chapel, one of the most impressive and solemn traditions known to Bowdoin. In the evening, and well on towards morning, is the Ivy Hop. Good luck to the day!

The Oration

The Oration was delivered by Albert T. Gould. His subject was the "Influence of a Personality," and was as follows:

Within the last fifty years, great changes have been wrought in our social and economic history. Forces have been set in motion which have soon passed beyond the limits of restriction and have, like the tide, breaking bolt and bar, swept resistslessly over the country. From a stage of individualism in labor, we have passed to a stage of co-operation. As a result, there has been a gradual but inevitable displacement of the individual by the masses. In the case of the working man, the operative force has been the trades union; in the case of the business man, it has been the great corporation. A keen observer of the tendencies of the age has declared that the phenomena of our social life is constantly undergoing change; and that this change involves the destruction of our racial individuality.

Nowhere is this displacement of the individual by the masses more pronounced than in the tendency of the rural population to move towards the cities, where the individual is soon lost from sight. The young New England farmer, eager for success, whose imagination has been quickened by the thought of "mast-hemmed Manhattan," and the Scotch lad, whose hopes rise up like fire when he first sees the lights of London loom through the fog, are both at the last stage of the transition from individualism to co-operation in labor. Both are driven on by forces from behind, and both are likely to lose their individuality as they enter the seething crowd that is concentrated in the city. If this is a true statement of present day conditions (and the testimony of experts bears out the facts), is there, then, in our modern industrial system a place left for the individual, a sphere for the influence of a personality?

If we look back a few years over our political history, we can see everywhere the great men of their party dominating our national policy. One need go no farther back than the day of Clay and Webster to see the tremendous influence of a great personality on the country at large. There was scarcely a measure before the House of Representatives for over forty years in which there was not felt the influence of Clay's personality; while of Webster it has been said that "his ideas, his thoughts are spread over, every page of our annals for nearly half a century. His ideas, his thoughts are inseparable from the mind of his country and the spirit of his age." And again: "Whoever in after times shall write the history of the United States for the first half of the nineteenth century will write the life of Daniel Webster." A little later we find Stephen Douglas dominating a whole section of our country; and following him that matchless man, Abraham Lincoln. But has the day of the great leaders departed? Has the tide of modern industrialism set in so strong that the individual has become entirely merged with the crowd? As soon as one head appears above the surface, is it immediately thrust under again?

In spite of the dark outlook that a study of our industrial problems gives, in spite of the fact that the many are drawn into a vortex from which only the few escape, in spite of the levelling effect of modern capitalism and modern socialism, in spite of all these facts there must be, and still is, a place for the indi-individual, a demand for a personality. When John Cabot and Sir Humphrey Gilbert set their course across the western ocean and lifted new horizons into view, a whole continent wondered how a single man could work so great a marvel. But men of to-day are asserting their individuality in no less a degree, whether they are seated in offices directing the destinies of railroads that bind the country together like a network of arteries, or whether they are flinging bridges across chasms, or towing huge floating dry docks through great stretches of ocean to the Philippines, or are, like Peary, pushing their way northward over the "Great Ice."

If anyone doubts the worth of the individual, he need only turn to the field of social endeavor to see how, at the magic touch of a personality, new forms of society have leaped into being. Take an example right here in Maine. None could think of that splendid undertaking of Good Will Farm without thinking of the unselfish man who conceived the idea and followed it to a noble execution. Every foot of the broad acres of that farm is eloquent of the personality of George Hinckley. Every boy who is trained there in the ways of good citizenship, imbibes, whether on the baseball field or as he follows the plough, something of the spirit of that man who is spending his life in an endeavor to give all boys an equal chance in the race for success, and who is finding his greatest happiness in the undertaking.

In like manner, none to-day could think of the country of Labrador without thinking of its greatest citizen, Dr. Wilfred Grenfell. The story of his life is to-day a household word. With the spirit of a modern viking, and with a pure love in the adventure (but with a deeper love, also, than that of mere adventure), he pushed out from the shores of England some fifteen years ago in a North Sea ketch, and laid his course for the dark coastline and white icebergs of Labrador, where, until he came, "not a law of man or God ran north of fifty-three." In the fifteen years that followed, he has created a new civilization. He has been like the giant of whom Carlyle spoke, who could hurl a mountain abroad with his hands. By the sheer force of his personality, he has brought to that country both the laws of man and of God. Many men have made two blades of grass grow where only one grew before; but he has made at least two grow where none grew before. The field in which he labors is the unbridled sea; that vast, heaving body of water has had a magic effect on the races. From its music the harps of the first minstrels were tuned to the wild songs of the sagas. In all ages the call of the sea has been listened to by the bravest hearts of the nation; but it is a safe assumption to make that none ever labored on the sea to better effect than this medical missionary who has brought the message of the twentieth century to a long neglected country.

In some respects the country of Labrador recalls Stevenson's poem:

"A naked house, a naked moor,
A shivering pool before the door,
A garden bare of flowers and fruit,
And poplars at the garden foot;
Such is the place that I live in,
Bleak without and bare within."

It is a land of low-lying fogs and grey headlands, of sudden squalls and treacherous icebergs, a land where the boats of fishermen sink underneath the weight of ice that forms on gunwale and oar, where men are frozen to the seats of their boats, and where on angry nights the wind goes shrieking through the narrow harbors and tugs at the sod-roofed huts. In that land none need ask where such names as Deadly Cove, Shark Harbour, Sunken Ledge, and Ragged Island took their origin. When in these places the sun has sunk behind the barren hills, the darkness closes down as though the hand of God had been withdrawn, and Labrador is left alone in her desolation.

But this land also shares the cold glories of the dawn and the "incomparable pomp of eve." In it live men and women and little children. If they live under the dark shadow of superstition, fearing the unseen world that lies just beyond, vast and impenetrable, then all the more need there is for some great personality to set in motion those forces that make for a better civilization. Our imaginations have been stirred by the tremendous undertakings of Alexander, and Charlemagne, and Napoleon; but the empire of a military despot sinks to insignificance when compared with the creation of a better civilization through the forces of peace and prosperity. The feudalism of the Middle Ages, the absolutism of Louis XIV., even the more liberal government of an enlightened despot like Frederick the Great, have all gone down in the wreck of years. In their place there has arisen a new spirit called democracy. If the modern industrial system, which has grown side by side with the movement towards democracy, has resulted in a subordination of the individual to the interests of society at large, there is still, however, a sphere of influence for every man with a personality.

In the case of both Grenfell and Hinckley, the man himself is greater than anything he has done. Each is a leader of men; but a follower of a high ideal. Each has proved the worth of the individual in our present day society. The force that operates to lift the individual above the crowd lies in the one word: Faith. It takes faith in man and faith in God to accomplish great ends. In the cathedral of St. Johns, Newfoundland, last summer, the bishop of the Church of England, as he stood between two of the granite pillars that support the roof of that mighty building that rises on the mountain side over the harbor where the ships of the first English explorers found shelter, and with the grey light of Newfoundland streaming through the rose window behind him, said: "The heart of man, if left to itself, gravitates to materialism like a stone; but it is regenerated by faith in a great ideal. Faith is a moral grace, not an intellectual acquirement; its place is in the affections." Men like Hinckley and Grenfell do not talk about religion; they live it. We call them missionaries, because they are men with a mission. Whether they are cultivating principles of justice and right living in the next generation of our own State of Maine, or are steaming northward under the stars of Labrador, with the whole world sunk below the horizon, they are everywhere proving that, after all, it is the individual that counts. There is always a place for a great personality.

The Poem

The poem was delivered by Paul H. Powers. We regret exceedingly we were unable to receive this in time for publication in the Ivy Issue.

The Ode

The Ode, sung at the planting of the Ivy on the Hubbard Library, was written by Bowdoin N. Gregson.

Air: Russian National Hymn

Bowdoin immortal!
While time shall roll,
Thy noble spirit thrill
Each classmate's soul!
Friendship, in golden youth,
No power shall assuage,
Love will the bond increase
In silver age.

Dearer with years shall grow
Thy memory;
As ivy claspeth stone,
We cling to thee:
In joyous college years
Our hearts we've bound,
Noble old Bowdoin!
Thy praise resound!

UNDEFEATED CHAMPIONS

Bowdoin Wins From Colby and Secures the Baseball Championship of Maine

BOWDOIN, 5; COLBY, 1

By winning from Colby on Whittier Field last Saturday, Bowdoin secured the baseball championship with a most remarkable record. This is the sixth and final Maine college victory and gives to Bowdoin the noteworthy title of undefeated college champion for the year. The game was played before the largest crowd ever seen at a baseball game on Whittier Field. The day was ideal for ball-playing and the game was fast and exciting. Sparks pitched for Bowdoin and pitched a nice game. While Undefeated Champions: The Orient considers that every occasion upon which a team representing Bowdoin engages in an athletic contest does not necessarily require editorial comment, but certainly the closing of a baseball season like the one just finished is worthy of the most particular mention. Bowdoin is not only champion of Maine, but she has gained the remarkable title of undefeated champion. An examination of all available records leads us to believe that this is the first time a Maine college has made a record like this in twenty-two years. In 1885 the first year the four colleges played a series, Bowdoin won six straight games, and now in 1907 she duplicates the record. Special congratulation is certainly due, for such a work as this. It is not that Bowdoin was gifted with a number of remarkable individual stars this year, but that every game was played hard till the last man was out, that we find the reason for winning. Two of these games were won in the tenth inning. It was good "Bowdoin fight" that is to be praised. All Bowdoin men may certainly be proud of the record made this spring.

College Cheer Leader. Considerable need has been felt, from time to time, at Bowdoin, of having some student whose regular duty should be to lead the cheering at every athletic contest, mass-meeting, or other gathering where organized cheering is needed. At several of the New England colleges a cheer leader is regularly elected every year, and the college relies on him to be present at every game, or if unable to attend to appoint some substitute, and to organize the undergraduates before every important contest so as to practice the old cheers or new ones if there be any, and to sing the college songs. There is no reason why Bowdoin should not adopt this same method of electing cheer leaders, and at the approaching mass-meeting held for the election of athletic managers, and members of the council, there is no reason why the committee of the council which nominates candidates for membership to the council should not nominate candidates for a cheer leader, and also perhaps candidates for an assistant cheer leader. The position of cheer leader is one of importance in keeping a strong, live spirit in any college, because it means organizations, and if this position is filled by election there is no doubt that the college will fill it with some man who has the true, clean Bowdoin spirit, and whom the whole college will be willing to follow to every game.

hit fairly hard he kept his head in critical places. Shaw, in the box for Colby, kept his hits down but was wild in exciting places.

The fielding of the whole Bowdoin team was of the gilt-edged variety. Bowdoin secured three of her five runs in the second, with Files retired, Lawrence drew a base on balls and Manter had fanned, C. Bower and Sparks both drew passes to first. G. Bower hit to short who fumbled. Lawrence scored and Bower got to first. Then Abbott hit a hard Manter after getting a base on balls scored on Claude Bower and Sparks.

Bowdoin secured another run in the fourth. Sparks reached first on an error and was scored on singles by Abbott and McDade.

Bowdoin's last run came in the eighth, when Manter after getting a base on balls served on an error.

Colby's one run came in the fifth, when Bunker reached first on an error and scored on a hit by Goode.

The most sensational, and incidentally one of the finest exhibitions of ball playing ever seen on the field, came in the seventh inning. Bunker, first man up for Colby, reached first, Guttill then received a base on balls. Hammond bunted and then got onto the first base on an error by Stanwood. Three men were now on, and no one out. Bowdoin came in for the short field. The next man hit a hard ground ball to G. Bower, which was fielded perfectly and thrown to the plate. Dwyer then came to the bat and drove a hard ball to Manter, who in turned lined the ball home, and two men were out and three on bases. At this moment Dwyer walked off first. Stanwood signaled for Sparks to throw to him. He received the ball, tagged Dwyer out and Colby's chance for winning was over.

After the game Bowdoin, headed by the band, marched down the street. A bonfire was built in front of the chapel in the evening, and a good celebration held in honor of the completion of the most successful Maine college baseball series ever played by Bowdoin. The summary:

Bowdoin, 5; Bates, 2

The Bowdoin baseball team won its third consecutive victory of the season from Bates at Lewiston on Memorial Day, by the score of 5 to 2. The game was slow and was characterized by the terrific hitting and listless base running of the Bowdoin team. Bowdoin was clearly superior throughout the whole game. Thirteen hits were credited to Bowdoin, including one home run, two three-base hits, and two two-baggers. Manter played a nice game on second. Harris, '09, pitched his first college game for Bowdoin and did exceedingly creditable work, allowing six hits. The summary:

BASEBALL CUP
A handsome cup has been offered by H. W. Varney, the jeweller on Maine Street, to the member of the baseball team, who in the series of State Championship ball games obtained the highest combined batting and fielding average, some slight advantage being given to the infielders in the fielding average. A similar cup offered three years ago, was awarded to James F. Cox, '04. The averages will be computed soon by a committee appointed for the purpose, and the cup in the meantime will be in Mr. Varney’s window.

Communication

Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me.,
June 3, 1907.

To the Editor of the Orient:

My Dear Sir—Will you kindly allow me the privilege of your columns to express my deep appreciation of the help given me by so many of the undergraduates last Friday evening in removing the books and furniture from my rooms during the fire? I am sure that without their ready and efficient aid my loss would have been serious.

With renewed thanks, I am

Very truly yours,

Kenneth C. M. Sills.

A SUGGESTION TO ALUMNI

It certainly seems as though such a record as was made upon our baseball diamond this spring is worthy of some particular commemoration more than just the remembrance of the train of Bowdoin victories. A cup or possibly banner ought to be left in the room at the Hubbard Hall showing what the team has done. The Orient would suggest that some alumnus or possibly class, desiring to show appreciation, might present some suitable trophy to the baseball team, to be inscribed and left in Hubbard Hall. There is no league banner now among the Maine colleges, but a simple cup would make an admirable trophy to leave as a record to future years. A gift like this would be much prized and much appreciated.

DELTA UPSILON DANCE

The Bowdoin Chapter of the Delta Upsilon fraternity held an informal dance at the chapter house on Maine Street last Wednesday evening. The chaperons were Mrs. Franklin C. Webb and Mrs. George F. Tenney. The committee of arrangements consisted of Edgar F. Sewall, '09, Harold M. Smith, '09, and Guy W. Farrar, '10. Music was furnished by Messrs. Cushing, '09, and Kendrie, '10.

Among those present were Miss Daisy Hubbard, Miss L. Woodward, Miss Grace Crawford, Miss Ethel Webb, Miss Ann Parsons, Miss Cecil Houghton, all of Brunswick; Miss Bessie Templeton of Lewiston, Miss Chrystine Kennison of Waterville, Miss Bessie Fenn of Hebron Academy, Miss Luena Sylvester of Bowdoinham, Miss Maude Lang, Miss Ethel Mercer, Miss Ethel Pike of Lisbon Falls, Miss Florence Lyman of Boston, Miss Grace Hoyt of Camden, and Miss Louise Winchell of Dover, N. H.
College Notes

Phillips, '09, has been out of college for the past two weeks.
A. C. Chadbourne, '07, was at home in Hallowell over Sunday.
Pottle, '09, is employed at Harding's Farm, a few miles from Brunswick.
A. B. Roberts, '07, spent several days in Portland this week on business.
Snow, '07, is rapidly convalescing at the Eye and Ear Infirmary of Portland.
George Harold Morrill, '07, visited friends at Fort Fairfield on Sunday of this week.
Small, '09, and Simmons, '09, spent several days fishing at Lake Farlam last week.
Mincher, '07, who is an instructor at Thornton Academy, was on the campus last Friday and Saturday.
The "Elopement of Ellen" was presented at Richmond this week, all the men's parts being taken by Bowdoin men.
Harold Marsh, '09, who has been detained from college on account of sickness, has returned to resume his work.
Bridge, '09, sprained his knee while playing tennis last week, and as a result has been confined to his room for several days.
Indications point to the fact that a sneak thief is working the fraternity houses. Last Saturday evening during the celebration, a man entered the Delta Upsilon House and helped himself to a suit of clothes, several packages of clean laundry and a smoking set of considerable value. The man was seen by the matron, but got away before he could be identified or the alarm given. Several raincoats and parts of suits of clothes have been reported missing from all parts of the campus.

Bowdoin Wins Tennis Doubles, U. of Maine Wins Singles

The annual Maine Intercollegiate Tennis Tournament was held in Brunswick on May 27-28. The tournament did not begin until May 29 as there was rain the two days before that. Bowdoin won the doubles and the University of Maine the singles.
The results of the first round in the doubles were published last week, and the other results were as follows:

Doubles. Semi-finals: Hyde and Ham of Bowdoin defeated Dunn and Young of Colby, 8-6, 7-5. Mitchell and Goodwin of U. of M. defeated Haines and Pike of Bowdoin, 7-9, 7-5, 11-9. Finals: Hyde and Ham of Bowdoin defeated Mitchell and Goodwin of U. of M., 4-6, 6-1, 6-3, 5-7, 7-5.

Finals: Mitchell of U. of M. defeated Boothby of Bates, 6-1, 6-4, 2-6, 6-2.

Hon. H. M. Heath on Public Speaking

Last Tuesday evening, Hon. H. M. Heath spoke in Hubbard Hall on Public Speaking. He spoke informally in an interesting way, and gave practical suggestions. In brief, the requisites for public speaking which he emphasized were, sound health, a well-trained voice, a wide vocabulary of simple words, a feeling of nervousness before speaking, ability to speak without notes, and a capacity for continued hard work. Sound health is the first requisite for every man in every position. A good voice is within the reach of everyone who will consistently practice, and a good voice well managed has controlled nations. Pitt during his whole career swaying Parliament by his well-regulated voice. In speaking the flexible middle tone is the most effective. A wide vocabulary of simple words is necessary, and is best obtained by absorbing the vocabularies of great books; the best for this purpose being the Bible, and the works of Shakespeare, Milton, Webster, and Lowell. Simple words are the best because they are all understood, and do not attract attention to themselves from the thought; the same is true of gestures, no gesture is good that attracts attention from the thought. A feeling of nervousness is not cowardice, but a sense of responsibility which is necessary to give true life to any speech. Every public speaker should, however, learn to absolutely conceal all nervousness. Ability to speak without notes is necessary, for the referring to notes distracts the attention of the listeners. And to speak best, a man must know his subject so well that he can frame his argument while on his feet; and such a knowledge will also give an impression of reserve force. A capacity for continued hard work is necessary, because genius in public speaking is merely a tremendous capacity for work in preparation, nothing comes without work and the more work that can be accomplished the better results can be obtained. One more thing that Mr. Heath emphasized was that the more a man writes the better is his thought.

College Preacher

On next Sunday, June 9, Reverend William W. Fenn, the fourth and last of this spring's Bowdoin College Preachers, will speak in the morning at the Church on the Hill, and at five o'clock in chapel. FACULTY NOTES

Professor Robinson is to give the graduation address at Yarmouth Academy on June 13.

Professor Lee was in Washington, D. C., last week to attend the meeting of the State Geologists of all states east of the Rocky Mountains, in conference with the director of the United States Geological Survey. Professor Lee spent some time in arranging the details of the geological work in Maine for the coming season. Four parties of geologists will be at work in Maine during the summer.

THE DEUTSCHER VEREIN

The last regular meeting of the Deutscher Verein was held at New Meadows Inn last Friday night. An address was given by Professor Leonard of Bates College, on the poems of Schiller in which he dealt especially with the poem entitled "The Song of the Bell." This poem Prof. Leonard compared with Longfellow's poem, "The Ship of State," in a very interesting manner. A short business session followed the address and the meeting closed with the usual songs.

Here is the cheapest good gun yet made. By the omission of the take down feature we have been able to greatly reduce the cost of production and at the same time have kept the gun up to the famous high Marlin standard of strength, safety and durability. Notice the clean simplicity of this gun. The workmanship and finish are perfect. The weight is only 7 pounds. The full choke barrels are especially bored for smokeless as well as black powder and so chambered that 1/4 inch or 2/4 inch shells may be used. IVY DAY POEM

The Orient greatly regrets that it did not receive the Ivy Day Poem in time for its Ivy Day number. Nevertheless, it now takes pleasure in publishing below, the poem in full:

O beautiful our Bowdoin, round thy walls
Three times we've seen October's splendor flash
Like sunset unto flame, and pausing, touch
The faded green of summer into gold:
And, when that fleeting gold was wanton sped
And Nature mourning her debach was clad
In penitential brown, fair Winter like
A kindly chastening angel, wrap the world
In robes of nun-like purity—a dream
Of dazzling days, a veil of radiant nights.
And when at last the glory of that dream
Was past, thrice have we seen the Earth
Awake to duty and to work. Like that Good monk of old who after years of strict Monastic discipline, found Jesus' law
Meant more than fasts and vigils or days of prayer
Before a jewelled shrine, so Earth flings off
Her outworn, spotted veil, and joining hands
With Spring, receives the beauty and the joy
Of useful labor. Thus have we viewed the world,
And found beneath thy wisely tempered care
Each season makes the earth and thee more fair.
Parting from thee, on each succeeding year
Thine ancient halls to us have grown more dear;
And now again shall we, alas, too soon,
Have left thee in the quiet summer noon.

We shall come again anon,
But those we've known the longest,
For whom we've felt the strongest
Ties of friendship, will be gone;

Those from whom we learned the ways
Of generous, manly living,
The art of gently giving
Words of censure and of praise.

We shall mingle with the crowd;
Shall see the chapel spires
Glow with triumphal fires;
Hear the laughter loud and loud.

But our hearts are beating slow;
We feel youth's veil is falling;
And other voices calling
Softly tell us we must go.

On autumn mornings 'mid the rustling leaves—
The sunlight sparkling on the frozen dew—
We've felt primeval forces reaching through
The ages, rousing longings books cannot Subdue, and only life can satisfy.
And when the thousand tiny voices of
The Spring have stirred the pulses in our blood,
We've dreamed the old, old dream, and longed to leave

These dear protecting walls to battle in
The field of life for that which we desire.

Yet, as the diver, strong and brave,
Will hesitate upon the brink,
And hesitating seem to shrink
From plunging in the icy wave,

So we upon the verge of strife
Recoil; are grateful for one year
In which to make our purpose clear,
And consciously prepare for life.

PAUL H. POWERS.

BASEBALL

Colby, 7: Bowdoin, 3

Bowdoin experienced her usual Ivy Day luck in the exhibition game with Colby played on the morning of June 7. The game was exceedingly slow and uninteresting. Bowdoin scored one in the first and two in the third. Colby received one run in the fourth, two in the fifth, two in the seventh and two in the ninth. A small crowd only was in attendance.

PORTLAND, 5; BOWDOIN, 4

Last Saturday the Portland Independents defeated Bowdoin in a fast, interesting game at the Pine Tree Grounds, in Portland. The Portland Press contained a racy account of the game, and it is appended:

It was a typical college game attendance. A bevy of pretty girls, a goodly representation of Bowdoin students, and hundreds of rooters for the locals were on hand and they talked it up in interesting style.

The fans missed “Pop” and “Deacon” Rawson. Both men were absent, being in attendance at the college games in their official capacities as coaches. “Simmy” Bernard covered second in Rawson’s place and was just as much at home there as he has been on the corner sack. McLellan was on third and kept that part of the slate clean.

Dwinal and Sparks kept the argument pretty even throughout, although Sparks had much better support on the receiving end. For some reason, Griffin could not seem to judge Dwinal’s twisters and four of them got by him with disastrous results. Lawrence had two passed ones, this position, on both teams being the weakest. Bicknell dropped one out in right, Lappin one in center garden and Dwinal mis-judged a ground ball. All other attempts by the Portland men were successful.

Only three Bowdoin men faced Dwinal in the first, while Portland started the scoring in this inning. After McDonough had failed to connect, Kilfedder sent a nice, clean hit over Sparks’ head. He went to third on Bernard’s double to right and tallied when Willard was thrown out by G. Bower. Lappin windmilled.

In the second, Stanwood opened with a single, and reached second on Files’ drive to right which Bicknell dropped. A double steal forged both runners ahead a base and both trotted home on a passed ball. That finished Bowdoin’s scoring for the inning, and they were one in the lead.

Dwinal was thrown out by C. Bower in the third. McLellan walked and went to second on a wild pitch. Bicknell was hit at the plate and stole second, both he and McLellan scoring on a bad throw by Lawrence to second and a fumble to Files. Griffin struck out and McDonough singled to right, Mike going around to third on a wild throw by McDade to first and scoring on Kilfedder’s drive to Harris. Bernard fanned. With three runs in this inning, Portland, had a substantial lead.

In the third, a double by Stanwood and an error by Dwinal, and two passed balls by Griffin, sent Abbott home. Nothing doing from this time on until the sixth, when Portland added another run to the list. Lappin singled to right. Dwinal sacrificed prettily, sending Lappin to second and the soldier player scored on a double by Bicknell.

Bowdoin’s next and last tally came in the seventh. C. Bower landed a hit, but was forced out at second when Harris drove one to Lappin. Sparks fled to Bernard and G. Bower smashed one to left, Harris scoring.

Bowdoin, 5; Harvard, 4

Bowdoin ended its season with a rush last Saturday afternoon, when her team defeated Harvard in Cambridge by the score of five to four. When word was received of the victory last Wednesday, a celebration was soon started. After the mass-meeting for election of manager, cheering was heard, a bonfire built, and the student body marched around the campus calling upon the near-by professors for speeches, which were loudly applauded. The only details received of the game in time for publication, were that Sparks pitched for Bowdoin, and held Harvard to four hits, while Bowdoin made eight, and that with the score four to four with two out in the ninth, Harris with a clean hit brought in Files from third base, and won the game.

Drummond, '07, President of the Athletic Council, presided. It was voted this year to elect by ballot at this mass-meeting a cheer leader from the present Junior Class, and an assistant cheer leader from the present Sophomore Class. About 140 men were present, and the elections resulted as follows:

BASEBALL CAPTAIN

At a meeting of the baseball team, held after the Ivy Day game, Harold W. Stanton, '08, was unanimously elected captain for next year.
Coach Morrill A word of appreciation is due by the students to B. C. Morrill who coached the track team this year. He came to Bowdoin last fall drawn by the reputation of “Bowdoin Spirit,” intending ultimately to take a course in the Medical School, and as an aid in his medical work to get the position of track coach for the whole year, taking a year’s course in the academic department. He wished to keep his amateur record, so that as an undergraduate coach, he would be able to compete on the college track team.

He came here at the instigation of Ellery H. Clark, of Boston, by this time well-known at Bowdoin, and with Clark’s recommendation as being the most competent coach he ever knew. Backed by this recommendation, and the support of Doctor Whittier and Colonel Wing, he was engaged as head track coach. He is the first track coach Bowdoin has ever had for a whole year, and he has put more time into his work, and shown as much spirit as most men who have been here three or four years as regular students. He got Ellery Clark to give an illustrated lecture in Memorial Hall on track athletics, gave every afternoon during the whole year to coaching track men, at the same time keeping up his studies and his own track work. He coached for the Sophomore-Freshman meet in the fall, then for the B. A. A. relay team, the indoor meet, the State meet, and the New England meet. He did, without remuneration, all this, which is as much, if not more, than is expected of the track captain, a man who has been at Bowdoin for three or four years and has received the highest honor that Bowdoin can give to her track men.

The very fact that we were getting something for nothing, has made many students think that we were getting but little. But the whole student body, at least, owes its gratitude to one who has shown the spirit and put in the work that Coach Morrill has this year. The results of his work were not victories, but they will speak for themselves. The B. A. A. relay team was in good condition at the meet, and on it ran two new men; it lost by the falling of one of our men when Bowdoin was in the lead. The State meet was lost by one point, 38½ of our 45½ points being ones that were not taken last year. In this meet Coach Morrill competed, though not physically well, took eleven points, and the next week went to Worcester, took first place in the shot-put, winning Bowdoin’s only points.

Auditing Committees The question of the proper auditing of the accounts of all the undergraduates entrusted with the funds of the different college organizations is one of great importance to the undergraduate body. At present the managers of all the teams have to keep their accounts very strictly to see that every item of expenditure has a receipt, and to submit their books to a competent board of auditors at the close of their terms of office. This same rule should be followed in the case of the accounts of the Christian Association, the Glee and Mandolin Club, the Dramatic Club, the Orient and Quill, and each class.

Each of the first three organizations mentioned usually appoints a committee of its members to go over the accounts of its treasurer or manager every year, but there is no auditing system whatever in the case of the Orient and Quill, and what is, perhaps, the most important of all, that of the different classes. In this last case, in the Junior year especially, there is a very large sum, over a thousand dollars, raised by the class for publication of the Bugle and for the Ivy exercises, and this is entrusted to a few men, with no account taken of where it goes. This is not quite fair to the class and, even if the class is satisfied with the present method, it is surely not good business for the Bugle Board and Ivy Committee to have no one to whom to submit their accounts.

As far as the Orient and Quill are concerned, though any loss must be made up by the business managers and no one else has to suffer for it, it would be much better for their accounts to be as carefully kept as those of the managers of the teams. It is not the affair of the managers alone, but of the whole college, which should take pride in the fact that its publications and other undergraduate activities are a financial success and conducted on a strictly business basis. This year the Musical Clubs came out with receipts very much ahead of expenditures. It may be the other way some time and then the members would have to make it up, even as the surplus was divided among them.

The plan suggested is to appoint auditing committees. The two clubs and the Christian Association have already done something along this line, the point to be emphasized is that there should be on each of these committees some member of the faculty or some alumnus living near here. The Christian Association, the Musical Clubs, the Dramatic Club, and each class at the beginning of its Junior year, could each select two of its members to act with this outside person. The committee for the Orient and Quill could be made up of one from each board and a member of the faculty. Probably in the near future there will be a regular auditing committee, whose duty it will be to audit the accounts of all these organizations, but, for the present, the plan suggested will fill the need and should soon be acted upon.

1909 BUGLE BOARD

Last Thursday the Sophomores adopted a new and more satisfactory method of electing its Bugle Board. Two men were nominated by the Sophomore delegations in each fraternity, and two to represent the non-fraternity men. These nominations were put before the class which elected one of the two in each case. The board chosen was as follows: H. H. Burton, Delta Kappa Epsilon; H. F. Kane, Zeta Psi; C. O. Bower, Alpha Delta Phi; J. R. Hurley, Psi Upsilon; K. H. Dresser, Theta Delta Chi; P. G. Bishop, Delta Upsilon; R. H. Files, Kappa Sigma; T. D. Gunn, Beta Theta Pi; C. A. Powers, non-fraternity. Soon after the elections the board organized and elected as its officers, H. H. Burton, editor-in-chief; H. F. Kane, business manager, and P. J. Newman, artist.

1908 BUGLE

On Ivy Day appeared the year book of the Junior Class, the 1908 Bugle. It is a book creditable to the class and college, though not so elaborate as many college annuals, and not as expensive as the 1907 Bugle. This was issued along the lines to be followed next year of trying to cut the cost without changing the general character and purpose of the book.

The cover of the 1908 Bugle was done in the class color, with a striking cover design in gold. The contents resembled in a general way that of the 1907 Bugle, except for a smaller number of drawings and photographs, and for jokes which were not quite so cutting as many of last year's. The board deserves credit for its production, and its hard work, because it was not organized until last October, which left only five months time for preparation, and because the class is so small in number. There are, however, several mistakes in the text of the Bugle, which should not have occurred. One of these, to which it is well to call attention, is that the Bradbury Prize Debate was awarded to the negative instead of the affirmative as stated.

COURSES IN PHILOSOPHY, 1907-8

The course in the History of Philosophy, known this year as Phil. 2, will be extended next year to cover two semesters. The history of Ancient and Medieval Philosophy will fill the first semester, and the history of Modern Philosophy the second. The course of the first semester will be open to Seniors and Juniors and, with the consent of the instructor, to Sophomores. The course of the second semester will be open to those who have already taken any courses in philosophy proper. The hours will be at the convenience of instructor and students.

Phil. 3 will be given, in part at least, by Dr. Burnett.

Students planning to take Phil. 6, 8, or 9 are asked to notify Dr. Burnett before they leave for the vacation that it may be decided whether these courses are to be given.

TENNIS CAPTAIN

At a meeting of the Bowdoin tennis team, Arthur H. Ham, '08, was recently elected captain of next year's team.

DEUTSCHER VEREIN

The Deutscher Verein met at the Gurnet on Tuesday afternoon, and took dinner there. The Verein went down in barges, one party leaving at three o'clock and the rest at five. In the afternoon a baseball game was played, and after dinner, speeches were made in German by the many sub-Vereiners who were invited to the meeting as to a Fishing Bee.

INFORMAL D. K. E. DANCE

On the night before Ivy Day an informal dance was held at the D. K. E. house, and several couples were present from the other chapter houses. The patronesses were Mrs. Harlcy B. Baxter, Mrs. William DeWitt Hyde and Mrs. William M. Pen nell. Among those present were Miss Helen Eaton of Brunswick, Miss Eleanor Adams, Miss Helen Thaxter, Miss Marion Harmon of Portland, Miss Hazel Hanan of Boston Miss Faith Randall, Miss Katharine Randall of Augusta, Miss Ethel McFar land of Dover, N. H., Miss Emma Putnam of Houlton, Miss Olive Griffith of Providence, R. I. Miss Blanche Leonard of Deering Miss Anna Percy of Bath, Miss Pauline Sawyer and Miss Mabel Sawyer of Bangor. Music was furnished by Kendrie, '08, and Hanes, '07, and light refreshments were served. The committee in charge of the dance was composed of A. A. Putnam, '08, G. F. Hyde, '08, and H. H. Burton, '09.

FOOTBALL SCHEDULE

At last Monday night's Athletic Council meeting, Manager C. M. Robinson of Portland submitted the following football schedule, and it was accepted:

Sept. 28—Fort Preble at Brunswick.
Oct. 2—Harvard at Cambridge.
Oct. 5—Exeter at Brunswick.
Oct. 12—Amherst at Amherst.
Oct. 26—Colby at Waterville.
Nov. 2—Tufts at Portland.
Nov. 9—Bates at Lewiston.
Nov. 16—U. of M. at Brunswick.

The Amherst and New Hampshire State games take the dates held last year by Wesleyan, and Cornell. The Amherst game we are glad to see again on our schedule, the New Hampshire game is a novelty, and the Tufts game in Portland will be one worth attending, not mentioning the three state games.

COMMENCEMENT DANCE

Notice is given to the alumni, that a list of the dances as they will come at the Commencement Dance, will be sent by the chairman of the committee in charge, to all alumni who desire one. They may be obtained by notifying Frank L. Bass, 7 South Appleton Hall, Brunswick, Me.

Alumni Notes

CLASS OF 1896

On account of ill health, Mr. Charles K. Hinkley has recently resigned the position of organist of the First Parish Church in Gorham. Of his long service in this capacity the Portland Press speaks as follows: "As an accompanist and director of a chorus choir, Mr. Hinkley has had few equals, and as an improviser he ranked among the best in New England. He has always shown excellent taste in the selection of music. Few churches in the State have been better served than the one in which for two generations he has officiated as organist and director with only occasional periods of absence."

CLASS OF 1897

An admirable class record has recently been issued by the Secretary, Winfield S. Hutchinson, Esq., of Boston. The class numbered twenty-five and among their thirty-one recorded children are eight college graduates. Dr. Wadsworth came to the State in 1901, from the presidency of the Michigan College of Mines, and in this short period has built up this school of mining and metallurgy from an enrollment of ten students to the 150 now taking the course.

Although the Legislature has done practically nothing for this school of mines, nevertheless, by tireless application to his work for six years past, during which time he has not taken a single day's vacation, Dr. Wadsworth has made Pennsylvania State's School of Mines one of the most practically useful and efficient in this country.

SUNDAY CHAPEL

In spite of the showery weather, a large number of students and townpeople listened to the interesting talk of the Rev. William Fenn at Sunday chapel. He said in part: Before a lion trainer descends, on his way to the arena, the passageway, lined with the cages of wild beasts, is thrown down the alley and by this means the keeper is guarded against any beast which might be lying in wait for him in some dark nook. This passageway typifies life; the keeper is but one of the many mortals that must pass along it; the animals, the sins that line the way. The best safeguard that a young man can have, as he starts along the passage, is light, that is purity from secret sin. Openness is to be preferred to secrecy. It is safer, for an open error is seen and understood, while a secret one is often hidden away and may be exposed at a time when it will do a person great injury.

The great fear in which The Judgment was formerly held was due to the fact that men dreaded the time when their secret deeds and thoughts would be exposed to the judge. In view of such a thing a man should live ready to stand forth at any time before the world. The best safeguard for such a life is the Light.

CHEMICAL CLUB

The Chemical Club met at the Delta Upsilon House on June 4. Professor Robinson spoke on the openings for college men in Industrial Chemistry. Marshall P. One Hundred Second Annual Commencement

As is customary, this issue of the Orient contains a record of the Commencement Exercises of the year. It is not necessarily intended to appear as news, but is edited in order that there may be a complete account of the graduation of the class. The Class of 1907 has done well by Bowdoin and Bowdoin may well be proud of this group of sons. Sixty-five men received diplomas this year. The exercises were well attended by alumni and friends of the college.

The first of the exercises of the week occurred on Sunday afternoon when the Baccalaureate Sermon was given by Rev. Charles Herrick Cutler, D.D., of Bangor. His text was from Matthew: "He that findeth his life shall lose it, and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it." He said in substance as follows:

BACCALAUREATE SERMON

"Who is getting the most out of college life? Is it the unsocial fellow who grinds for marks—in the fraternity house makes few friends, on the athletic field plays to the gallery, is always looking out for himself and rarely takes any trouble for any one else; or is it the student who selects his courses and does his college work with some reference to his ideals and his work in the larger world—who takes a generous pride in the honors and welfare of his fraternity, who works for the success of the team, is alive with college spirit and is always ready to lend a hand to a friend in hard luck?"

"Ask yourself whether in those moments when you have become interested in your work—have mingled heartily in the good fellowship of the chapter house and have planned for the welfare of the fraternity—when you worked hard for the team, or have played the game for all you were worth, when you have caught the college spirit, whether in the college cheer or in 'the whispering pines'—and best of all whenever you have instinctively and without calculation gone to the help of your chum with a word of encouragement or to lend a hand. Are not such as these the enlarging and revealing experiences of college life through which a man really comes to himself and knows that he is finding himself?"

"Now I would have you believe that the same principle is at work in the larger world, although to many men it is not apparent until they get out into it. It is delightful to see how a man finds himself as he does his work, whatever it may be, as a form of service, and forgets himself as he throws himself into it. The trained eye, the skilled hand, or the disciplined mind are not found in preparation for one's work, but in the doing of it,"

"Subdued"

"To what it works in, like the dyer's hand."

"The making of the skilled physician and surgeon, the able lawyer and wise counsellor, the useful minister and effective preacher, is not wholly in the professional schools, excellent as they may be, but is found rather, as many of us know, in the practice of our profession. Whatever skill or excellence we have attained in our work has been found in the doing of it. And is not a man's best work always done when he lets himself go and forgets himself in his work? The writer, eager to make his idea clear and vivid, abandons his rhetoric and discovers his style; the speaker, intent upon the thing he wants to say, in his eagerness to make it plain and persuasive, drops his awkward self-consciousness and rises to a moment of real eloquence; the prophet loses himself in his message; the singer forgets herself in her song; the citizen throws himself into the public service without counting the cost, saying, with Secretary Taft: 'I don't speak of rewards. The best of all is the pure joy of service. To do things that are worth while, to be in the thick of it. Ah! that is to live. The business man who, out of many cares and responsibilities, writes incidentally to a friend: 'There's lots of fun in being alive, and too much to do for others to worry about one's own soul.'—These are the men who are finding their life by losing it."

"If I may use a trivial illustration which will be understood only by the elect, it seems to me a good deal like learning to drive golf. You remember how it was. You made a good many awkward attempts at hitting the little white ball, you may even have taken a few lessons from a professional, who pointed out your faults, and showed you just how to stand, hold the driver and address the ball, but your knee was stiff, your elbow cramped, and when, with a jerk, you struck at the ball as if you would make a 'base hit,' you succeeded only in fouling it and in digging up the earth. But the day came, happy day, when you gave up the notion of 'pressing' and forgot all about your right elbow and left knee, and, letting yourself go, just followed the ball through. Then came that indescribable moment of getting off a clean straight drive as the little ball went singing off into space, and you said to yourself: Why, how easy it is! Now what was the secret of it? Simply this. You forgot the rules and found the ball. Exactly so. Do we not realize ourselves at our best whenever we let ourselves free into our task and just swing through it in this spirit of abandon?"

"The man who renounces himself, comes to himself," said Emerson, and is it not true of every true worker in the world? The mother, the teacher, the citizen, the social settler, the sanitary engineer, the missionary, all find their life as they surrender it in the spirit of service even to the point of sacrifice. It is amazing how the service of man, in almost any way, develops manhood and makes the man himself as his horizon of interests widens and his heart grows big and kind as it takes in ever larger measure, human sympathies. The classmate you had not seen in years, who has become the leading educator, the famous surgeon, the honored missionary; how he has grown in stature of manliness—and yet it ought not to surprise you. "Does making the deed," as has been finely said, "but unselfish doing makes the man." Brothers, it's a great thing to surrender self to something bigger than one's self.

"Something was said at the outset, you recall, about the significance of the expression 'finding one's life,' or one's self. Now let us mark this other term of the paradox, losing one's life; that is, loses it utterly—throws it away for my sake—does not such emphasis imply something more perhaps than we have yet found in it? Something more, at any rate, than what we ordinarily mean by being of service, doing one's duty, making one's self useful, and the like? Perhaps there has been something cold and calculating in our thought of finding one's life. It is as if we have yet to detect here a certain uncalculating note of self surrender, not merely of service but of service carried to the point of sacrifice, a mood of abandon, a kind of 'glorious madness,' the letting of one's self go, in which a man throws himself into work as if were a game? I think the idea we are after is caught in that phrase 'playing the game,' which is very ancient, to which I am indebted for both the suggestion and the illustration of it, defines as 'the spirit of the game.' It is, he declares, the deepest motive in the lives of many people, particularly men. What, for example, actsuates the financier to go on piling up surplus wealth, when he cannot spend his income? It is the spirit of the game.

"Why does Darwin risk his reputation as a scientist and incur the scorn of scientists and the bitter criticism of the religious world for the sake of his hypothesis of evolution? It is the spirit of the game.

"Why does the inventor, Edison, forget to eat and to sleep, in the hot pursuit of some new application of electricity? It is the spirit of the game.

"Why does Commander Peary ask once more for leave of absence, and counting home and friends cheap, spend thousands of dollars, risking his life and the lives of others in the perilous attempt to locate a geographical point on the globe, the scientific value of which can hardly be justified to the lay mind? Again the answer is, it is the spirit of the game.

"Why does the beloved physician and missionary, Grenfell, give up his chances for professional reward, leave his country and friends, to carry help and healing to the poor fisherfolk of the deep sea? Once more we say, it is the spirit of the game.

"Now I want to say just this: The spirit of the game, in the sense I have tried to make you see it and feel it to-day, is nothing less than the spirit of Christ and his principle of finding life by losing it. And let us make sure of this: If we miss all the rest, that the man who is playing the game, playing it fair and playing it for all he is worth in this spirit of service for the sake of others, is a Christian man, whatever his name or sign, or even whether he knows it or not. For he is finding his life by losing it for the sake of something bigger and better than himself, and this is the Christianity of Christ, and the Test is only the frills.

"As I see to-day the host of young men and young women who are going out of our colleges and universities, and as I think of their splendid capacity for service and for self-sacrifice as they take up their work in the spirit of the game, I believe we have in them the priceless resources of the republic.

"Those are stirring lines of Henry Newbolt's in which he tells how the ranks of a regiment of British soldiers on the battlefield, exhausted and blinded by smoke and dust, their officers shot—were rallied by the ringing cry of the schoolboy on the cricket field: 'Play up! Play up! and play the game!'

"'This is the word that year by year
While in her place the school is set,
Every one of her sons must hear,
And none that hears it dare forget.
This they all with joyful mind,
Bear through life like a torch in flame,
And, falling, fling to the host behind,
'Play up, play up, and play the game.'"

"The fact, of course, is that the college graduate to-day has no such place of relative importance in the community as he may have held two or three generations ago; when my grandfather, about a hundred years ago settled in a little town in Maine, he was then the first, and for some time the only college graduate in the community—but to-day the same town sends to college hundreds of boys and a few of its girls. I know that there is no position of self-conscious dignity and of unfeigned self-complacency that can be compared for a moment with that of the Senior in college about to step out into the world, and I want to do anything I can to let him down gently; it may serve to break his fall to be reminded that perhaps he has as much to learn from the business man as the business man has from him. However that may be, one thing is sure; the spirit of democracy which is abroad in the land is bound to test the scholar in business and the scholar in industry as it has already tried the 'scholar in politics,' viz., by his serviceableness to the community and by his capacity for leadership; and it is going to apply this test to the educated man as relentlessly as it is now trying to do in the case of the rich man. "What is he worth to society—what is he good for?" that is the question.

"Gentlemen of the graduating class—if your college life has meant anything to you, it has been an experience of finding yourselves. You are now facing the problem of finding your place in the world. But your college life has not meant all it ought, unless it has also taught you the larger lesson of finding life, by losing it.

"The allurements of greed on the one hand, and the opportunities for service on the other, were never so great as they are to-day. Many men are confused and bewildered. It is our part, gentlemen, as educated men, as Bowdoin men, as Christian men, to make this principle of our Master's a bit clearer to the world in the terms of service and self-sacrifice.
ALEXANDER PRIZE SPEAKING

The only noteworthy event of Monday was the Alexander Prize Speaking which occurred in Memorial Hall at 8 p.m. Gen. Oliver Otis Howard, '50, presided over the speaking and entertained the audience by a few reminiscences of his own college life and prize speakings of his time before introducing the speakers. The contest was unusually close and most interesting.

The judges were Stanley Plummer, '67, of Dexter; Edward C. Plummer, '87, of Bath; and Frederick Chamberlin, Esq., of Boston.

They awarded the first prize to Alfred Wheeler Stone, '10; and the second to John David Clifford, '10.

The speakers and their subjects were as follows:

CLASS DAY

Class Day is always the most enjoyable feature of the Commencement week, if not to the alumni at least to the graduating class. The Class Day of 1907 was one of the pleasantest ever held on the Bowdoin campus, and a large host of friends and relatives were present to greet the members of 1907 and attend their last undergraduate social function. Promptly at 10 o'clock, the class, headed by Phillips Kimball, the marshal, and accompanied by the band marched into Memorial Hall, and there the morning exercises were given, consisting of the Prayer, Oration and Poem. The Prayer opened the exercises, delivered by George Herbert Hull. Then followed the oration given by Fulton Jarvis Redmond, and the poem delivered by Charles Wilbert Snow. The officers of the class were: President, William Shepard Limnell; Marshal, Phillips Kimball; Class Day Committee, Frank Lyman Bass, Chairman; Seth Gurney Haley, Dwight Stillwell Robinson. The Oration was in brief as follows:

THE ORATION

Mr. Bryan, whom we all honor and admire and to whom we listened with much pleasure a little over a month ago, said to us: "Young men, you can never repay your college for what you have received from her," and, if it will not seem too presumptuous, we should like to take issue with Mr. Bryan on this point. Instead of the thought, "we can never repay our college," we prefer the thought, "we must repay her."

The brave general whose bust rests at your right, whose home is just across the way, said to himself in the heat of battle, "Little Round Top must be held." How far north would our own Commander Peary ever have gone, if he had said to himself, "The pole never can be reached." Instead of leaving this college with the thought that we can never repay her we prefer to leave with the thought deep down in our hearts, "we must repay her."

How shall we do it?

There are three inherent powers that we can well cultivate. For what we have received, first, should come realization, then appreciation, and greater than these two will be application.

After the excitement and confusion of these few days are over, it would be well for us all to take time to think a little of the things we have accomplished, for we all have accomplished something of the mistakes we have made, the events of our lives, of their causes, their effects, their connections.

Realizing that much has been done for us how shall we appreciate it? Is it sufficient simply to say thank you and forget?

Perhaps the best way for us to show our appreciation will be through application. Application of the lessons we have learned in the worldly struggle which awaits us. To our professors, you who are giving that which is best to the world and whose worldly recompense in comparison is so small, to you we would say that in our own living we hope to profit from your example, that to enlighten our fellow-men with the truth is better than to hoard up gold. From our association we cannot help from living firmer, truer, more manly lives. In our own living, not in dollars and cents, will we repay you.

Our undergraduate associates, from whom we have learned the value of fair, open-hearted dealing and good-fellowship, you we would repay by striving to follow these same principles in contact with our fellow-men of the outside world.

To the alumni we would say that your deeds serve as an inspiration for us to uphold the honor of an institution which you and your predecessors
Bowdoin Baseball Team, 1907
Undefeated Champions of Maine and Winners over Harvard have raised so high. From your example, from the inspiration which we receive from you, we hope to live the lives of honest, broad-minded, kind-hearted, true Bowdoin men.

To our parents we would say simply that the same love, the same self-sacrifice, the same God-speed which we have received from you in these years, in the years to come we will attempt to bestow upon your children's children.

Thus would we repay our Alma Mater by applying in our own living the lessons which have been so generously taught us.

THE POEM

The Poem, by Charles Wilbert Snow, was as follows:

Could we but strike the poet's lyre and find Sweet music that would make the heart overflow, With something of the grace of that rare mind Which Nature gave a hundred years ago, We'd sing with truth the gratitude we owe To her who's nursed us gently year by year— Implanting wheat where tares were wont to grow, And pointing out the distant vision clear,— But ah! the notes fall rough on our untutored ear. What halos 'round thy rich traditions dwell! Dear Bowdoin, guardian of this sacred site We feel our faithful fathers builded well; 'Gainst new-world obstacles and old-world spite. The darkest land is brighter for thy light, The uninviting northland better known, Our civic weal has felt thy touch of white, And Earth's dark secrets yielded up their own, Thy lettered bloom hath riched the peasant cot and throne.

To-day another class will join the throng Of those who tarried for the power on high,— Withdrawing from the battle's smoke and song, To view the issue with unclouded eye— O happy thought! tho far away we hie Our separation cannot be complete, For true as star lights star throughout the sky, Thy spirit with our own has learned to meet, To check us in Success and cheer us in Defeat.

Four years beneath these elm's and round these halls We've felt Art's promptings and kind Nature's aid; The quiet pines and far off rushing falls, The shining stars on lawns light and shade; The sweet, frank converse where distinctions fade, And soul links soul in Friendship's happy bands We've visioned threatening tides of error staid Seen world-old seas exulting on glad lands Because the golden dream had touched men's hearts and hands.

Who says the dreams and visions will be lost, As forth into the bigger world we fare; And hopes be blighted by Strife's chilling front, And all our pure ideals swept in air? As when the sun sinks down in dazzling glare, He leaves behind a prismaed afterglow, So we, though forced to dine on frugal fare, Will ever keep those appetites which go To make Life's bread more fine, its wine more free to flow.

Beneath the outward life of Freedom's ease Deep inward wars are waged through all these years, 'Tis vain to bid the clashing voices cease They'll o'en pass by a mother's tender tears; As when a star for which a sailor steers Glides down beneath a lightower's larger glow Whose gleams remove the sailor's night-long fears; So we, when supernormal lights burn low Have seen Earth's watch-towers rise and brighter light bowstow.

From out these towers on strategetic Heights Has streamed the patient influence of God, Imbuing mighty mounts with Beauty's lights, And adding courage to the hills' dull clod. But O! the long, long ages 'neath the rod We're heart-sick that the Hermors are so few, We'd mantle modest Mizar's struggling sod, Grant small and great the longed for roseate hue, And make them both to know they've God's great work to do.

We feel the time must come when man shall know The mysteries of matter and of mind, And grasp the secret of each inner foe And then—the readjustment of mankind; The unconscious goal of all that lies behind; On that sweet dewy eve of perfect light In looking backward we, perchance, shall find In Sin the birth-pangs of a clearer sight In Hope the gleam of cloud by day, of fire by night.

UNDER THE THORNDIKE OAK

At three o'clock in the afternoon occurred the customary exercises under the Thorndike Oak. The Opening Address, Class History and Parting Address were given and then the class, pursuing the time-honored custom, smoked the Pipe of Peace, sang the Class Ode, marched around the campus and cheered the halls and then said their final farewell in front of the chapel. Nothing is more impressive than the final circle when the "last handshake" is given and the members of the class conclude their exercises of the day and of their college course, by each member saying farewell to every classmate. The Opening Address was delivered by Ammie Blaine Roberts; the History by Robert Alexander Cony; and the Closing Address by Edward Augustin Duddy.

OPENING ADDRESS

The Opening Address was in substance as follows:

This age in which we live is an age of common sense. The rapid spread of higher education and the merciless advance of scientific research have made the world of to-day a logical, practical abode for a rationalistic people. The spirit of the times points the index finger of scientific doubt at whole sections of orthodox religion. And so we are constantly hearing of the conflict between science and religion, of the gospel for an age of doubt.

On our own part we freely admit that we are in sympathy with the rationalistic attitude of the day.
But that we are identified with this accusation of doubt, we admit only in-so-far as such a statement means that we stand ready to question the assertion and groundless guess-work, whether it shakes the campaign spellbinder or emanates from the dimly-lighted sanctuary.

Yet in such a world as this there are many possibilities for misunderstanding. What do we mean by doubt? What do we mean by faith? The man who doubts everything is not a doubter. He is a flouter, he is a mule. The real doubter is essentially a man of faith. He tests a given proposition by reason developed by experience. When he accepts it, he believes in it with the faith that moves mountains.
When he repudiates it, he simply transfers his faith to a worthier object. But all the time this so-called doubter is a man of the deepest-rooted faith. This is what Tennyson referred to, when he wrote,

"There is more faith in honest doubt,
Believe me, than in half the creeds."

And what is faith? Faith is not blind belief in picture language; it is not the unreasoning acceptance of indiscriminate humbuggs. No, for these things make up superstition, and superstition is the fear of the unknown. Faith, on the contrary, belief is something different, something better. Faith is based on knowledge; faith is of the things we know.
Belief in the things that nobody knows is not faith;
it is childish superstition, primitive, barbarous.

Now there are two kinds of faith, head faith and heart faith. So far we have considered only the faith of the intellect, the kind of faith that concerns an age of reason, the kind of faith that attaches to facts and theories and propositions, faith in things knowable.

Heart faith resides in the things we feel, the emotions of the inner life. And it is in this faith of the heart, where beauty is. In affairs of heart and feeling, love and friendship, our belief trusts on—beautiful, unshattered faith.

We are charged with living in an age of reason and an age of doubt. Intellectually this is true.
Otherwise we would stagnate and repeat the history of the Dark Ages. As it is, we are living in an era of progress and, best of all, in the deep heart-meaning of the word, we are living in an age of faith.

And it is because we are living in an age of faith, loving the beauty in you and you have confidence in us, that these exercises are held this afternoon. It is because of this atmosphere of mutual faith, that we welcome you gladly, joyfully to these exercises.

HISTORY

The History was given by Robert Alexander Cony, and is as follows:

To write the history of this band of heroes that I now have before me is no easy task. To do so would require more ability and a greater knowledge of their conduct than is possessed by any one mortal.
For to tell you all a secret, this great class has been making lots of history, but it hasn't all been done in the class room or on the campus, nor on the athletic field. Some have made history in Lewiston, some in Bath, and some even in Topsham. And the worst of it all is, much of it has never been told by those who figured prominently.

Recognizing, then, my own limitations, in the lack of data on many historical events that would surely be of interest, and with apologies to Gibbons, Bancroft, Prescott, Allen Johnson and Jim Voorhees, I will now proceed to tell you some things I know and some I can guess about the famous Class of 1907.

In the first place, I wish to say that I shall not deal with figures unimportant as some details of the great historians of the past have done here under the Thorndike oak. I take it for granted not a single person, with the possible exception of his shoe dealer, cares whether Jim Collins really wears a No. 14 shoe for whether they only look so; or whether Fat
Chandler is really the laziest man that ever entered Bowdoin, or that it is simply a rumor; or whether Frank Jones Weed and Whatmore Whitmore can reach the latch on the library door without highheedled boots, or whether it is a false statement made by those who have watched them try; or, again, whether Winnie Smith is really handier than Joel Fernald, or that Winnie's girl only thinks so. I take it for granted that these are the minor details that a truly great historian like myself should not bother his head with. Therefore, I will proceed with my history.

In the latter part of September, 1903, the fall installation of green goods arrived on the campus.
If I remember correctly, the weather was cloudy and promised rain—a promise which was completely fulfilled by subsequent events, though I am bound to add that it did not come from the open sky as often as it did from open windows. We did not mind this, however, after a while. Still we were not ready for that strange combination administered to us the evening of the night shirt parade from the windows of the North Wing to the Bowl, perhaps. Perhaps it was this incident that gave one or two of our members such a great antipathy for water during subsequent years.

But before going further, as a chronicler of great events, I feel bound to mention the great oration delivered in front of the old Tontine by Pete Small the evening before college opened. "Pete" has not distinguished himself in oratory during his course, choosing rather the more modest field of gym work, in which he has been taking special work under the guidance of Doc Whit and his first assistant acrobat, George Parcher, but those who heard Pete speak on that September evening, feel sure that it is only his modesty that is keeping him from being a true Demosthenes. Pete had all the articulation that is supposed to come only after a thorough training in Professor Mitchell's famous "Hello, John, Where Are You Going," he had all the pleading, persuasive powers of Fulton Fell-in-the-brook Redman; and finally, he possessed all the logic which the better-known and more despicable Mitchell—Harry, the Midnight Howler—displays in his famous oration entitled "Flow, When and Where to Hit a Golf Ball." But I am digressing.

We went to chapel that first morning, after the habit of Freshmen. Doc Whit was there as usual with a determined look—and so was the molasses. The difference between the two was that the former depended on his looks to keep us spellbound, while the molasses depended on its hold.

I may say that '07 was a good big class by the end of that first week. I don't remember just how many there were, but as near as I can recall, its size resembled the age of some of the Brunswick belles—that is to say, 70 odd.

We did not know each other as well Freshman year as we do now. Wilbert Snow, the great poet and student of Sanscrit, had not entered into the bonds of holy matrimony with Ammie Blaine Roberts, nor had Tom Hacker and Brick Drummond joined the Lisbon Falls German Club, which I must explain here, has no affiliation with the Deutscher Verein. Neither had Frankie Bass and Bill Haines become joint members of the primary division of the Congregational Sunday School.

On the whole, we got along quite nicely. Your first year, nearly everybody behaved themselves but Bill Speake, and nobody expected he would. So no one was disappointed. He visited the neighboring borough occasionally, felt perfectly free to give due notice of his return on the midnight, and he told the upperclassmen to remove themselves to a warmer climate if they didn't like his ways.

Winnie Smith didn't fare as well. He got fresh one evening and the late Class of 1906 removed a large percentage of his hair's growth, and the worst of it was that it was not done in the same artistic manner and with the same view to beauty that our friend Joe would have done it. Still, it did not prove a permanent injury and Winnie has taken to himself a sweetheart in these later years.

We were not especially successful in athletics that year. We lost two games of baseball despite the fearful and wonderful game put up by Fat Chandler behind the bat. The first game, by a score of 8 to 7, and the second 13 to 7. In football we were just as unlucky, losing by a score of 11 to 0. In track, however, we showed what we were really good for, tying with the Seniors for first place with 22 points.

Sophomore year came space and passed off very successfully. There were, however, several events of such importance that an impartial chronicler cannot pass them by. Among these were Ammie Roberts' psychological experiments with white tennis shoes. Ammie had become interested in psychology and had performed several rare experiments to the great delight of his instructor, among which was standing on his head while eating breakfast, sleeping with his feet stuck out the window, and lastly, trying to imagine himself a second Daniel Webster. Then he tried to draw like Dr. Grenfell with such delightful results that he took up the tennis shoe racket, and was able to deduce the startling result that when it was cold his feet had a "feeling" of coldness, and when it rained they had a "feeling" of wetness. These results are considered a great achievement of the age by both his professor and Ammie. Some of Ammie's classmates have suggested that he soak his head for the psychological effect, but he has never concluded to do so.

And speaking of Ammie reminds me of another great member of our class—Charles Wilber Homer Snow. They are great chums—Homer Snow and Socrates Roberts. They drink together, eat together and sleep together—that is, when they sleep, for they sit up late o' nights each telling how brilliant he thinks the other is. Robert Burns Duddy belongs to this category somewhere, but as our economic professor would say, "More of this later," for ye shall hear Robert shortly, if you and I and he survive to the end of this history.

Among other events of Sophomore year was the announcement of Tommie Hacker's engagement and Fat Chandler's first and futile attempt to pass off his extra course. He has tried it twice since and has at last succeeded. Fat is a persistent youth and as you see is bound to be a winner. This was also the year that Fult Redman fell off the bridge out by the golf links, and narrowly escaped from drowning.

I don't remember much of anything else about that year except that we won both ball games from the Freshmen—the first by a score of 23 to 6, and the second 7 to 6. In football we were victorious by a score of 11 to 0, and we rounded out the year by winning the Indoor Meet with 34½ points, while our nearest competitors, the Seniors, had but 10½.

Junior year arrived according to schedule. I don't remember of any one studying except Eddie Pope and Sam Erskine. Sam studied because Daniel Webster did when he was in college, and Eddie studied the same as Mitchell smokes cheap cigars—from pure cussuedness. Snitch Upton began to shine in golf so much that it began to interfere with his college courses. About this time, and Frankie Webb began to reform, while Hacker, otherwise known as Whacker, went the other way.

We had several new members arrive with the fall season. There was String and Jolup Webber, Shorty Whitmore, Lengthy Adams and last but not least, Parson Hull. A strange lot, I must admit, and it is pertinent that I speak of them briefly. Jolup, I will say, is a pretty good fellow and has behaved himself well for the most part; String, his brother, has also done fairly well. The worst thing that can be said about him is that he takes an occasional trip in Mitchell's Night Wagon. Still, he may live this down. Soxalaxis Adauna, fresh from the Penobscot tribe, has also done well. He chums with Frankie more or less, while String, being a big fellow, acts as a sort of leader on his character. They look funny going around together, but Frank hangs onto Sock because he thinks Sock stands well with the opposite sex, and according to Frankie's highest ideals that's the true essence of life. Once they took their sweethearts out to the golf links. Frankie's girl was a grammar school student, as usual, and people along the street thought of it as wasting her time, but it was Sock and his family, Still, Frankie says he hopes to be a man some day, and says he intends to raise a moustache as soon as he can for he says the ladies tell him they think he would look well with one. Here's hoping he succeeds in both.

But I have not told you about the Parson—that greatest acquisition to 1907—that peerless orator, that prince of parliamentarians, that famous political—and Parson Hull. As shown Upton in golf, as Snow in poetry and Bruce Sargent among the ladies, so shines Hull among orators. His greatest victory was in the great debate over simplified spelling. Hull was opposed to it. The way he proved his many points brought tears to the eyes. He proved beyond a shadow of a doubt that if Roosevelt's spelling was adopted, Peary could never reach the pole; that the Brown-Tail Moth would overrun Topsham; the Japanese would bombard San Francisco; that New Meadows Inn would close and last not least the people of South Freeport would go to the hot climate. At the conclusion Professor Foster told the audience that the debate was beyond his ability to criticize—and Hull's name and fame was secure forever. I don't remember anything further about Junior year, except that we won the Indoor Meet—as usual.

Senior year drew on apace. We have all enjoyed ourselves and have done nothing in particular. In the early part of the year Neal Doherty and Charlie Thomas worked overtime trying to raise a moustache. Neal said he thought with a moustache he could fool Prof. Ham into thinking that he was working too hard on the German to have time to shave. He tried everything on that moustache, beginning with cold cream and ending with a vigorous dose of Dr. Whitt's hunyadi water. They all failed and now he says he is ashamed of the whole affair. He ought to be.

As I have already stated, I shall not undertake to give statistics or anything like a definite forecast of the future intentions of this all-star aggregation. I feel safe in saying, however, that Snitch Upton will never do much of anything unless he has to; and that Harry Brown's another. I haven't a doubt that Hacker will marry as soon as he can find a minister after he gets his "dip" Thursday. Further than that I have nothing to say.

In conclusion I might add that we have not been much different than the average class. Possibly we are not the most brilliant class and I am sure we are not the worst. We are not all as good as Parson Hull nor all as bad as Bill Speake. On the whole, we are an average lot. We have enjoyed our four years beneath the whispering pines and if we do nothing worse in the next few days than we have in the past four years, our college course on Thursday will be, like this history, at an end.

THE CLOSING ADDRESS

This was delivered by Edward Augustin Duddy and he closed with the following words:

"We have anticipated a little, the difficulties and the changes that are to come, but ever from this day things will never be quite the same to us again. The campus will never look just the same as it does now. Maine Hall and Winthrop and Appleton—the very sound of old King Chapel bell will seem different because we will be different. We will come back again, yes, but there will be one or two faces missing, always one or two. Or it will be an old instructor that we all knew and loved, he will be missing. And those that do come back won't be just the same to each other; there will be marks of a new conflict in the old familiar faces. It will be a different world then, with the old days' life a dim golden dream in the far-off past. It will be a world of pleasant recollection in which the Class Day of 1907 will be memorable. It is hard to think that that world is so close at hand, and this so nearly at an end. Yet we would not shirk our share of the world's burden more than Bowdoin men have done before us, but with hearts brave yet tender, go forth, go forth from the old mother to live and fight and die in our death to live."

THE PARTING ODE

The Parting Ode by Edward Augustin Duddy was written to the air, "Come Back to Erin," and was as follows:

Bowdoin, we leave thee, O Mother Beata! Leave thee, but leave thee as never before.
Thy sons forever, we sing in thy honor,
Our parting tribute to thee we adore.
Dear were the hours that we passed in thy bosom,
Fond are the memories we bear in our hearts,
Softly the leaves in the trees sigh above us,
Sad are thy sons when 'tis time to depart.

CHORUS

Then farewell to Bowdoin, our dear Alma Mater
Farewell, the scenes and the friends that we knew.
Clasp hands, O comrades, the sun's getting lower,
And it's the parting of friends good and true.

And through life's journey whate'er fate's sorting,
Backward our thoughts we will aye turn to thee,
Back to the moment of sadness and parting
When from thy guidance we went forth so free.
Faint the' heart's in darkness and struggle,
Dim tho' our eyes with sad memory's tears,
Thy halls will rise like a vision of splendor,
Strong with new hope we will fly 'cross the years.

COMMENCEMENT DANCE

In the evening, as a finale for the day, occurred the annual Commencement Hop, which was a most brilliant and enjoyable social function. The Hall was simply but tastefully decorated with flowers and potted plants. The committee very sensibly did not mar the natural beauty and dignity of the hall by the aid of streamers and fancy paper, but let the hall itself speak plainly the purpose for which it was intended. The Committee of Arrangements was Frank L. Bass, Seth G. Haley, and Dwight S. Robinson. Music was furnished by Pullen's Orchestra. The patronesses were Mrs. William DeWitt Hyde, Miss Helen Chapman, Mrs. Franklin C. Robinson, Mrs. George T. Fales, Mrs. Roscoe J. Ham, Mrs. Roswell C. McCrea.
Came from Medford, Massachusetts, was a member of Alpha Delta Phi, made Phi Beta Kappa at the end of Junior year, was manager of the Tennis Team and identified with many undergraduate interests.

It means little to say that both were "popular," and it seems trite to repeat it. Both were more than popular, they were whole-souled, clean-cut college fellows. They were loyal college men, hard workers for class and Alma Mater. Both were good students, but more than that both were fine fellows.

It is not now in the summer time when class and college mates are scattered that we will miss them. It is hard to believe now, but how will it be when once again we gather in the dormitory and chapter house and those faces are not there to greet us? Then it will be that we will realize what Death is, and what Death has taken from us. To the relatives the Orient extends its sincere sympathy, to all their many friends, as one of their former friends itself, it can but say "God's will be done."

PROFESSOR R. H. HAM

Bowdoin College this spring loses Prof. R. H. Ham, for next year he has accepted the Professorship of French at Trinity College. The student body greatly regrets the loss of Professor Ham, for during his six years at Bowdoin he has proved himself one of the most capable men on the faculty, and not only has given those in his classes a thorough and valuable instruction, but he has won the love and respect of all his students by his absolute fairness and square dealing. Professor Ham is a native of Peabody, Mass., he fitted for college at the Lexington (Mass.) High School, went to Harvard at the age of 17, and graduated in 1896. The next two years he spent in graduate study at Harvard and the University of Berlin; he then spent two years as an instructor of French at the Cascadilla School, Ithaca, N. Y. At the end of that time, in 1901, at the age of 26, he came to Bowdoin as an instructor of Modern Languages, and in 1903 he was made Assistant Professor of Modern Languages. The whole student body, and especially every member of the Deutscher Verein, is sorry to see him leave us, and was glad to see the recognition taken of Professor Ham's services by the college authorities in awarding to him at Commencement the well-deserved degree of Master of Arts.

MEDICAL SCHOOL GRADUATION

The members of the graduating class arrived on the morning train from Portland and shortly before the hour set for the exercises, formed in line before the Medical Building, and headed by Payne's Second Regiment Band, marched to the Congregational Church.

They were followed in the line by the faculty of the Medical School, who took seats on the platform. Dr. Mitchell, dean of the school, presided, and the prayer was offered by Rev. C. H. Cutler of Bangor.

The address was by Hon. Frederick A. Powers, LL.D., of Houlton, of the Class of 1894.

Mr. Powers spoke first of what should be the attitude of the graduates in regard to their life work. He said that the practice of medicine was a great and honorable profession. It had a great past and its field of usefulness was one that was increasing. He said great discoveries have been made and more will be made in the future and the way for one to achieve success in this or any other field is to aim high. He emphasized the fact that it is the individual that counts, and not the profession. Man makes the profession, not the profession the man. On this basis the success of a life work depended on the man himself. He said that the great test of a man is service to his fellow-men and the medical profession offers great opportunity in such work.

The speaker then discussed the attitude of the man toward public life. There are a great many problems that are demanding solution and it is the educated man who should take a prominent part. Such men should be active rather than negatively critical, for activity is the only way the best results can be accomplished.

The program of the exercises was as follows:

EXERCISES COMMEMORATIVE OF THE ONE HUNDREDTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIRTH OF HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW

The Bowdoin Commencement of 1907 was known as the Longfellow Centennial, marking as it does, the one-hundredth year since the birth of Henry W. Longfellow, the Poet. The name of Longfellow signifies the greatest graduate the college ever had. As to Dartmouth there is none who stands equal with Webster, so to Bowdoin no son stands in just the rank with Longfellow. Bowdoin is justly proud of her many famous sons; and of these many the name of Longfellow is always mentioned first. On Wednesday afternoon the church was crowded to the doors to listen to the special exercises commemorative of that man who on a similar day twenty-seven years ago, spoke himself in the same edifice that famous parting address, Morituri Salutamus. These exercises were the special features of the Commencement Week. At three o'clock the trustees, alumni, and faculty met at King's Chapel and formed in line. Fully two hundred were in the procession and marched to the Congregational Church. The members of the boards and faculty led the procession, clad in the academic cap and gowns. Hon. Augustus F. Moulton, ’77, of Portland, was marshal. After all had been seated in the church the fourteen members of the Class of 1857 arrived at the church and while everyone in the audience arose they slowly marched down the aisle to the front of the church where seats had been reserved. As they reached their seats the big audience burst into applause. The exercises were opened with a prayer, offered by Rev. John Carroll Perkins, of Portland. The poem was delivered by Rev. Samuel Valentine Cole, Class of 1874. Prof. Henry Leland Chapman, Class of 1866, delivered the Oration.

THE ORATION

To speak of Longfellow in this place, and to this audience, is a privilege—a privilege none the less though speech do not rise to the height of the subject and the occasion. The place is hallowed by the memory of his living presence and voice, when he was already crowned with the beauty of age, and with the honor of the world. The audience is composed, in part at least, of those whose feeling of reverence for the poet is made tender, and in some measure personal, by the strong and subtle tie that binds together the sons of a common Alma Mater. It is a fellow-alumnus whose character and work we commemorate, now that a hundred years have passed since his life began, and twenty-five years since it ended.

It is true, of course, that, like all poets, he belongs to everyone that has found pleasure, or comfort, or inspiration, in his verse; and his fame is one of the cherished treasures of the land. Yet it seems to be our privilege, as it certainly is our pride, to feel that, in some sense, he belongs peculiarly to us. He was a student, a graduate, and a professor of Bowdoin, and, through all the years that followed his residence here, he cherished and expressed for the college a deep and filial regard. He was still an undergraduate when the “phantom of fame” rose upon his vision, and he wrote to his father, “I most eagerly aspire after eminence in literature. My whole soul burns most ardently for it, and every earthly thought centres in it.”

As he has, himself, recorded, it was in No. 27 Winthrop Hall, the eastern windows of which looked out upon the grove of fragrant pines, that he wrote the poems which, appearing in the United States Literary Gazette, attracted not a little attention, and in many minds associated the initials “H. W. L.” with the most hopeful verse produced at that time in New England.

It was here that he returned, after three rapturous and fruitful years in the Old World, to begin his work as a teacher amid the scenes which witnessed his diligence as a student. On the fiftieth anniversary of his graduation, he did, in this place, what he could scarcely be persuaded to do elsewhere,—he read a poem to a public audience; in which, in his inimitably modest way, he laid a tribute, wrought equally of art and of affection, at the proud feet of his Alma Mater. That was a memorable scene, as some who are present to-day will recall. The floor and galleries, the pews, the aisles, and even the window-ledges of this historic church, were crowded with people who held their breaths to catch the spoken music of his salutation:

“O ye familiar scenes,—ye groves of pine,
That once were mine, and are no longer mine,—
Thou river, widening thro’ the meadows green
To the vast sea, so near and yet unseen,—
Ye halls, in whose seclusion and repose
Phantoms of fame, like exhalations, rose
And vanished,—we who are about to die Salute you.”

Do you suppose the college will ever forget that salutation, or cease to claim the poet as her own? Not her own in any jealous or exclusive sense, but in the proud and grateful sense in which a mother claims as her own the son whose achievements in the world of men reflect glory upon the household from which he went, and to which his feet sometimes, and his affections always, return.

It was a characteristic and beautiful trait of Longfellow that he cherished an abiding interest in the ancestral line which led him back to the cabin of the Mayflower, in the city of his birth and happy boyhood, and in the college where he passed the years of his youth and early manhood; and he has written them all in words that never lose their grace and beauty, more than does the familiar lapping of the wave upon the beach, or the ever-recurring flush of the sunset cloud.

Many who have never visited his boyhood home, or seen the “shadowy lines of its trees,” the “fort upon the hill,” and the “breezy dome” of Deering’s woods, yet hear in the exquisite melody of My Lost Youth—that song of early memories—the elemental chant of the human heart, singing to itself in quiet monotone of the scenes and associations which are not so much remembered, as wrought into the continuous fabric of a life of which the conventional distinctions of Yesterday, To-Day and To-Morrow, are phases and not fragments. Striking as is the poem in form, and simple in substance, no poetist has laid frivolous or profane hands upon it. Nature and art are so wedded in it that the twain have indeed become one; and it will go on singing to generation after generation a song that will touch the hearts of men and women everywhere.

The explanation of Longfellow’s universal and unique appeal is to be found, partly, in the essential nature of his art. The truest art is that which holds fast in its motives and methods, the simplicity of nature, and lays upon the human spirit a spell not unlike that which is wrought, in a thousand familiar ways, by nature herself. The sunshine is a “glorious birth” not only to Wordsworth, but, consciously, or unconsciously, to men the world over. The dull monotone of the sea, and the ripples of the brook, are soothing sounds to the ear, but he who hears them finds that, in some mysterious way, they are forthwith changed to dreams and fancies in the soul. The plaintive or cheerful note of a lone bird in the still depths of the forest stirs in the listener a half-conscious sympathy for what seems like a remote and unshared ecstasy of joy or sorrow. The little flower that peeps timidly forth amid the withered and tangle debris of a waste place, brings a sudden light into the eye that sees it, and starts thoughts that are, perhaps, "too deep for tears."

It is by such means as these, simple, familiar, unobtrusive, that nature often appeals to what is deepest within us, and lays a wondrous spell upon the imagination and the heart. And the art which appeals most widely and strongly to men shares, or at least, reflects this simplicity of nature. Such is pre-eminently the character of Longfellow's art. It is simple, lucid, and human, both in its expression, and in the themes with which it deals. It has other notable characteristics also, like sincerity, flexibility, delicacy, and tact; but in its simplicity probably lies the special reason why its appeal is, in some measure, universal, like the appeal of Nature.

The complaint is sometimes made, not alone of Longfellow, but of other poets as well, that the sentiment of which their poetry is the expression is familiar and common, and that being so native to the human heart, it has long been in its holding that the verse in which it is enshrined is so far, of an inferior order. The criticism is, of course, shallow, and not less shallow because it often assumes a lofty tone. What is pronounced a defect in the poetry is, in fact, that which insures its permanent hold upon men. The sentiment which is new, or strange, or paradoxical, sentiment peculiarly proper to prose, may in poetry also, stir a feeling of curiosity and interest; but the feeling is likely to be transient. It is like the guest of an hour, whose coming, indeed, is welcome, but whose visit is of brief significance, and is soon forgotten. But the sentiment which is familiar, because it is the spontaneous flowering of our nature, is perennial and abiding; and is like the friend, whose accustomed place is by the intimate heath-fire, and whose absence makes a void that cannot be filled.

Poetry which is the product of ingenious conceits, and subtle speculations, and morbid fancies, may have a temporary vogue, and may make a special appeal to individuals; but the poetry which clings to the memory, and comforts, and refreshes, and purifies the heart, is that which deals sincerely and nobly with the commonplace feelings of love, and duty, and sorrow, and the home affections, and the sweetness of childhood, and the serenity of age, and the reverent fearlessness of death. The one kind of poetry is the curious, and often beautiful, fabric wrought by the human intellect; the other is the human reflection, more or less imperfect, of the divine wisdom which has made us what we are.

The appreciation of Longfellow, like the appreciation of all true poetry, demands of us an attitude of sympathy and reverence for the things which, because they are not of human origin, are ever-repeated, and fundamental, and commonplace.

The "divine" Sir Philip Sidney, as his contemporaries, not without reason, delighted to call him, remarks in his Apologie for Poetrie, that "of all sciences the Poet is monarch. "He cometh to you with words set in delightful proportion; and with a tale forsooth he cometh to you; with a tale which holdeth children from play, and old men from the chimney corner; and pretending nothing more, doth intend the winning of the mind from wickedness to virtue."

Of that ideal of a poet, which is as old as the art itself, Longfellow is an admirable exemplification. He comes to us with a tale which, by its vivid and picturesque charm holds children from play, and old men from the chimney corner. The narrative may be an avowed tale like those which were told with Chaucerian grace in the Wyclase Innomyn, or it may be in the form of an idyl, a ballad, or an epic; but it is always well-ordered, graceful in style, lucid in language, and happy in the adaptation of the metre to the theme. He employed many varieties of English verse, and an unerring instinct led him to choose the form fitted to his subject. For the tale of Evangeline, an idyl of wondrous beauty and tenderness and pathos, and for the Courtship of Myles Stanish, that picture of stern Puritanic life, relieved by a delicate and engaging strain of humor, he made the bold and deliberate choice of the hexameter form of verse. Forthwith the critics began to demonstrate that the metre was of necessity harsh, halting, and unsuited to English verse; that the attempt to adapt a classical metre, however musical in its origin, to the peculiarities of English speech, had always been a failure, and must continue to be a failure. But while they were busily engaged in proving that the verse could not be pleasant to the ear, or inviting to the reader, the gentle idyl, with its sweetness and sincerity, and grace, was winning its way to all hearts, and charming all ears; so that the reader or hearer of it was tempted, at its conclusion, to apply to the poem itself the description of its heroine:

"Homeward serenely she walked, with God's benediction upon her;
When she had passed it seemed like the ceasing of exquisite music."

Another experiment in metrical form was made by Longfellow in the poem of Hiawatha. This may fairly be called a kind of epic, for, while strikingly unique in form, it is scarcely more unlike the classical type of epic than is the Faery Queen of Spenser, or Tennyson's Idyls of the King. It relates the primeval traditions, and describes the dial life, of a shy, mysterious people, of whom the little that is known invests them with a strange, romantic interest. Under the poet's spell, we sit by them at the door of the lodge, and go with them to hunt in the forest; with them we shoot the rapids in a birch canoe that floats on the river.

"Like a yellow leaf in Autumn,
Like a yellow water lily."

We are charmed observers of their wooing, and guests at their wedding feast. We seem to partake in their blithe fellowship with bird and beast, and to share in their stoical suffering and grief. We listen to their simple and stately talk, and become familiar with their superstitions, and feel the charm of their childlike faith. It is a strange world of primitive manners and speech where the human life is in closest contact with the life of nature. The poem has no prototype, and will have no successor. The metre in which it is written is a most skilful adaptation of form to subject and purpose. It was borrowed from an ancient Finnish poem, and Longfellow's unfailing artistic sense perceived its fitness for his purpose. He was to tell of the doings of a rude folk, living in the forests, sharing some of the traits, as they shared the companionship, of the wild animal life about them, having a limited stock of words and ideals, and with the superstitions natural to their savage state. What could be better suited to this purpose than the short, rapid, trochaic lines, full of parallelisms and repetitions, the model of which he found in the old Finnish poem, and adopted, with an added grace of his own? The people took the poem home to their hearts, and they identified the poet with the sweet Indian singer, Chibiabos; and when Longfellow was borne to his burial, his own words were his fitting requiem:

"He is dead, the sweet musician!
His is gone from us forever!
He has moved a little nearer
To the Master of all music;
To the Master of all singing!"

A strange, pathetic thing in the closing years of Emerson's life was the failure of his memory to recall the words that he wanted. He had been, through his life, a master of words. They seemed to wait upon him, rich, pregnant, vivid words,—ready to his call, like alert and obsequious servants, eager and able, like Prospero's Ariel:

"To tread the ooze of the salt deep,
To run upon the sharp wind of the North,
To do him business in the veins o' the earth
When it is baked with frost."

No homely lesson, no poetic imagining, no ethereal vision, but it came from him in words that carried their humble or their mystic message deftly and clearly into the minds of men. But the power failed him. His richly-livered retinue of slaves no longer responded to his need. He groped pitifully in vain, for words and names which had always seemed to anticipate his summons.

In those days of pathetic failure, a short time before his own death, he was present at the funeral service of his friend Longfellow. During the service he rose, and, going to the side of the coffin, looked intently upon the face of the dead poet. A few moments later he rose again, and looked once more upon the familiar features. Then he said to a friend near him, "That gentleman was a sweet, beautiful soul, but I have entirely forgotten his name."

It was an interesting and instructive incident. The name of his cherished friend might be lost in the mist that had gathered about his memory, but nothing could blot from his consciousness the significant fact that the still face, into which he looked, was the face of a serene and blameless spirit.

It is not permitted us to look upon the living or the dead features of the poet, except as they are chiseled or drawn for us in bust or portrait; but we may look again and again, as often as we will, into the poems which bear the impress of his spirit; and if words fail us to describe the secret of their charm we shall still feel with Emerson that he who wrote them was a "sweet, beautiful soul."

THE POEM

A POET'S CENTENARY

BY SAMUEL VALENTINE COLE, '74

I.

We were a busy people; axes rang,
And anvils; when amid the days' turmoil
A melody crept; a master came and sang,
And charmed the workers, sweetening all the toil
As Orpheus did, who once, with flinte to lip, Helped mightily at the launching of the ship.

And in and out among us many a day
He went, this singer, with his happy strain;
Greeted the little children at their play;
Was present at the hanging of the crane;
Blessed maidenhood and manhood; blessed the birds:—
His life beat like the sunshine through his words.

At last he said upon occasion high,
The light of seventy summers in his face,
"O, Caesar, we who are about to die Salute you," and he said it from this place,
With aged comrades round him who should all
So soon restore life's armor to the wall.

Those men have passed into the Silent Land,
Their earthly battles ended; many a change
Has crept on us beneath time's moulding hand,
And on these scenes with faces new and strange;
But not on him; the magic of his art
Still penetrates the citadel of the heart!

And where he once has entered to delight
And cheer and strengthen, linger he must and will;
Oft mingling with the voices of the night
Some fragment of his song to haunt us still,
Or to lure to far-off realms, and unawares
Scatter in flight an Arab host of cares.

A hundred years—how old he would have been!
And yet how young; for, as we turn his page,
We mark the throbings of a life within Old as the world and new to every age,
Beauty and love and sorrow—from such themes
Uprose the golden fabric of his dreams.

II.

"God sent his singers upon earth," he said;
What were the earth without them? what were life
We call so glorious but games and bread.
Sordid existence or ignoble strife,
Were there no voices crying to the soul,
Nor any vision of life's path and goal?

The truth we need and wait for may at times
Break suddenly on us like a cannon's roar,
But oftener comes in faintest clink chimes
Blown o'er the border line from some dim shore,
Or yet, as blind and helpless as we are,
It comes in perfect stillness like a star.

Ay, even invisible as the air that rolls,
Stand great unproven truths which, as we must,
We build our lives upon, and stake our souls,
Outweighing knowledge with our hope and trust,—
Truths which keen Science, labor as she may,
Can never explain—and never explain away!

Science may guide o'er many a hill and plain,
Revealing how the pathways meet and part;
But for life's pathless and uncharted main,
Whereon our surest pilot is the heart,
We need their vision unto whom belong
The mystery and the mastery of song!

"Listen! behold! believe! are tones that fill
The poets' signs and symbols manifold,—
Those fables of the ever-singing hill,
Isles of the Blest, cities with streets of gold,
Enchanted castles, youth restoring streams,
And all the El Dorados of our dreams!

For song, indeed, is truth full-winged with power;
A faithful voice that calls us from afar;
An impulse from some land where every hour
God's truth reigns sovereign; some hope-bringing star;
Some sword that stirs the spirit, as were stirred
The Prophets and Apostles of the Word!!

The poets go before us; they discern
Across these spaces of life's gloom and glow,
The great ideals that ever live and burn;
They break all pathways without fear, and lo,
They travel onward, keeping still in sight
Some pillar of cloud by day, of fire by night.

The blessed poets save us—not the kings,
And not the warriors; no great human wrongs
Have they e'er stood for; no great rightful things
But they have loved and cherished; by their songs
We march and prosper; by their torches' rays
The world moves forward into nobler ways.

And in their hands for gracious use they bear
The crownéd gift of immortality;
The songless cities perish in thin air
Empires dissolve; old customs cease to be;
But aught that is, though flung by others by,
The poets touch it and it cannot die!

Still Homer's heroes live and talk and fight;
The old men chirs of Helen; beacons flare
From Ilium on to Argos in the night;
Penelope does not of her lord despair,
But ravels still the day's work with her hands,
And still Nausicaa by the pillar stands.

How marvelous time's world-structure named of Song,
With masonry of dream-stuff, and with halls
Of golden music! yet severe and strong;
Whereon decay's dark shadow never falls;
A miracle of the masters from all lands
And from all times—this house not made with hands!

Ah! silently there sweeps before my eyes
A vision of three poets dear to all
Who feel the touch of beauty, and who prize
The nobler voices that around us fall;
Each from a different land, but all the three Facing the morning of a world to be.

Lo, Roman Virgil! at whose wizard name
Things lost their power to change and pass away;
Troy burns and does not vanish in the flame;
A great queen greets the exiles; still to-day
Men hear, as by the Tiber's side they stroll,
The funeral hymn of young Marcellus roll.

Lo, also, England's Virgil! Arthur reigns Forever in the halls of Camelot;
Fair women sacrifice for noble gains
Who never will grow old or be forgot;
And those three Queens that helped are helping still
The men who help to banish human ill.

And, pray, why lingers Hiawatha so?
Why must Priscilla and John Alden stand
Telling the old, old tale, and never go?
Wherefore this many a year throughout the land
Keeps sad Evangeline her unwearied quest?
The answer is—our Virgil of the West!

Three Laureates of three great peoples! Each,
In golden phrase and music-laden words,
Moulded to sweetest use his country's speech;
Loved simple things, touched ever the common chords,
Winning the people's heart, and lived to hear
The praises of the world sound in his ear.

The realm of books each ever loved to roam,
Finding new glories for the song he wove;
Sang childhood, the affections of the home,
And the dear constancy of woman's love;
Found tears in human things, and evermore
Stretched yearning hands out toward the farther shore.

They sang that men should faint not, but endure,
Follow the gleam, and wear the fadeless flower
Of hope forever; that the goal is sure
For those who strive and trust the Heavenly Power.
They lived pure lives and gentle, nor through all Uttered a word they ever need recall.

So like in their unlikeness, that I dare
(As else I dare not) name them side by side;
Swayed by one mood and spirit; as they fare,
The spaces close between them, else so wide;
While their immortal echoes strike across
All tumults hitherward, nor suffer loss.

IV.
Bowdoin, dear Mother, to thy listening ear
His step falls on these pathways as of yore;
Again the Boy's will is the wind's will here,
And his the long, long thoughts' of youth once more;
For thine he was when first the vision came
To him of the alluring face of fame.

He caught the paths from thy murmuring pines,
The melody from thy river, beauty and light;
From the fair sky above thee where the signs,
Thick with white worlds, roll solemnly by night;
Thy son, and master in the art divine,
All this he wrought into his illustrious line.
But chiefly—for he knew what springs had fed
His youthful spirit in its purpose high—
Did he remember—on the day he said
That he was old and was about to die—
With gracious words of tenderness and truth,
The faces of the teachers of his youth.

Thrice happy are such teachers, with the dower
Of knowledge and of counsel in their hand!
They sit forever at the springs of power.
And, from these quiet places of the land,
No trumpet blowing and no flag unfurled,
They shape the forces that will shape the world.

Ah! as once more we walk these shades among,
What visions from the bygone years arise!
The faces, O, the faces, how they throng,
And pass, and come again, with friendly eyes,
And fill, for each of us, with life more vast
That other present which we call the past!

And he is of them! Lo, the hearts that brim
With hope and courage, and do not grow old,
Have somewhere, somehow, learned to love like him.
The nobler things that are not bought and sold,
Remembering the light that through life’s bars
Breaks from beyond the sunset and the stars!

COMMENCEMENT DAY

On Thursday, June 27, occurred the annual Commencement Exercises of the college in the Congregational Church. Early in the morning the church began to fill up with friends of the college and a large crowd was gathered long before the exercises commenced. The procession of Trustees, Overseers, Faculty, graduates and alumni formed as usual in front of the chapel to march to the church. The procession was delayed somewhat in starting, but was a most imposing sight when it finally got under way, containing more than five hundred in line. The Boards and Faculty were all in Caps and Gowns. The exercises were presided over by Prof. Henry L. Chapman. The Commencement speakers and their programme was as follows:

The Printed Page    Seth Gurney Haley
A Mistaken Remedy    Roscoe Henderson Hupper
Matthew Arnold: The Honest Doubter    Charles Wilbert Snow
Music                George Allen Bower
The Municipality a Business Corporation    William Shepard Linnell
A College Man’s Poet    Edward Augustin Duddy

AWARD OF PRIZES

Following the awarding of the Degrees of Bachelor of Arts, to the sixty-five graduates, the following award of prizes for the year was announced:

Goodwin Commencement Prize. Roscoe H. Hupper. Class of 1868 Prize, Charles W. Lowe. Pray English Prize, Edward A. Duddy,

Roscoe Henderson Hupper
Goodwin Commencement Prize

HONORARY APPOINTMENTS

CLASS OF 1907

The Honorary Appointments to members of the Class of 1907 were as follows:

Summa cum Laude—Neal Woodside Allen, Charles Reynolds Bennett, Edward Carpenter Pope, Malon Patterson Whipple.

HONORARY DEGREES

The following Honorary Degrees were awarded on Commencement Day:

LL.D., Hon. Clarence Hale, '69, of Portland; Dr. Alfred Mitchell, '59, of Brunswick; Hon. DeAlva S. Alexander, '70, of Buffalo, N. Y.

A.M., Frank E. Hanscom, Bethel.

A.M., pro merito, Prof. Wilmot B. Mitchell, '90, of Brunswick; Roscoe J. Ham of Brunswick, William S. Brimijoin, '05, of Lisbon Falls.

A.B. out of course, Horace M. Jordan, '78, and Frederick E. Lally, '82.

COMMENCEMENT DINNER

At the church the procession formed after the exercises were over and from there went to the Memorial Hall, where the Commencement Dinner was held. Five hundred alumni sat at the Commencement Dinner. On the way to the hall all the younger alumni kept up constant class cheers and as soon as they were seated in the hall, the cheering was redoubled till the walls fairly shook. Professor Henry L. Chapman presided. The said that during the year the college had received gifts to the amount of $95,000, and spoke particularly of the Goodenow Bequest of $25,000 and the Longfellow Fellowship. Over $100,000 had been pledged towards the sum necessary to obtain the Rockefeller grant. Professor Chapman then called upon the speakers of the afternoon.

Those who spoke were: Gen. Oliver O. Howard, '59; Congressman DeAlva S. Alexander, '70; Gen. Thomas H. Hubbard, '57; Hon. Stanley Plummer, '67; Gov. William T. Cobb, '77; Charles H. Gilman, '82. Owing to the lateness of the hour before the dinner was commenced, fewer speeches were made this year than usual. Probably the most noteworthy utterance made during the day was by Governor Cobb, who spoke for his Class of 1877. In reference to State aid and competition in education he stirringly said:

"I would rather see the old halls falling into ruin, barren and tenantless; the beautiful buildings gone into decay; the walks of our campus grown into weeds and grass than that Bowdoin College should ever ask for or receive one dollar from the State of Maine. (Great applause.)

"I beg you to believe I am not saying this from prejudice. No man believes more honestly in the cause of education or sets a higher value upon it. But I don't like and I never have liked the method of competitive education that exists to-day in this State. These sentiments are not radical. I believe they will find warm reception in the heart of every man present here to-day. I hope anyway that such will be the case. I am criticising the impulses of no one else. I am speaking my honest convictions as a son of Bowdoin and a member of the Class of '77."

All the speeches were intensely interesting. Before calling upon the representative from the Class of 1882, Prof. Chapman announced that this class had been awarded the alumni trophies for the largest percentage of living members in attendance. Fifty per cent. of its members were at Commencement. The nearest competitor was the Class of 1857, with over fifty per cent.

ACTION OF THE BOARDS

The Boards of Overseers and Trustees transacted much important business during their meetings of Commencement Week. Among the most noteworthy steps taken was the action voting to employ an instructor in mechanical drawing, descriptive geometry and surveying. This is directly along the lines which the ORIENT has advocated throughout the year and will meet with unanimous approval from the student body. It means that the college is broadening the scientific side of its curriculum in accordance with the modern demand for technical training. It means that a student may take a regular course at Bowdoin, and then obtain a degree from a high grade technical school in two years. The need of more opportunity for work along these lines has been strongly felt of late and this is distinctly a step in the right direction.

Two new assistant professorships were established, one in Chemistry and one in Biology. This will give opportunity for broadening these departments.

Frederick W. Fisher, ’81, of Lowell, Mass., and Hon. Levi Turnier, ’86, of Portland, are elected to the two vacancies on the Board of Overseers.

Chief Justice Lucius Alonzo Emery was elected a member of the Board of Trustees to succeed the late Chief Justice Wiswell.

Prof. William A. Houghton, who for a number of years had been head of the Latin Department, was retired and granted an honorarium and was recommended for the Carnegie foundation. Kenneth C. M. Sills was elected Winkly Professor of the Latin Language and Literature.

Prof. Frederick W. Brown of Clark University, Mass., was elected Professor of Modern-Languages for three years to succeed Roscoe J. Ham, who has resigned to accept a call to Trinity.

Wallace W. Dyson, M.D., has been elected Instructor and Assistant Demonstrator in Anatomy in the Medical Department. Two other assistant demonstrators have also been elected, Charles L. Cragin, M.D., and Phillip C. Thompson, M.D.

President William DeWitt Hyde was granted leave of absence with full salary.

FINANCIAL REPORTS OF ATHLETICS

Owing to the most sad calamity that befell this summer, the ORIENT, at the time of its publication, scarcely wished to make an attempt to obtain the reports of the Tennis and Track Managers of the year. These will be obtained in the fall, and all the reports will be published together at that time.

LONGFELLOW SCHOLARSHIP

At the Longfellow centenary exercises it was announced that the daughters of the poet, Miss Longfellow, Mrs. Dana and Mrs. Thorp, had given ten thousand dollars to Bowdoin to endow a fellowship in literature in memory of their father. The fellowship is for the benefit of graduate students, who having shown proficiency and promise in the direction of Belles Lettres, wish to pursue the study of English, or general literature, after graduation in some university at home or abroad. Bowdoin is most heartily grateful to these donors for this gift.

BASEBALL

Bowdoin, 5; Harvard, 4.

To make the ORIENT record of the baseball season complete, we publish the account of the baseball game at Cambridge on June 12. Bowdoin, for the first time in the history of any Maine college, attained an athletic victory over Harvard. The game was well played and hard-fought throughout and was a fitting climax to the record of the “finest baseball team ever turned out in a Maine college.”

Slater pitched for Harvard and Sparks for Bowdoin. Both pitched steady games, but both men were hit practically at will, although mainly for infield hits that were prompt outs.

For three innings and a half the game dragged until McCall reached first on a scratch hit to Sparks, and promptly stole second. Briggs then singled past Stanwood, and McCall talked on Currier’s whizzer into center, leaving Briggs on third. The half ended with a pretty double play, Simons going out. C. Bower to Stanwood, the latter throwing home to Lawrence in time to catch Briggs at the plate.

Bowdoin got three runs. With one ‘down, Sparks reached first on Simons’ error and G. Bower took two bases on Capt. Dexter’s muff of an easy fly, Sparks getting third on the same play. Then Currier threw up to Fritchett at third to catch Sparks napping, and Sparks started for home, getting caught between the two. Currier should have touched him out easily once on the tossing back and forth that resulted, but Sparks came in on a wild toss of Pritchett's. With Bower on third and Martin on second, McDade dropped a beauty into center that scored two men.

In her half of the sixth, Harvard scored two runs, tying the score. Slater singled to Files, but was out at second on McCall's grounder. Briggs was hit, advancing McCall, who was put out at third on Currier's grounder. Then Briggs stole third and both he and Currier came in on Lawrence's mess of Dexter's grounder.

In the eighth Sparks got two bases on Dana's bad error, got third on G. Bower's sacrifice, and tallied on the throw in from Dana of Martin's fly out. Files for Bowdoin scored in the ninth on a combination of two hits, a sacrifice and an out. From here on the eighth, Currier getting in first on C. Bower's error, taking third on Dexter's out and coming home on another error of Bower's, who missed an easy throw to catch Currier napping.

FOOTBALL

Saturday, September 30th, Bowdoin opened her football season on Whittier Field, with Fort McKinley as the opposing team. Sheehan made the first touchdown after the ball had been brought to McKinley's one-yard line by a series of end runs by Files and Gould. Gould failed to kick the goal.

The second half resulted in another touchdown for Bowdoin, Files making the touchdown, after the forward passing of Gould and Crowley had brought the ball close to the soldiers' goal line. Gould kicked the goal. This half was not finished the soldiers having to leave on the 4:25 train for Portland. Considering the length of the game and the lightness of her team, Bowdoin did very well in the opening game.

Last Saturday with a team somewhat crippled from the Harvard game Bowdoin met Exeter on Whittier Field. In the first half Exeter scored once by line bucking—not being able to gain a yard around Bowdoin's ends. In the second half Exeter scored three touchdowns—Lewis kicking two goals, Bowdoin unsuccessfully tried the forward pass. In the first half Lewis tried for a goal from the field, and in the second half Gould attempted a field goal with a drop kick. Both failed on account of the strong wind. The summary:

The list of men who have entered the upper classes, and the colleges from which they come is as follows:

1908—Russell S. Taylor, University of Maine.

THE CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

This year the Bowdoin Christian Association starts on a good business basis, with an excellent program of speakers for the regular Thursday evening meetings, and should have the good-will and hearty support of every member of the undergraduate body. Last year 152 members were enrolled, and paid the small annual fee of one dollar; these receipts together with a few gifts from interested friends, have enabled the Association to clear all its old debts, and to hold the customary reception to the Freshman Class, which last year it was necessary to omit. Although the Association suffered greatly this summer by the loss of Morrison and Lee who were its President and Vice-President, the rest of the cabinet have taken up the work, and have started the Association in the best running order it has known at Bowdoin. A letter of welcome was sent to all the incoming class, an information bureau was maintained during the week before and after the opening of the term, a reception was held on October third, and last night, the first regular meeting of the year was led by Professor Chapman in the Association rooms.

In arranging the list of speakers, the officers have been unusually fortunate in obtaining their men, and the special feature will be a series of seven monthly talks on "The Problems of the College Man." These subjects and the men chosen for their discussion may well be mentioned. I. "A Constructive Life," President George C. Chase of Bates College; II. "A College Man’s Religion," Professor F. C. Robinson, ’73; III. "Choosing a Profession," Edward Stanwood, Editor of the Youth’s Companion; IV. "Politics," Hon. Herbert M. Heath of Augusta; V. "Honor in College," Dean Alfred E. Burton, C.E., ’78, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; VI. "The Effect of a Young Man’s Morals Upon His Future Success," Dr. E. G. Abbott, Medic. ’08, of Portland, and for the seventh talk it is hoped that President Hyde will be able to speak on "Fraternities." All the meetings will be held this year in the Association rooms in the north wing of the chapel, and will be open to any undergraduate or member of the faculty, whether a member of the Association or not.

The Orient sees in the purpose and plan of the Association a breadth of view and an energy that cannot but result in good for Bowdoin and her undergraduate body. Membership and holding of office in the Association, to quote from the letter of welcome sent to the Freshmen, "are open to every Bowdoin undergraduate regardless of where he may belong," and to quote from the Association hand-book, it is the purpose of those starting the work, "to make the Association stand as high as a stepping stone to the church, to make it an organization open to every undergraduate, and one in which the guiding principle is simply and honestly the square deal."

Y. M. C. A. RECEPTION

On Thursday evening Oct. 3, the Y. M. C. A. gave its annual reception to the entering class. The arrangements were in charge of a committee composed of Cole, ’09, Ginn, ’09, Burton, ’09, and W. P. Hinckley, ’09. The reception room was tastefully decorated with palms and autumn branches. A unique feature of the function, and one which red it to a large degree of all formalities was the scheme of tagging each person with a slip upon which the name was written.

The new men were received by Mrs. G. T. Little, Miss Helen Chapman, Mrs. F. E. Woodruff and Mrs. Allen Johnson. The refreshments, in charge of Mrs. Henry Johnson and Mrs. W. T. Foster, consisted of punch, ice-cream, cake, and fancy crackers. Much credit is due to the committee in charge for the efficient and hospitable way in which the affair was managed.

FRESHMEN DEFEAT SOPHOMORES

The Sophomores lost the first of the series of baseball games which are held annually on the Delta between the two lower classes. The game, with the exception of the first inning, was exceedingly interesting and remarkably well played in spite of the fact that both teams lacked the much necessary preliminary practice. Clifford and Lawless did some noteworthy work for the Freshmen, while Ross, Marsh and Walker were most effective for the Sophomores. The score by innings was as follows:

1910.............. 3 0 1 0 0 0 0 1 0 — 5
1911.............. 3 0 1 0 1 0 1 0 — 7

TRACK

There is to be more than usual done in the way of track athletics this fall. There is, of course, the regular meet between the Sophomores and Freshmen. Besides that, there will probably be a dual meet between the Bates and Bowdoin Freshmen and a cross country run between Bates and Bowdoin. The last will be held at Lewiston, but the others will take place here. It ought not to be necessary to remind the students of these events as notice of them has been posted for some time. There has not been very much interest shown in track work this fall, partly because of the unfavorable weather, although there have been about fifteen men out doing cross-country running regularly every afternoon. Here are two chances offered the Freshmen for winning their numerals and we want to see more out, either down at the field or at the gymnasium. Sophomores and upper classmen come out, too. It is the best of exercise in the open air and is the first thing towards turning out a winning team next spring. The dates for the meets will be announced later. The Athletic Council has recommended that track "B’s" be granted to the cross country team, if it wins. Six men anyway will compose the team and this should bring out a good field. With but one "B" man in distance events left in college, a chance for five others to win their letters should not be neglected.

New College Year

For the one hundred and sixth time Bowdoin College has opened her doors for the beginning of a new year, and the prospects certainly are auspicious that this year will make continued progress forward for the institution. The entering class shows a marked increase in numbers over any class ever before admitted. One hundred regular Freshmen are enrolled and three Freshmen specials, making a total of one hundred and three as against eighty Freshmen and eleven specials admitted last year. Besides this there have been thirteen additions to the upper classes, thus making one hundred and sixteen new men in college. New courses are offered this year along mathematical lines, embracing mechanical drawing, descriptive geometry and surveying, an increase which means that Bowdoin is to have broader facilities for scientific work, a recognition of what has been the demand for a number of years past and which the Orient has consistently advocated. A number of new additions are made to the faculty. President Hyde is still abroad, and the college wishes him a most speedy return to health. The opening of college is most sadly marked by the absence of three who were present when the term closed last June. The excitement of the commencement of a new year does not serve to lessen the pain, but rather makes it seem sharper that we do not see those familiar faces with the others. The Class of 1907 has now gone forever as a part of the undergraduate life. To the new Class of 1911, which will wear those same colors of red and white, we can but say try to do as well by Bowdoin as those whose place you are taking have done. Seek to catch and feel the true Bowdoin spirit. You are Bowdoin men in name now. Work hard for the college, each along the lines for which he is best adapted, look ever for the best around you, and you will realize later that there is something more than a name in being Bowdoin men; there is a true Bowdoin spirit, a spirit which may not lie on the surface but which is deeper and finer and only reveals itself when sought.

BOWDOIN CLUB OF BOSTON

The Bowdoin Club of Boston held its first meeting of the season at the University Club October 5. There was no special program and the evening passed in social conversation and informal discussion of matters of college interest. The death of Walter W. Fogg, '96, was reported to the club, and a number of the younger graduates present who knew Mr. Fogg well, spoke in his memory, recalling his peculiarly sweet and lovable nature, his self-forgetful and untiring devotion to the duty which he saw before him, and his brave and cheerful struggle against weakness and disease. Mr. Fogg died young, his life-work, as he must have felt, just begun. But few men leave to their friends and associates so sweet a memory, and so inspiring an example.

NOTICE

Owing to the great mass of matter that has accumulated during the summer and requires publication, much of necessity has to be omitted from this issue which otherwise should appear.
College Notes

Leon H. Timberlake, '09, while at football practice Tuesday afternoon, sprained his ankle severely.
Max P. Cushing, '09, R. S. Crowell, '10, and A.
W. Stone, '10, attended the Maine Musical Festival at Bangor.

Tackle Crosby, '10, wrenched his knee badly during the Exeter game and was confined to his room for several days.

Professor Little has been chosen one of the speakers for the Maine Library Association, which will meet at Portland October 17 and 18.

On Thursday, October 17, Frank B. Sanborn of Concord, Mass., will give some personal reminis-cences of Hawthorne, Emerson and Abbot.

The headgears which the Freshmen are wearing, so thoughtfully prescribed by the members of 1910, make quite a gay appearance around college.

Fullback Thomas P. Shehan, '09, is suffering from an injury to his elbow received during the Exeter game. The wound is a severe one and will keep him from playing for some time.

Kenneth R. Teff, '10, has been elected to the editorial board of the Orient. He takes the position made vacant by the death of R. A. Lee. The contest for new positions on the board, open to memers of the Sophomore and Freshman Class, will begin soon.

Professor Allen Johnson has completed a volume upon which he has been at work some three years, etitled, "Stephen A. Douglass. The work is mainly a political treatise upon the times of this famous ponent of Lincoln. Professor Johnson has colclected much of the material for this book from original sources and the work will doubtless prove a valuable addition to the historical literature of our time.

The Debating Council on Tuesday evening organized and elected the following officers for the year:
Arthur L. Robinson, President; Joseph M. Boyce,
Secretary-Treasurer; William M. Harris, Manager
Debating Team; Jasper J. Stahl, Assistant Manager
Debating Team. A letter was read from Wesleyan University in regard to holding a debate with that institution. The Council is at present under a two years' agreement to debate Syracuse University this year.

The Inter-Fraternity Council for the year organized the first of the week. The council this year is as follows: M. P. Merrill, Zeta Psi, Chairman; C.
M. Robinson, Delta Kappa Epsilon, Secretary; A.
L. Robinson, Alpha Delta Phi; A. H. Ham, Psi
Upsilon; J. A. Davis, Theta Delta Chi; H. H. Hayes,
Delta Upsilon; C. A. Abbott, Kappa Sigma; W. M.
Fairclough, Beta Theta Chi. The council at its meeting unanimously recommended to the fraternities that all parades and exhibitions, particularly down street and at the railroad station, be disposed with by a feature of imitation. It was felt that such exhibitions had done more harm than good to the college, and this year all such affairs should be confined to the individual chapter houses. This is a step of which the Orient heartily approves.

Eighteen of the entering class are from without the State—a marked increase.

A considerable number of students attended the Musical Festival in Portland the first of the week.

Berton C. Morrill, '10, who coached the track team as a student last spring, has returned to college.

The entering class contains grandsons of Elijah
Kellogg, Chief Justice Fuller, and Senator William P. Frye.

William R. Crowley, '08, is proctor in South Winthrop, and R. C. Clark, '08, is the North Winthrop proctor.

The telephone in Mikelsky's room, 19 North Maine, has been reinstated, and a toll office will be opened there in the near future.

Men are at work replacing bricks in the walls of the Science Building that have become worn through the action of the weather.

The engagement of Nadine Hull Edwards, of Portland, to William Stephen Brimijohn, '09, of Woodbury, New Jersey.

Reports from the Treasurer's Office and the Library Desk state that there have been more calls than ever this year for tickets for "Triangle."

The football team left for Amherst on the early train, Friday morning. A considerable number of fellows were at the station to give the team a "send off."

Mr. and Mrs. Hubbard of Brunswick, have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Daisie Hubbard, to Mr. E. Worthley Fuller, M.D., Bowdoin, '08, of Bath.

The south spire of the chapel was struck by lighting the first of the summer. Considerable labor was required in the repairing of it, as the damage was more or less serious.

There are but two vacant college rooms in the dormitories this year. This is the first time that the rooms in the "Ends" have been so filled up since the fraternity houses have been built.

"If Bowdoin could be induced to take any interest (in basketball) after the other colleges have started the movement, a Maine league could be easily formed this year."—Colby Echo. We will explain that there is not the slightest possibility that Bowdoin could be induced to follow the other colleges' lead in this sport, with our present facilities.

Professor Franklin C. Robinson was absent for the first week of the term, attending the annual meetings of the American Public Health Association, at Atlantic City. Professor Robinson represented the State of Maine at the meetings. The Association includes the leading government and state health workers of the United States, Canada, Cuba and Mexico. Last year Professor Robinson was President of the whole Association and attended the meetings in Mexico. This year he was chairman of one of the leading committees and took charge of some of the leading discussions on matters of disinfection. Mrs. Robinson accompanied him on the trip. On the trip he visited his son Dwight S. Robinson, '07, captain of last spring's track team, who is with the DuPont Powder Works Company at Woodbury, N. J.
RESOLUTIONS

HALL OF ALPHA DELTA PHI,
October 1, 1907.

In the death of Brother John Marshall Brown the Bowdoin Chapter of the Alpha Delta Phi sustains a most sad and distinct loss. He was a brother who through his whole life ever maintained a hearty interest in college and fraternity. His personal life and work was a distinguished one, and one that throws nought but credit upon his fraternity. In the hurry and labor of his younger years and amid the cares of middle life and the advance of age during his later years, he still remembered the Alpha Delta Phi. The fraternity is but too conscious of the loss sustained in his death and desires this brief tribute to show in part at least the regard in which he was always held.

ARTHUR LINCOLN ROBINSON,
IVING LOCKHART RICH,
WARREN EASTMAN ROBINSON,
Committee on Resolutions.

Two classmates have been taken from us. As we meet after the summer there are two to whom we said good-bye in June who are not here to greet us in September. Richard Almy Lee and John Frank- lin Morrison, formerly members of the Class of 1908 at Bowdoin College, are no longer with us. Both were hearty, wholesome college fellows, men who had endeared themselves to us by the close ties of three years of intimate connection. Both were fellows whose moral life and personal characteristics were above reproach, leaders in the class, men who were willing always to work for the college and for 1908. They were not shrinkers or loafers. In whatever was done in college that aimed for the right they could be depended upon to render assistance. In the front rank in pleasure and labor, yet it is not for what they did that we cherish their memory but for what they were. To those who knew them as we classmates knew them, there remains the consolation that the whole course of their lives was pure and noble in every way. Their classmates bowing to the divine will, leave this humble, but sincere tribute to their memory.

THE CLASS OF 1908.

HALL OF ALPHA DELTA PHI,
October 1, 1907.

In the removal of Brother John Franklin Morrison from the midst of our fraternity group the Alpha Delta Phi have sustained a loss from which it is impossible ever to fully recover. To have a brother taken from us in the very height of the college course, when just those ties of friendship and intimacy were most well knit and developed, to have one gone so suddenly who but a short time before was so intimately connected with us all, is to endure a blow the full force of which we can hardly realize even now but of which we grow more and more sadly conscious from day to day. John Franklin Morrison was always a hearty sharer in all our affairs. He was always among the foremost in our activities, and when work was to be done ever among the first to volunteer. His personal moral character was above reproach. Not only was he universally esteemed by the college at large, but loved and respected by those with whom he intimately lived. His was not a superficial estimation but was known with that regard which is bred by true realization of sterling worth and lovable disposition. It is hard indeed to think of him as gone, as taken from us forever, that he will never again greet us in house and hall. The place he leaves can never be filled. The hearts of all the active members of the Alpha Delta Phi at Bowdoin to-day will ever retain freshly and sadly in mind the memory of Brother Morrison as we knew him. But brief can this tribute seem from those who were his fraternal brothers, but the tribute we give can never be written, it is something we all feel and all silently bear.

ARTHUR LINCOLN ROBINSON,
IVING LOCKHART RICH,
WARREN EASTMAN ROBINSON,
Committee on Resolutions.

Whereas, It has pleased Almighty God in His infinite wisdom, to take from us our beloved brother, Richard Almy Lee, of the Class of 1908, be it
Resolved, That we, the members of Beta Sigma Chapter of Beta Theta Phi, express our deep grief at the loss of an honored and loyal brother, and be it
Resolved, That we extend our heart-felt sympathy to the bereaved family and friends of the deceased.

WILLIAM WHITNEY FAIRCLOUGH, ARTHUR HOSMER HUSE,
NATHAN SIMMONS WESTON,
For the Chapter.

Resolutions adopted at the first regular meeting of the Bowdoin College Christian Association:

Whereas, It has pleased God to call from our midst in the morning of their lives our president, John F. Morrison, and vice-president, Richard A. Lee; and
Whereas, The strong ties of friendship formed by them have forever on earth been torn asunder; be it
Resolved, That the Bowdoin College Christian Association acknowledge, at this first regular meeting, the sad loss of its president, John F. Morrison, and vice-president, Richard A. Lee; and be it
Resolved, That the Association extend its sincere and heart-felt sympathy to the bereaved parents; and be it further Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the records of the Bowdoin College Christian Association.
Class of 1910

During the summer vacation our class has suffered the great loss of one of its best beloved members, Harry J. Dugan. His death, by drowning, was under circumstances of exceptional sadness, and cast a gloom not only over the hearts of those who knew him well, but over the whole community where his life had been spent. Harry Dugan was a young man of noble qualities and the life cut short was one of great promise. His manly traits, his studious tastes, his upright character and his social nature endeared him to us who were closely associated with him as classmates during the past year, and will long be cherished in our hearts. His death comes to us all with a sense of personal loss, but in our sorrow we are not unmindful of those who were bound to him by still closer ties. Therefore be it

Resolved, That the Class of Bowdoin, Nineteen Hundred and Ten, extend its deepest sympathy to the bereaved parents and sisters, and assure them that the hearts of its members go out to them in their great sorrow.

J. Leland Crosby, 2d,
Robert Hale,
Sumner Edwards,
For the Class.

At a meeting of the Bowdoin Chapter of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity held October 2, 1907, it was voted to drape the Charter for thirty days, and that the undergraduate members wear crape with their Fraternity pins during that period.

This vote was passed as an outward expression and tangible recognition of the inward sense of sorrow occasioned by the sudden and irreparable loss by drowning of Harry Joseph Dugan on the 9th day of July, 1907.

The Fraternity and its undergraduate members especially have received a blow that time cannot eliminate, for always there will remain in the minds of each of his fraternity-mates a mental picture of him as they knew him, congenial, happy, upright in conduct, and an example well worthy of being followed. He was in fact all that goes to make up an ideal college man.

The undergraduate members of the Fraternity are also mindful of the loss that his immediate family have suffered, and while they have not drained the cup of sorrow to its dregs, still, they feel that they have tasted of the bitterness of it, and desire to extend their sympathy.

NEW FACULTY MEMBERS

There are four new members of the Bowdoin College faculty this fall. The resignation of Professor R. H. Ham last spring to accept a position in Trinity and of Professor R. C. McCrea this summer on a call to Columbia left two vacancies in professorships. Two new instructors have also been added.

Prof. F. W. Brown of Clark University, succeeds Professor Ham. He is a graduate of Harvard and received the degree of Ph.D. from that institution in 1905. He has studied abroad and spent one year in the University of Grenoble at France. Dr. Brown is especially proficient in Italian, French and Spanish. He is occupying the same residence on Federal Street as did Mr. Ham.

Professor Ab'a M. Edwards has been secured to occupy the chair of Economics and Sociology for one year. He graduated from the University of Oklahoma and received the degree of Ph.D. from Yale. He has been recently engaged in research work for the Carnegie Institute of Washington, D. C.

H. B. Hastings, a graduate of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 1907, has been appointed to the new instructorship in Mechanical Drawing, Descriptive Geometry and Surveying. Ralph B. Stone, 1902, has been appointed an instructor in Physics and Mathematics. Mr. Stone has been studying in Germany. By the addition of these new instructorships the scope of the college along technical lines will be broadened.

ADDITIONS TO THE LIBRARY

Among the more scholarly and substantial works added to the library during the summer may be mentioned the complete writings of Cervantes, printed at Madrid in 1863 in twelve quarto volumes, and usually regarded as the best, as well as one of the most expensive editions of this famous author; the English Historical Society's Collection of Monastic Chronicles, in twenty-three volumes; Anderson's Norroena in fifteen volumes, with a fac simile reproduction of the Flatey Book; fourteen volumes of the Kuenstler Monographien from a benefactor living in Portland whose name is unknown; Hulbert's Historic Highways of America in sixteen volumes. The brief but important books purchased are represented by Rose's Development of European Nations, Davenport's Mezzotints, Rich's Feathered Game of the Northeast, Farne's Cults of the Greek States, and Seymour's Life in the Homeric Age.

Chief among the more popular works is a special paper limited edition of “The New America and the Far East” by G. Waldo Browne, a beautifully illustrated work in six quarto volumes, presented by the publisher, Albert Marshall Jones of the Class of 1893. Similar to this in the attractiveness of its pictures is Rossiter Johnson's four-volume history of the Columbian Exposition. Peary's Nearest the Pole, Birdseye's Individual Training in Our Colleges, Waller's Through the Gates of the Netherlands, Howells' Certain Delightful English Towns, Eckstorm's David Libbey, Davey's Pageant of London, Benson's Beside Still Waters, while much less voluminous, will find an equal number of interested readers.

The Board of Bowdoin College Preachers is to be continued this year through the generosity of Professor and Mrs. Files. Ordinarily the visiting clergymen will preach in the Church on the Hill in the morning and conduct college chapel in the afternoon of the third Sunday in each month. The list for the first five months of the college year is as follows:

Oct. 20—President Charles Cuthbert Hall of Union Seminary, New York.
Nov. 17—Rev. Floyd Tomkins of Philadelphia.
Dec. 15—President W. H. P. Faunce of Brown University, Providence.
Feb. 16—Rev. Henry Van Dyke of Princeton, N. J.

At the meeting of the Glee and Mandolin-Guitar Clubs held the first of the term, Max P. Cushing, '09, was elected leader of the Glee Club, and Howard P. Kane, '09, leader of the Mandolin-Guitar Club.

To the extensive collection of Longfellow portraits possessed by the library, Professor Joseph C. Pickard of Maywood, III., has added two photographs of the bust by Lorado Taft which was presented to the University of Illinois by the graduating class last Commencement.

NEW BOWDOIN SONG

New Bowdoin songs are always welcome. The following, originally sung at New York last year, should be added to those we now have:

Bowdoin, Again
Air: “Benediction.”

Bowdoin! again to thy dear name we raise,
With one accord our loving song of praise.
We stand to laud thee, ere our meeting cease,
Then homeward journey with thy words of peace.

In our young days the future was as night,
But thou for us its darkness turned to light;
From harm and dangers kept thy children free,
Oh! Alma Mater, much we owe to thee.

Thy Whispering Pines that edge the student's way
To Bowdoin's sons tell legends day by day,
As they have told them in the years gone by,
While in the winds their towering branches sigh.

Loved Alma Mater, through our later life
Solace our sorrow, be our help in strife,
And when Death's voice shall bid life's conflict cease,
We'll leave dear Bowdoin for Eternal Peace.

Original song contributed by Mrs. Joseph B. Roberts.

DR. EDWARD BEECHER MASON

On the first day of October occurred the death of Dr. Edward Beecher Mason, for thirteen years pastor of the College Church, at his home in Brunswick. Although not a Bowdoin graduate himself, the college has never had a truer friend or one more willing to do what he could for the institution and the students. Dr. Mason had suffered from a long illness. He was sixty-nine years of age. He was born in Cincinnati, educated at Knox College, Ohio, and graduated from the Andover Theological Seminary in 1861. He held five pastorates during his life. He came to Brunswick in 1890, and remained in active work until 1902, when ill-health forced him to resign. Of all Brunswick friends of Bowdoin it is safe to say there never was a man more beloved than Dr. Mason. In the thirteen years he labored he was the earnest, unassuming friend of all, and many a graduate will be saddened to learn of his death. He was the friend of all who wished a friend. His life is a beautiful tribute to the profession he so nobly represented. A high-minded, true Christian gentleman, was Dr. Mason. He performed considerable noteworthy literary work during his life-time. It will be remembered that Dr. Mason was instrumental in the arranging for the series of musical recitals which were given in the Art Building for two years and were so largely appreciated by the college. This is but one of the many things which Dr. Mason did as a friend to Bowdoin. "Friend" is his best tribute. He was a friend to all and to every one, and as such will be sadly missed.

COLLEGE BAND

The real interest in football is just about to begin. The preliminary games are mostly over and the hard games are now before us. We certainly cannot face the approach of these games with the possibility of no music. We must have a band! The college seems to have grown strangely lethargic in regard to this feature this last year. Our band was permitted to pass into oblivion last year. But it cannot be let stay there this year. A meeting should be called at once and the band revived for the approaching series of games.

DEATH AND THE ALUMNI

Rarely has a summer passed in which Bowdoin has been called to mourn a larger number of its graduates. The death by drowning of a beloved member of the Class of 1905, Philip K. Greene, preceded only a few days the sad accidents that took away three of our undergraduates. The next week brought the news of the sudden decease of John C. Sanborn, Esq., a prominent lawyer of Lawrence, Mass., who had just celebrated in perfect health the jubilee anniversary of his graduation. In this same month of July there was starred on our rolls the name of one who for years had been a tower of strength to the college, and who, despite great physical weakness, had been present at the last meeting of the Board of Trustees, Gen. John Marshall Brown, LL.D., of Portland. In the same week his college-mate and fellow-soldier, George Edwin Moulton, long prominent in the educational circles of the metropolis, died at his residence in Brooklyn.

In August were recorded the deaths of Edward Albert Kelly, Class of 1850, a successful and trusted lawyer of Boston; Professor Kingsbury Bachelder, L.H.D., Class of 1871, of Hillsdale College, one of the most zealous and cultured of the many teachers Bowdoin has sent out; and Dr. Charles B. Bridgham, Medical Class of 1863, a beloved and well-known physician of Cohasset, Mass.

In September were announced the deaths of Walter W. Fogg, Class of 1866, a faithful man, who made a gallant fight against disease; and Col. Isaac H. Wing of Bayfield, Wis., Class of 1856, whose great generosity to his Alma Mater is by no means the only reason his memory should be cherished here. It is impracticable to print a full account of the careers of all these in the columns of the Orient, but the usual sketches giving accurate details of their lives will be subsequently published in the proper number of the Obituary Record.

Amherst, 17; Bowdoin, 0.

Last Saturday Amherst defeated Bowdoin on Pratt Field, Amherst, by the score of 17 to 0. Amherst made most of her gains by forward passes and thru the line. Bowdoin's line did not seem to hold well, but this was probably due to the fact that Amherst's line outweighed her. Amherst's backs played well, but Bowdoin's backfield was fully as fast, working like clock-work. The first touchdown was made on a forward pass, Keith making the score. Atwood followed with another touchdown, after a brilliant run around Bowdoin's right end. During the rest of the half there was much punting, neither side being able to make gains.

In the second half Bowdoin played a snappier game. Besides holding Amherst down to one touchdown, many gains were made thru Amherst's line. In this half Lee succeeded in breaking thru the Amherst line and made thirty yards before he was downed.

NORTHFIELD CONFERENCE

Last June Bowdoin sent a regular delegation to the Y. M. C. A. Conference of the Eastern and Canadian Colleges which is held annually at Northfield, Mass. The delegation consisted of J. F. Morrison, '08, L. F. Tim-berlake, '09, M. P. Cushing, '09, and H. H. Burton, '09. The other Maine colleges were also represented, and the whole delegation from the State numbered over thirty, including delegates from several preparatory schools. There were present at the conference over 600 men, the three largest delegations being from Yale, Harvard, and University of Pennsylvania, with about 175, 125, and 75 representatives respectively.

The conference lasted from June 28 to July 7. Most of the students slept in tents and ate in the large dining halls, which were the halls of the Northfield Seminary, on the grounds of which the conference is held. Every morning there was a program consisting of Mission Study classes—one of the most popular of which was an excellent course by a man who has worked for eight years in the New York slums, Bible Study classes led by experienced students, and at eleven o'clock a general meeting where some speaker addressed the whole conference. The afternoons were devoted entirely to sports—the Maine delegation showing up best in the baseball series in which the all-Maine team reached the semi-finals. In the evening short outdoor meetings were held at which talks are given on "Life Work," and later a general meeting was again held and addressed by some good speakers.

The conference was something entirely different from anything which takes place anywhere else, and was made something worth while to every student, because the speakers were very strong, and the type of college man present, was not the molycoddle but the man who has some honest purpose. The conference was valuable to the delegates who went from Bowdoin, and all the '09 men are planning to go again this spring, with as many more as may be interested.

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION MEETING

The first meeting of the Christian Association was held in Banister Hall, Thursday evening, Oct. 10. A large body of undergraduates assembled to listen to Prof. Chapman's talk on: "Three Things a College Community Can Expect of a Christian." He took the three qualities of brotherly love, manliness, and godliness and from these developed an ideal college community. The talk was followed by a short business meeting in which resolutions were passed on Morrison and Lee, the former president and vice-president of the association. Then followed election of officers. Purinton, '08, was elected president, and the executive and other committees were appointed.

THE SOPHOMORES DEFEAT THE FRESHMEN

The Sophomores took the Freshmen into camp in the second game of the series held between the two classes. The final score was 13 to 5 and it was a significant indication of the looseness which characterized the entire game. Pearson, who went into the box for the Freshmen, passed the first three men who faced him and then the Sophomores by bunching their hits scored four runs before the Freshmen got fairly awake. The second inning was a practical repetition of the first, by some excellent base running and some timely hitting the Sophomores added three more runs to their score. At this point the Freshmen gathered themselves together and in their half of the third they tallied two runs. Clifford who replaced Pearson, proved more effective and the game proceeded on more even terms until the eighth when the first year men again went to pieces and allowed the Sophomores to score heavily. Hobbs for the Sophomores pitched a strong game. He kept his hits well scattered, passed but few men and backed by some snappy team work, he was always invincible at critical periods. Score by innings:

1911: 0 0 2 0 1 0 1 0 — 5
1910: 4 3 1 0 0 3 — 13

Batteries—Pearson, Clifford and Clarke. Hobbs and Eastman. Umpire—Sparks.

'68 PRIZE SPEAKERS

The following is the list of the Speakers from 1908 who will compete in the Class of 1868 Prize Speaking. Six men are chosen from the Senior Class, based on excellence in writing and speaking English. The speaking takes place during the middle of January:

Joseph Albert Davis.
Albert Trowbridge Gould.
Arthur Harold Ham.
George Palmer Hyde.
Arthur Lincoln Robinson.
Carl Merrill Robinson.

WARNING TO FRESHMEN

As is very well known the scholarship requirements for Freshmen at Bowdoin are very strict, for those who desire to take part in any form of athletics whatsoever. As so many fellows are debarred every year from being on any team, the Orient gives the following brief summary of the rules in regard to Freshmen. We give free warning that these rules are strictly enforced and no exception is ever permitted. No athlete need think that any consideration will be shown him, no matter how important a factor he is. Just remember the following:

A review of all Freshmen classes are held six weeks after the opening of the term. Any first year man who is low in any one subject at this time is debarred from football and all fall sports. A man may be debarred if he is low, he does not necessarily have to be below passing.

If a first year man flunks one course at the mid-years he is debarred from all athletics in the spring. This applies to second team, as well as the first team in baseball.

Remember these rules. They are simple enough. And also remember, if you do flunk a subject, there is no possible way for you to make it up, and to represent the college or the class. Take warning in time, that you may have no necessity for saying that “you didn’t know about it.”

Of course if a man is warned at the mid-term examinations, and then passes everything at the mid-years, he is eligible for the spring. If a Freshman flunks A’gebra, he must get enough rank in his geometry to make his average come above passing in order to take part in any spring athletics. These are the summary of the rules.

ORIENT COMPETITION

Notice is given that the annual competition for positions on the editorial board of the ORIENT will commence next week. The present volume is completed in March and new members will be taken on to the staff at that time. The competition is open essentially to members of the Freshman Class, although there will be one Sophomore added to the editors. As there are a number of vacancies to be filled, a large number of Freshmen should enter the competition. Those desiring to consider themselves as candidates should hand their names to the editor-in-chief as soon as possible. The selection of the board is based on the quantity and quality of the work done. Candidates should hand in material every week, mainly college notes. Also they will be assigned special write-ups from time to time. At least three editorials are to be submitted, and one shall be printed.

ORIENT copy has to be sent up to the printer’s on Monday or Tuesday evenings. Copy may be left at Room 11, South Winthrop Hall, before 9.30 p.m. on either of these days. It is hoped that a large number of 1911 men will appear as candidates for the college newspaper.

BUGLE PRIZES

It has been decided to offer three prizes, which shall be open to anyone who is not on the board—whether an undergraduate or member of the faculty. The prizes are to be awarded as follows:

Three dollars for the best “limerick” on any member of the faculty.
Two dollars for the best “grind”—other than a limerick—on any member of the faculty.
Two dollars for the best prose write-up, similar to those in the 1908 Bugle, of any member of the Class of 1909.

The prizes will be awarded by vote of the board, especial favor being given to original ideas. All articles should be typewritten, and handed to some member of the board before March 1, 1908, at the latest, and it is hoped that the articles will be submitted as soon as possible.

DRAMATIC CLUB

At the meeting of the Dramatic Club held on Tuesday evening in Banister Hall, it was decided to hold the first rehearsal for the cast of characters on Friday evening at 6:45 in the Y. M. C. A. room, with Miss Curtis and two members of the faculty as judges. The faculty has granted the club permission to make its first trip with the possible permission of further trips later. The play to be presented this season is “Half Back Sandy” and will probably be given first at Bangor, Rockland and Farmington. The same play was presented by the Colby Dramatic Club last season with great success.

THE CHOIR

The men in the college choir this year are as follows:

From the Class of 1908, Foss; from 1909, Brown; from 1910, Stephens, Stone, Draper, Morss, Davie, Crosby, Crowell, Sanborn, Wilson and Matthews; from 1911, Whitemore, Richards, Davis, Kellogg, and Parkman.

To Newspaper Correspondents

The Orient in its editorial policy this year does not purpose to be general and vague in the subjects for treatment, but rather if it does find something upon which comment is necessary, to speak out sharply and decisively. Along this line we desire once again to advance an opinion in regard to the way that news of Bowdoin is reported among the neighboring papers. Nothing is more injurious to the name of the college than the methods that some people take to advertise it. For instance, there was the large picture which appeared in a certain paper of the Freshmen taken down street. The publisher of this was probably not a student in Bowdoin, it does not seem to the Orient that a student in college could possibly have lack of realization enough to permit the circulation of such a sample, but this is just an example of some of the stories that are permitted to get around in regard to the college. This evil of bad reports going out as news is probably something that will never be stopped. As long as some men think wholly of space anything will be sent out that can be counted up as news. There are, however, two statements that we do desire to make in regard to this, first that the Orient heartily condemns all such reports, and cordially requests those who write for all papers to use every discretion and thought. And then again we urge the undergraduate body to take particular care that all student activities that may be misrepresented be carefully confined to the campus, so that no garbled accounts of what we are doing be permitted to be circulated through the papers of the State. We are not like Dowie, "damning the reporters," but we are asking them to show some sense.

An Old Subject Quill subscriptions are Mentioned Again usually like a case of the measles—carefully avoided. When last year's Quill manager made the rounds of the college recently to collect back subscriptions, he found the doors all locked in the ends and nobody at home at the fraternity houses. Investigation revealed a half dozen men concealed in the attic, another half-dozen buried in the coal bin, and every closet inhabited by those seeking to avoid the searching eye of the collector.

That this condition exists is a misfortune for the Quill manager and at the same time it hardly speaks well for the spirit of the college. There is probably not a man in college who will not agree that the Quill is a good thing, and yet that same man will be found in the coal bin when he thinks his Quill is going to cost him a dollar. He will go down on the athletic field and howl a whole afternoon about the Bowdoin spirit, and yet he will dodge a Quill subscription as readily as a duck will shed water. He is undoubtedly a good rooter and his financial support of the athletic teams will be good, but his Bowdoin spirit is one-sided.

Concerning Football The football management feels that the student body has not given it proper support this year in regard to football subscriptions. Football is by far the most expensive line of athletics that we have here at Bowdoin and it needs the enthusiastic support of every Bowdoin man. Nearly one-third of the students here have either refused to subscribe or have put off those soliciting subscriptions by saying "I can't afford it." Every man can give a little, however small, to support this line of college activity. It is as much a fellow's duty to support athletics in college as it is for him to meet any of the obligations which a college course demands.

The management is in particularly hard financial standing this year, as it has had to fit out with entirely new goods nearly every man on the squad. Every student knows that in order to do good work a football man must have good suits and good shoes, but athletic goods are expensive and the management must have money in order to fit out the men properly. Every fellow who has been out for football will testify that the management has done its utmost to give the men the very best of everything.

In many colleges a certain sum of money to support athletics is charged on the students' term bills. Here student subscriptions have been entirely voluntary, but the fellows have always shown a true Bowdoin spirit in backing the college teams. Now some of the students act as if it were a personal insult to approach them for money to support athletics. It is not for the management itself but for the interests of the team that we plead the support of the students.

BOWDOIN'S PINES

Many People Worried at Report That the Famous Pines of Bowdoin Are Being Destroyed by Blight—Interview with Professor Lee.

A report has been current in the papers during the past week to the effect that the blight that is attacking the pine forests of the State of Maine has spread to the famous Bowdoin trees and that destruction threatens them. Professor Austin Cary, of the Harvard University Forestry School, and Professor Leslie A. Lee have both been talked with in regard to the matter. While there is a certain disease which seems to be attacking the trees, both these experts seem to think that it is due principally to climatic conditions and eventually a cure will be discovered. The Orient most assuredly hopes that some remedy will be found as any injury to the "Bowdoin Pines" would be a sad blow indeed.

Professor Lee says in regard to this matter:

"The government expert at Washington who has made a study of the tops of pine trees is of the opinion that the blight which has struck our trees is due to climatic conditions. The expert at Washington who has made a special study of the roots of pines is also of this opinion. If this is true we can no doubt successfully wrestle with the matter. In fact, it is one which will probably correct itself.

"Recently we have had specimens of pine trees sent from the western part of the state which were infected by a maggot, but this is not the trouble with the Bowdoin pines, or of many other pine trees which are diseased. The trees on the Bowdoin grounds, as well as in some other parts of the State, turn yellow, and there is a fungus in the tops. It is this condition which is being studied.

"The government experts are taking an unusual interest in this matter, and are asking for help from all who may have any information to communicate. Prof. Austin Cary, the Harvard University expert, and myself are doing all we can to assist in the matter, and we shall be glad to have any suggestions and information from any source.

"Of course, the alumni and friends of Bowdoin are very anxious about the matter, as the loss of the famous trees about which Longfellow and Hawthorne sang and other famous men have written, would be greatly regretted. Their loss would also be a source of regret to all Maine people, who instinctively connect the 'whispering pines' with its old and loved institution of learning. We hope before long to have information which will be more definite, and trust that it will be of an encouraging nature.

"If a blight had struck the college pines it also no doubt has extended to pines in other parts of the State. A disease which would cause the death of the thousands of pine trees in the State would be a great calamity. It would mean a large financial loss, as these trees are of great value at present, and their value increases from year to year.

"The people of Maine, I feel sure, can rest assured that the experts of the government forestry department are doing all possible to find the real cause of the disease, and to ascertain if possible the proper remedy."

PRESS CLUB

At various intervals during past years Press Clubs have been formed at college by the representatives of the various newspapers among the undergraduates. Once again a movement seems to be on foot to start such a club. Such an organization is capable of doing considerable good. No one thing does more harm to the college than the pernicious reports that are permitted to be published in the papers. If some club can be formed which will render its members individual aid and at the same time refrain from printing such specimens of journalistic ventures as have at times appeared, much good might be done. The Orient most heartily hopes that such a club will be formed and some actual good will be accomplished.

PUBLIC HAZING AT INITIATION

Much discussion has arisen this fall, in regard to the recommendation of the faculty that all public parades and features be omitted this year as a feature of the fraternity initiations. Many complaints have come to the college from this source. It is hoped that this year all such exhibitions will be dispensed with which tend towards giving the college a bad name. The parading of Freshmen through the streets and in particular at the railroad station does no good and in many cases has worked distinct harm to Bowdoin. Delegates from each fraternity unanimously voted to recommend that all such features be omitted this year. A committee, composed of Professors Robinson, Mitchell and Foster, addressed the following letter to the Interfraternity Council, which the Orient publishes:

September 27, 1907.

To the Interfraternity Council:

Gentlemen: As chairman of a committee of the faculty appointed to consider certain matters relating to the welfare of the college, I have been requested by the faculty to ask you to consider the question of the public hazing of those who are to be taken into the different fraternities.

It is the unanimous feeling of the faculty that such exhibitions as have taken place in the last few years, a few days before the initiation of new members, are a distinct injury to the college and to all that is best in the fraternity life.

I do not need to go into details at this time. I simply ask you, in the name of the faculty, to discuss the matter, feeling sure that as a result of such discussion, you will devise means to confine all initiation exercises hereafter to the chapter houses themselves.

Congratulating you upon the formation of this council, and thanking you for the privilege of addressing it,

I am, yours very truly,

F. C. Robinson.

CROSS COUNTRY RUNNING

This fall, for the first time, Bowdoin will hold a cross country race with another college. This event will come off the first of next month and will be run over a course here in Brunswick. The team will consist of six men. There is the possibility of the team’s winning their B’s if they beat Bates. All who want to compete for this team should join the cross country squad which runs from the gymnasium every afternoon. In addition to this there will be a hare and hound race twice a week. So far there have been only eight men out and more are needed. The men who ran Saturday were A. L. Robinson and N. S. Weston, hares; and Thompson, Timberlake, G. M. Pierce, Slocum, Colbath and H. L. Robinson, hounds.
College Notes

A number of Freshmen are singing in the chapel choir.

There is an unusually large class in Math. 3 this year.
R. I. Carney, '07, was on the campus a few days last week.

Dartmouth plays the University of Maine to-morrow in Portland.
H. F. Mitchell, '07, a former Orient editor, is going to Harvard Law this year.
H. L. Smith, '09, and H. E. Weeks, '10, spent last Sunday with friends in Bowdoinham.
Lorenzo W. Baldwin, who graduated last spring, is studying law at Columbia University.

Timberlake and Crosby who had their legs sprained in football are nearly recovered.
Weeks, Wing, Kimball and Guphill, '10, are competing for assistant managership of the Quill.

Mcdade, '09, centre on last year's football team, is coaching the Edward Little team of Auburn.
Carl R. Green, ex-'09, who is now coaching the Kent's Hill football team, was here last Wednesday.
H. L. Robinson was elected Freshman track captain and Emerson manager at a class meeting last week.

Bailey, Colbath and Kimball, '10, are the three sophomores trying for assistant managership of the Orient.

Pottle, A. L. Smith, and Voter, all of '09, have gone to Farmington to work during the apple-picking season.
The first game in the Maine Intercollegiate Football series will be played in Lewiston to-morrow, when Bates will meet Colby.
The Medical School opens a week from to-day. Several of the "Medics" are back now, doing work in bacteriology and dissection.

Last Saturday Brunswick High was beaten in an exciting game of football by Bliss Business College of Lewiston, the score being 11-10.

Mr. Jump promises that he will organize his snowshoe club again this year. All Freshmen are urged to join, for the sake of the exercise.

Brewster, '09, and Atwood, '09, went to Lewiston, Wednesday night, to make arrangements for the Bowdoin-Bates Freshman dual track meet and the cross-country run.

The hours of the Secretary of the Faculty have been changed from what they were last year. He is now in his office Mondays 11.30-12.30, Wednesdays 9-10, Saturdays 8.30-9.30.

The acquisitions made to the Art Collection of the college during the past summer are a Longfellow Centenary Medal and a Roman coin of the time of Caligula, 37 or 41 A.D. This Roman coin is of the first bronze, of choice workmanship and of great value. Both are on exhibition at the Art Building.

Edgar F. Sewall, '09, and Percy G. Bishop, '09, are attending the national convention of the Delta Upsilon Fraternity at The University of Minnesota, as delegates from the Bowdoin Chapter.

October 16, Professor Robinson was in South Paris to testify in the Everett murder trial. He has also been retained as expert for the town of Kittery in the Water District hearing.

The Maine Campus makes the observation that in the Bowdoin-Harvard game the score was the smallest that a Maine College ever held Harvard to, even eclipsing the 6-0 score of the Maine-Harvard game in 1903.

The new courses in mechanical drawing, descriptive geometry, and surveying are proving very popular. Twenty students have elected the first two mentioned, while in surveying which is elective for Seniors eight men have enrolled.

Bowdoin's Pines are turning yellow and there is a fungus in the tops. Professor Lee and Professor Austin Cary, the Harvard University expert, are making a study of the trees with a view of finding the proper remedy to save them.

All students who take the Quill are urged to pay their subscriptions promptly. It is rather hard to collect these and it seems to be growing harder. This should not be. Remember that the Quill is an undergraduate activity and should receive proper support as such.

All members who expect to graduate with or who entered college with the Class of 1909 will please give their Bagle photographs to R. H. Files on or before Dec. 15, as the engraving this year will probably be done outside of the State and all cuts must be in at an early date.

The gift from the daughters of Longfellow, establishing a post-graduate scholarship enables the faculty to offer $400 this year and next, available for a member of the Class of 1908 and for 1909. The student having the advantage of this scholarship can pursue graduate work in some other college or abroad. The work to be done will be in English or General Literature.

At the annual meeting of the American Public Health Association held the first of this month at Atlantic City, N. J., Professor Robinson, representing Maine, was chairman of the program committee and was chosen chairman of a committee which is to revise the constitution of the association during the coming year. The convention was very pleasantly entertained in Atlantic City which has some of the best appointed hotels in the United States, and which thoroughly understands the art of making a convention go smoothly. The discussion was by the most prominent men from all over the country and this year public health subjects were considered which were not so closely connected with specific infectious diseases as such topics usually are. Some of the subjects considered were streets, immigration, the health of school children in large cities. At the banquet held one night Professor Robinson was chairman and toast-master.

FACULTY NOTES

Prof. William T. Foster attended the New England Association of College Professors held in Boston Oct. 11-12.
CLASS GROUP PICTURES

Arrangements are being made with Webber to take group pictures of the several classes on the Art Building steps. These pictures are being taken especially for the Bugle, but everyone desiring a photograph will be able to buy one of Webber. It is hoped that all the classes will organize as soon as possible so that the groups may be taken. This is an excellent idea, carried out in other colleges, and it is most earnestly hoped that when the time for the taking of these pictures does come, every member of each class will be in attendance, as they will be attractive mementoes of a college course, but mementoes that will decrease just so much in value for each man who is not present.

COLLEGE ORCHESTRA

A college orchestra is being organized by Philip Morse, '10. Blanks have been posted at the various fraternity houses and all men who play or who have ever played a musical instrument are requested to sign their names on them. So far about twenty-five names have been handed in. To make an organization of the kind thoroughly successful the full and hearty support of a large number of men is required.

The men out are as follows:

First violins, F. T. Smith, '08; Wentworth, '09; Callahan, '11; Merrill, '11; Kellogg, '11; Burkett, '11.

Second violins, Pierce, '11; Curtis, '11; Marston, '11.

Cornets, Manter, '09; W. E. Atwood, '10; Swan, '11; Hubbard, '11; F. T. Richards, '11; Taylor, '11.

Clarinet, Kern, '11; Whitemore, '11.

Cello, Bridge, '09.

Trombone, R. W. Smith, '10.

Drums, H. Smith, '09; Matthews, '10.

A band will also be organized utilizing the men above named who play either brass instruments or drums. If the orchestra is successful, the faculty will grant it permission to make out-of-town engagements.

FRESHMAN TRACK TEAM

Captain H. L. Robinson reports that the outlook for a strong Freshmen track team is very good this fall. With a large class to pick from and the help of Coach Morrill and Captain Atwood of the varsity, it seems as if 1911 ought to turn out a team which will win from Bates 1911. The meet will take place at Lewiston, on October 26. Freshmen are urged to come down to the field every afternoon and try out for something. Often a good track man is developed out of a candidate who has never done anything in track athletics. All men have a chance to make something of themselves in this branch of college athletics, heavy men in the weights, long-legged men in the runs and so on.

ELIJAH KELLOGG'S WORKS

SPRINGFIELD REPUBLICAN APOLOGIZES FOR STATEMENT THAT THIS AUTHOR'S BOY HEROES ARE UNNATURAL

An article appeared during the summer in the Springfield Republican, in the course of which the fiction of Elijah Kellogg was referred to and his works were classed, with Horatio Alger, Jr.'s, as having unnatural boy heroes. W. F. Gregory, of Lothrop, Lee and Shepard called the attention of the paper to the error of this statement, and it is interesting to note that the paper realized the inadvertent mistake it had made. Apology is extended in the following manner:

"The 'villain of the tale, either: a rich and respectable squire or the sneaky son of such a man,' does not fit the 'Elm Island' series. Mr. Kellogg described the life of boys, and also of the whole citizenry of the Maine coast in the days just after the Revolution, and then a little farther on, in graphic simplicity. There was the clearing of the land, the farming and the hunting and the fishing, and enterprises in sailing to other countries with furs that the young men got by trapping, etc. — the American seaboard marine and the Navy of 1812 were manned by these hardy youth of the coast.

"But nothing save clean manliness is to be found in Parson Kellogg's books, and much moral force, also, in the reclamation of reckless youth from evil habits, and the enlargement of strong-fibered life in those who did well. The 'smart boy,' who accomplishes impossible results in the midst of city temptations and gets to the top, is not one of Mr. Kellogg's heroes. Of course, if one undertakes to write the story of a lot of choice boys in a primitive settlement, he is bound to make them better and abler than they perhaps were. 'Elm Island' is a bit ideal, but it is not vulgar. There was an inadvertence. The beloved old author of the orations of Spartacists and Regulus, the faithful pastor of Harpswell for half a century, was not a human-nature faker."

HEBRON 26, BOWDOIN SECOND 0

On Saturday, the 12th, Bowdoin's second eleven lost to Hebron Academy by a score of 26-0. The playing on both sides was clean and fast, but the home team vastly outweighed its opponents. The second eleven, however, deserves great credit for its rally in the second half when it rushed the ball close to Hebron's goal and prevented her from scoring again.

Bowdoin won the kick-off but with the aid of Stacey, Hebron rushed the ball repeatedly for touchdowns.

Nulty of Bowdoin, who missed the early train, arrived in time for the second half when he substituted for Wakefield, doing splendid work.

The game was played in 20- and 15-minute halves.
So far there have been fifteen or twenty men at the field every afternoon. In the sprints there are Allen, Kaulbach, S. W. Pierce, Wiggim, all of whom are showing up well. Davis and S. W. Pierce are out for the high jump; Allen for the pole vault; Kaulbach and Wiggim for the hurdles; F. H. Purington and Cartland for the quarter mile; H. S. White and S. W. Pierce for the broad jump; H. L. Robinson and Robbins for the distance runs; Clif- ford, Torsney and Hastings for the weights. The team will be composed of about fifteen men. Come out 1911, show your spirit and try to win your numerals.

Alumni Notes

CLASS OF '37
Mrs. Elizabeth Lincoln Talbot, widow of Hon. George Foster Talbot of this class, died at her home in Portland Sept. 30, 1907.

CLASS OF '36
Hon. William Gaslin of Alma, Nebraska, who has been spending the summer with his sister, Mrs. William G. Haskell of Augusta, fell a victim to one of the pickpockets that frequent the Union Station at Portland. Being jostled in a crowd he afterwards discovered the loss of his pocketbook containing valuable papers and his ticket to Chicago, besides cash for his travelling expenses. Fortunately, he had another sum of money on his person, so that his journey was merely delayed.

CLASS OF '89
"The democrats of Springfield, Mass., regard it highly important that the best man obtainable for the party and for the city should be the candidate for Mayor this year," says the Springfield Republican. "Many leading democrats have suggested the name of James L. Doherty as the man who would offer this qualification and who, even in a two-sided contest, would be assured of an election if he would accept the nomination. Mr. Doherty is a lawyer with a growing business which he feels it his duty to attend to, and he feels that there are other men in the party better able to handle the city's affairs who can better afford the time. He would feel that an election to the mayoralty would involve a study of the municipal problems that would be most exacting and he would not be satisfied to do less than devote his entire energy to directing the city's affairs. This he does not feel that he can afford to do.

Bowdoin o, New Hampshire State, 5.

In a well-played game New Hampshire State defeated Bowdoin last Saturday by the score of 5-0. This is the first time that New Hampshire has ever scored on a Bowdoin team.

In the first half the ball was in Bowdoin's territory, being kept there by the fierce line backing of the New Hampshire boys. Their backs would buck Bowdoin's line time and again, making good gains from tackle to tackle. Towards the close of the half New Hampshire was on Bowdoin's one-yard line. Twice Bowdoin held, and on the third down Cone fumbled, but secured the ball again for first down. Penalties brought the ball back on Bowdoin's 18-yard line—where McCircle tried a goal from the field, but failed. A series of punts followed, the half ending with the ball in New Hampshire's possession on her 23-yard line.

In the second half New Hampshire by steady line gains thru Bowdoin's left guard and tackle, brought the ball across the line. Captain Crowley objected to the touchdown, claiming that the ball was not across the line, but Referee Smith allowed the touchdown on the grounds that Bowdoin had pushed the ball back after the whistle blew. Bowdoin tried hard on the next kick-off to score, but New Hampshire's line held like a stone-wall.

FRESHMAN TRACK

Bowdoin, 1911, will appear to-morrow for the first time pitted as a class against another body in an athletic contest. Bowdoin Freshmen and Bates Freshmen hold a meet at Lewiston to-morrow. It must be confessed that Bowdoin will be represented with but a fair team. The Freshmen have shown but very little interest in training for the meet. Every 1911 man who does not go with the college to Waterville should certainly travel to Lewiston and encourage his classmates, that the class may seem to have spirit in watching an event, if they cannot work for it. Captain Atwood and Coach Merrill of the 'varsity will accompany the team. The following is the team that will represent the Bowdoin youngsters: Captain Robinson, Half Mile and Mile; Wiggin, Hurdles and Pole Vault; Kaulbach, Sprints; Clifford, Weights; E. Davis, Weights and High Jump; L. Davis, Weights and Broad Jump; Hastings, Weights; Pierce, Broad Jump, High Jump and Hurdles: Allen, Pole Vault and Quarter Mile, Hine, Half Mile; Skillin, Mile; Cole, Quarter Mile.

NO RACE WITH RATES

Cross Country Run Given Up — Lewiston College Wanted Everything

Bowdoin will not meet Bates in a cross country run this fall. Although the arrangements here were supposed to be completed, it seems that Bates had conceived the idea that the cross country run was to be held at the same time as the Freshmen Meet at Lewiston. Furthermore, our opponents had the impression that the race was to be run only by men from the three upper classes of each college! Bowdoin had regarded the race in an absolutely different light. We had prepared for a 'varsity contest to be held on some other date. Inasmuch as no agreement could be reached, the race was declared off. It seems to Bowdoin that the fault is certainly not with her. We were anxious to win and were even willing to let Bates have both the Freshmen Meet and Cross Country in Lewiston, but certainly never did have any understanding that we were to debar our Freshmen. If Bowdoin holds an athletic event, she desires that everyone shall take part who can. Just what definite advantage Bates considers Bowdoin is receiving by running Freshmen more than she herself will get, is impossible to see. At any rate, no agreement could be arrived at, so Bowdoin will go elsewhere for a cross country opponent. The Bowdoin team is still in training, and it is hoped that some race will be held.

CROSS COUNTRY

Bowdoin to Run Tufts at Brunswick or Portland.

As the cross country run between Bowdoin and Bates has been called off, it has been arranged to have one between Bowdoin and Tufts. Plans for this are not fully completed as yet, but it will probably take place on Friday or Saturday of next week, either here or in Portland. All who are interested in this form of Track Athletics will be glad to learn that there will be a run this fall even though Bates refused to run. It is, of course, a good thing for Bowdoin to get into active relations with an out of state college and, of course, there is a little more inducement for us to win. Our team has been training well this fall and, if they keep it up, we will stand a good show of coming out ahead. The trials for the team will be held next Monday or Tuesday. The team will be composed of six men, the same as was planned formerly. Tufts has suggested the idea that the race be held in Portland at the same time as the football game, as an added feature of interest. Such would seem to be an excellent idea, although it would scarcely be practical to run on the same afternoon, but a race may be held on Saturday morning or even Friday afternoon. The plans for the race had not been definitely decided when the Orient went to press. There is no doubt but that a race will be arranged — Tufts fellows are good sportsmen! Bowdoin will have her hands full in this run and hard training will be carried on from this time. The following men are most prominent among the runners now: Robinson, '08; Weston, '09; Stone, '09; Timberlake, '08; Slocum, '10; Colbeth, '10; R. D. Morss, '10; Robinson, '11; Kellogg, '11. All the men are good and a fast team will be developed. "B's" will undoubtedly be granted if the team wins.

TALK OF PRESIDENT CHASE TO CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

Last Thursday evening the Christian Association had the pleasure and honor of listening to an address delivered by President Chase of Bates.

Under the title of "The Problems of a College Man," he spoke of "The Constructive Life," impressing upon the minds of those present, by relating episodes of many colleges, especially of Harvard and Bowdoin, that purity and magnanimity are most essential in the development of higher and nobler characters of man.

Perhaps the part of his address which interests us most is the way in which he spoke of Bowdoin and Bowdoin men, relating the incident of the first college man he met, who happened to be a Bowdoin graduate. "That man, he said, has made a success of life in every way which has been the case of every Bowdoin man I have had the pleasure of knowing." Then he spoke of the great esteem and honor with which he had always held Bowdoin and her sons.

In short, those who heard him were pleased, not because he spoke so highly of our college, but because he spoke of facts so grouped that they were interesting to all who were present.

SUNDAY CHAPEL

On Sunday last Rev. Charles Cuthbert Hall, of Union Seminary, New York, visited Brunswick, as the first college preacher of the present year. His talk at chapel was especially interesting and pertinent. He said in part:

"At your present stage in life there are two admonitions of Christ which commend themselves with unusual force. First, the outlook into life should be broad and penetrating; and second, the actual "launching out" should be swift and far-reaching. People, nowadays, are too prone to spend their lives in the shallows, too easily satisfied with the local incidentals of daily existence.

Men and especially college men, read history, appreciate and enjoy the lives and actions of those whose names are written large, without any especial thought of those who are to work and do the things in contemporary history. It should be the purpose of college men to cast aside this apathetic attitude and to fit themselves for the greatest and truest trusts of life by launching out early while youth’s longings are strong.

In Longfellow and Hawthorne, two of Bowdoin’s famous sons, we find men who first took this broad outlook, and then started boldly out. As a result of their timely realization of youthful possibilities, we have influences that are still living and standing for the noblest ends and aims."

SOPHOMORES, 5; FRESHMEN, 2

Bowdoin, 1911, Upholds the College Tradition and Dutifully Loses its Baseball Series to the Sophomores.

The Sophomores won the third and deciding game in the series with the Freshmen, defeating them, 5 to 2, in a most exciting game. The Freshmen, though defeated, played a remarkably snappy and consistent game. In fact, the only uninteresting and unequal periods of the entire game were the second and fifth innings when each time by some timely hitting and a serious error on the part of their opponents the Sophomores were able to pile up the runs which later won them the contest. Hobbs pitched a strong, consistent game for the Sophomores and it was only as the result of a home run by Clifford and an inexcusable fumble by Ross that the Freshmen were able to score at all. The feature of the game was a fine one-handed catch by Lawless. "The score:

The Interfraternity Council

During the past few years a new college organization has come into being which bids fair to soften many long standing prejudices, and draw the college community one step nearer to its ideal. In the fall of 1906 the student body, in view of a long standing want, took the initiative and created the body known as the "interfraternity council," made up of the best bone and sinew in the eight Greek-letter societies.

The flexibility and effectiveness of this body was at once demonstrated. It met, not sporadically, but regularly and often. Questions incapable of solution in the individual fraternity halls were discussed and settled, not in favor of the few, but of all. The different policies and aims of the different chapters were made known and weeded out of the harmonious whole. In these and various other ways it has proved itself an apt and accurate vehicle for the conveyance of student sentiment, as well as for securing uniform and earnest actions on the part of college men.

Since this body possesses the true representative spirit and has proved its efficiency to a greater degree than any other undergraduate organization, it would seem a very politic move to place in its hands the powers nominally exercised by our defunct jury. This latter body has of late years been rather unwieldy and indisposed, in fact not once during the past year did the entire jury meet to consider questions relating to undergraduate conduct. Under these circumstances it would seem fitting, unless the college intends to hold its students in a state of tutelage, that our jurisdictional rights be revived and placed in the hands of a body that is just and active. In other words "students should be given the largest liberty in the conduct of personal affairs, consistent with the dignity and purpose of the college."

Freshmen in Athletics

There has been talk among some of the men in college about a scheme for getting more men into athletics. The scheme as now in vogue in some of the New England colleges, is at least worth consideration, and appears to be fully worthy of adoption. It is for the undergraduate body to compel every member of the Freshman Class to go out for at least one branch of athletics, and stay out for that branch during its whole season.

Since, even in this year, when we have the largest entering class in the history of the college, between 85 and 90 per cent. of the men here are fraternity men, Bowdoin is unusually well situated to carry out such a scheme. Each fraternity can see to it that every man in its Freshman delegation is out for some branch of athletics, and so pressure may easily be brought on over 85 per cent. of the Freshman Class. There also might be some upperclassman appointed by each fraternity to see to it that his men got started in the ways of the athletic squads, so avoiding another common difficulty, that of the unexperienced Freshman, who goes to the field a few days, does not know what to do, and being noticed by no one, gives up athletics without even a regular tryout.

The possibility of the scheme is then evident, and the ORIENT sees only reasons why it deserves the hearty backing of every one. There will be but few exceptions to the ruling, for though there may be many who are not physically able to play football, or who have not the ability to play baseball, yet there is scarcely a single college man who is unable to enter into some branch of track athletics. And there is practically no one who will deny that a college man is not in better condition both mentally and physically for an hour's daily exercise such as would result from regular training for some branch of athletics.

Besides this general advantage to the man which will be of value to every man for his whole life, there is another advantage which must not be neglected. This is the social life of an athletic squad. On an athletic squad every man is thrown into more informal relations with his college mates than is possible in any other manner, and here he meets every man on a basis where faithful, fair play, and pluck are absolutely the only tests.

Further, there is no doubt that such a movement as the one suggested, will raise Bowdoin's athletic record, which is the pride of every alumnus and undergraduate. And the result of such a condition, where every man in college will have personally tried to do something for Bowdoin's athletic honor, will be that there will no longer be the slightest cause for worry over Bowdoin spirit in her athletic contests. This spirit must inevitably spread to all other departments of college life, and fulfill the definition of college spirit in its broadest sense.

From these few points it is seen that it is possible to work the scheme at Bowdoin, that there is an opportunity in athletics for every college man to benefit himself, no matter what his ability and strength, that the Freshman by this scheme will come to know his class and college mates on better and fairer terms, and that the scheme will greatly help in solving the question of maintaining always at its height an alive Bowdoin spirit.

This is, of course, a radical movement, but it is one that in the minds of the Orient at least, is an excellent one. It is a matter which certainly merits the consideration of everyone in college, and which, if it meets with general approval, might well at some time in the near future, be referred to the interfraternity council. In regard to this movement, the Orient will be glad to welcome and publish any communications from alumni, faculty, or undergraduates.

MUSICAL CLUBS

Leader Cushing of the Glee Club and Kane of the Mandoline-Guitar Club, issued their first call for rehearsals and trials for the musical organizations last week. A goodly number of candidates reported and the prospects are bright for excellent clubs this year. Many men from last year's clubs are lost thru graduation, but it is particularly encouraging to see the large number from the lower classes that have reported. Trials for the club are held until Thanksgiving, the men being finally picked just before the recess. The first concert will be given in December. The following men have reported for the Glee Club: Stevens, '10; Stone, '10; Crowell, '10; Brown, '09; Newman, '09; Kendrie, '10; Cox, '08; McGlone, '10; Ham, '08; Foss, '08; Dave; '10; Crosby, '10; P. COLLEGE BAND

It is with a good deal of satisfaction that the ORIENT can report a movement towards the formation of a college band this fall. Ludwig, '10, called a meeting last Monday of all the men in the college who are able to play any band instrument and men responded to the number of seventeen, with the certainty that others who were not able to be at this meeting will report later. The fellows have reported as follows: Cornets: Kane, '09; Manter, '09; Taylor, '08; Atwood, '10; Swan, '11. Clarinets: Hussey, '11; Kern, '11. Altos: Wing, '10; Hubbard, '10; Pike, '09. Trombones: Smith, '10; Spurling, '11. Baritone: Smith, '08. Drums: Stetsion, '09; Matthews, '10; Sanborn, '10. Bass: Newman, '10. The band should make good with this material, and will probably be in condition to go to Portland to the Tufts game, provided the college will raise money to send it. To raise this money it will be necessary to pass around a subscription paper and it is hoped that the fellows will support the band, as best they can.
ABDOTT ROOM IN HUBBARD HALL

Memorial to the Distinguished Abbott Family of Maine.

In the upper part of the tower on the library a new room, to be known as the Abbott Room, has been fitted up during the summer. It was established through the efforts of the descendants of five sons of Bowdoin—Jacob Abbott, John S. C. Abbott, Gorham D. Abbott, Charles E. Abbott, and Samue' P. Abbott. The two living sons of Jacob Abbott, Rev. Lyman Abbott and Dr. Edward Abbott, have taken much interest in this memorial to the Abbotts, so long famous throughout New England. The room contains a chart showing the line of descent of the family, and its connections. Around the room are the coats of arms of the various branches of the family, together with portraits of several of their ancestors. There are a number of historical relics, among them a sword worn at Bunker Hill and the cane which Jacob Abbott, author of the Rollo Books, always carried. In book-cases are many books and manuscripts of books by members of the Abbott family, including all the manuscripts of the Rollo Books. There are also the original grants of land in Maine to these men who, though from Massachusetts, are thus connected with this State.

Athletic Council Meeting

At the meeting of the athletic council, held Saturday afternoon at Dr. Whittier's office, the principal subject of discussion was the proposition presented by Bates relative to the advisability of holding the contemplated cross-country run between the colleges on the same day as the Bates, '11, and Bowdoin, '11, track meet. This would entail debaring Freshmen from the run and make the event a contest between the three upper classes of the respective colleges rather than a varsity affair. After considerable discussion, the prevailing sentiment of the council was that it would be better to have the events come on two separate dates and they further felt that it would be better not to have any race at all than to hold a contest which was not representative of the entire student body of both institutions.

The council further voted to procure cases for the numerous trophies in the library. In this connection it might be well to add that the track manager has corresponded with Bates and as that college still feels that they are not justified in changing their proposition for the cross country run it has been decided not to hold that event. Arrangements are now in progress for a cross country run with another college.

Those present at the meeting were Dr. Whittier, Prof. Hutchins, Robinson, '08, Atwood, '09, and Colbath, '10.

Memorial Service on October 27

Following a universal demand on the part of the student body, the faculty have decided to suspend the regular form of service on Sunday, October 27, and to hold in its stead a memorial service. The sermon is to be delivered by Professor Henry L. Chapman, while Professor Wilmot B. Mitchell will offer a prayer. There will also be prepared a special musical service suitable to the occasion.

Alumni Notes

Class of 1856

Few, if any, of our alumni living without New England, have followed with greater interest and affection the life of the college in the last quarter century than Rev. Dr. James Henry Taylor of the Class of 1856 who died at Clinton, New York, October 13, 1907, in his seventy-ninth year. Prevented by various circumstances from attending the two centennial celebrations in 1894 and 1902, he sent to the former a glowing letter of loyalty and to the latter a song in honor of The Thordike Oak about which it was the custom in his day for the Senior Class to dance singing Auld Lang Syne immediately after the close of their last recitation.

Dr. Taylor, the son of Edward and Sarah (Warren) Taylor, was born at Ballston Spa, New York, 3 January, 1829. He was prepared for college at Bloomfield, Maine, under Augustus R. Brainard. His course at Bowdoin was interrupted by a year spent in teaching at St. Stephen, N. B. After graduating with honors, he entered Union Theological Seminary and completed the course in 1859.
The same year he assumed pastoral charge of the First Presbyterian Church in New Rochelle, N. Y., where he inaugurated and carried through the building of a new stone church, but was obliged to resign on account of his health in 1862. In October, 1863, he was called to the Second Presbyterian Church at Orange, N. J., where he remained five years. Having himself reported for service in the army, but being rejected on account of physical disability, he was ever an enthusiastic partisan of the cause of the North. Whenever he heard of a victory, he would mount his horse, ride to the church and ring the bell, shouting as he proceeded, "Another Union victory." From 1868 to 1875 he was pastor of the Presbyterian Church at Lake Foust, Ill., and a trustee of the University at that place in which he held for one year the chair of English Literature. In 1876 he was settled at Rome, N. Y., where he remained till his retirement from the work of the ministry in 1902. The closing years of his life were spent at Clinton, N. Y., with his son, Stephen L. Taylor, Esq.

The following interesting clipping appeared in the issue of the Chicago Inter-Ocean for October 7, 1907. It relates to Col. Isaac Wing, who gave $50,000 two years ago to permanently endow the chair of Mathematics at Bowdoin:

GIRL PROFITS BY OLD ROMANCE

Faithful through life to the woman he loved as a youth, Col. Isaac Wing, Lincoln, Neb., recently deceased, specified in his will that his estate of $20,000 go to the daughter of the woman who rejected him.

Miss Katherine Rittenhouse, a student at Northwestern University, is the one to profit by the undying devotion of her mother's former suitor, who had passed through life unmarried. Back of the dry legal verbiage of Col. Wing's last will and testament, which bequeaths all he possessed to a girl he had never seen, lies a romantic story so deep and true that young men sighed when they fell in love, when love never died, and when it was the greatest thing in all the world.

Not until the will of Lincoln's old resident was opened did those even who knew him best discover that hidden amid the somber colors of his bache or life were tints of the most passionate romances.

The girl student, who never had heard of or seen her unusual benefactor, was advised yesterday of the strange caprice fortune had played her.

CLASS OF 1857

Rev. Ebenezer Bean, after fourteen years of devoted service at Bluchi, Maine, resigns his pastorate this month. He recently received from the summer residents of his parish a written testimonial expressing their appreciation of his labors and his character. This was accompanied by a purse of $328. Mr. Bean will spend the winter with his son-in-law, Professor Hayes of the University of Illinois.

CLASS OF 1869

Rev. William H. Woodwell has recently resigned the pastorate of the Seabrook Church at Hampton Falls, N. H.

CLASS OF '82

Among the sad deaths of the summer was that of Adelbert W. Mansur, an active business man of Boston, Mass., who for several months had been suffering from nervous prostration. On June 11 he wandered away from the house of a relative whom he was visiting in West Boylston, Mass., and though careful search was made, his body was not discovered for several weeks. The medical examiners pronounced the cause of his death heart failure. Mr. Mansur leaves a widow and two children.

"The World To-Day" for October has a most interesting article by C. H. Claude, on the United States Life Saving Service, accompanied by an admirable likeness of its first and present Genera. Superintendant, Hon. Sumner I. Kimball, '55, "the man whose genius has produced the finest life saving service in the world."

CLASS OF '75

William J. Curtis, Esq., of New York City, before his recent vacation trip to Europe, thoughtfully took care that copies of the lately issued history of Camden, Me., where he has a summer home, should be placed in the College and the Public Library at Brunswick.

CLASS OF '96

John E. Burbank, A.M., of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey, now in charge of the Magnetic Observatory at Cheltenham, Md., has published this summer a preliminary paper entitled "Atmospheric Radioactivity Observations Showing Presence of Thorium in the Air," also an interesting article in the Physical Review on the temperature control of the Observatory under his direction.

Bowdoin Defeated Colby in Hard Game in First of Maine College Series.

Bowdoin defeated Colby Saturday by the score of 5-0 in one of the hardest and fastest games in the history of Maine college football.

Bowdoin went to Waterville with a fighting chance to win. Filled with the old Bowdoin spirit playing as one man and contesting every inch of ground during the entire fifty minutes of play, Captain Crowley and his men again demonstrated the fact that a Bowdoin team is never beaten until the close of a contest.

Colby men played the game for all that was in them; in fact, they excelled at straight football, but fumbled repeatedly, handled punts poorly, and were weak on the forward pass.

Both teams were severely penalized, Colby being the worst offender.

The touchdown was made in the first eight minutes of play on a perfectly executed forward pass which Wandtke received near the goal line, and, unmolested, carried the ball behind Colby's goal posts. Newman failed to kick the goal.

In the second half Bowdoin played a safe game. Taking advantage of Colby's inability to handle punts, Gould continually punted and Dwyer was either downed in his tracks or else a Bowdoin man secured the ball.

Several times during this half Colby came within our 15-yard line, but each time the line either held or else Colby became over eager and was penalized.

For Colby Capt. Sherburne, Dwyer, Goode and Trask excelled.

It would be manifestly unfair to mention any Bowdoin man as the star. For the first time this season the eleven played as a team, not as individuals and to each man belongs an equal share of the victory.

BOWDOIN-TUFTS

Not a Man Should be Left on the Campus Saturday, Everybody Off to Portland!

To-morrow Bowdoin meets Tufts in Portland. This will be a hard game—but Bowdoin's prospects are good. With new men in the line, and a fast set of backs, the team ought to give a good account of itself.

Tufts has beaten Wesleyan (23-0) and Holy Cross (10-0) this year, tied Vermont, and lost to the University of Maine team (4-0), with the loss of three men, counted on to do much good work for the Medford team.

The game will be played on the Pine Tree grounds, special rates will be secured for all the college fellows, a band will accompany the team; and with clever fellows who play the game, Bowdoin men ought to return with victory.

Up to the present time the officials haven't been decided on, but it is probable that Smith of Dartmouth will umpire the game.

CROSS-COUNTRY RUN WITH TUFTS

To-morrow morning at 9.30 A.M. corner of McKeen Street.

As a result of the trials held last Monday afternoon, the following men have been picked to run on the cross-country team against Tufts:

Colbath, ’10.
Slocum, ’10.
Simmons, ’09.
A. L. Robinson, ’08, alternates.

The race is scheduled to come off here at Brunswick to-morrow (Saturday) morning. The course will probably be five miles in length and will include the course over which the trials were run, which is only four miles long. The general direction of the run is through the woods to Pleasant Street, thence along the river bank and up Standpipe Hill. From there the run will make a detour around the Golf Club House and so back in a round-about way to the starting point at the Theta Delta Chi House. This may be changed somewhat in order to make it the proper length, but the run will take place over the ground lying northwest of the campus. It is rumored that Tufts has a strong team, but nothing more definite can be learned about it. The Tufts men will spend Friday night here at the different fraternity houses. The run will come early in the forenoon. The most advantageous places to view the race are out on Pleasant Street as from there the men can be seen in their way across Standpipe Hill and the Golf Links. This cross-country running is a new and very good feature of track athletics here and should be encouraged. We wish the team all success.

BOWDOIN 1911 BEATEN BY BATES 1911 IN DUAL TRACK MEET AT LEWISTON, LAST SATURDAY

For the first time in history the Bowdoin and Bates Freshmen have actually held a dual track meet. Though our Freshmen were beaten, yet they showed that they had trained well and may be looked for to furnish material for the ‘varsity next spring. Our weak point was in the weights where we missed some of the men who were absent on the football trip to Waterville. The great trouble this year has been that no one had faith in the fact that the meet would take place. It has been proposed for a number of years, but this is the first time it has been held.

The first heat in the 100-yard dash was won by Kaulbach, Bowdoin; L. Davis, Bowdoin, 2d; time, 11 1-5 seconds. Second heat was won by Mahoney, Bates; Sturahl, Bates, 2d. Time—11 1-5 seconds.

In the half-mile Captain Robinson, Bowdoin, won easily with Peaks of Bates, 2d, and Hine of Bowdoin, 3d. Time—2 minutes, 30 1-5 seconds.

The 120-yard hurdle race was won by Pierce, Bowdoin; Mahoney, Bates, 2d; Whittikind, Bates, 3d. Time—18 1-5 seconds.

The first heat in the 220-yard dash was won by Allen, Bowdoin; Leavitt, Bates, 2d; time, 25 seconds.

The second heat was won by Gordon, Bates, with Sturahl, Bates, 2d; time, 25 1-5 seconds.

The low hurdle race was won by Mahoney, Bates; Wiggin, Bowdoin, 2d; Pierce, Bowdoin, 3d, time, 28 1-5 seconds.

The quarter-mile was won by Whittikind, Bates; Preston, Bates, 2d; Cole, Bowdoin, 3d; time, 57 3-5 seconds.

The final heat of the 400-yard dash was won by Mahoney, Bates; Kaulbach, Bowdoin, 2d; L. Davis, Bowdoin, 3d; time, 11 seconds.

The mile run was easily won by Robinson, Bowdoin; Pelletier, Bates, 2d; Stuart, Bates, 3d; time, 5 minutes, 19 1-5 seconds.

The final heat in the 220-yard dash was won by Allen, Bowdoin; Leavitt, Bates, 2d; Gordon, Bates, 3d; time, 23 seconds.

The running broad jump was won by L. Davis, Bowdoin; Mahoney, Bates, 2d; Pierce, Bowdoin, 3d. Distance, 17 feet, 91/2 inches.

The running high jump was won by Pierce, Bowdoin; Dwight, Bates, 2d; Haggerty, Bowdoin, 3d; height, 5 feet.

The pole vault was won by Wiggin, Bowdoin; F. E. Davis, Bowdoin, 2d; Jenness, Bates, 3d; height, 7 feet.

Bates won all points in the discus throw with Leavitt, 1st; Preston, 2d; Gilman, 3d; distance, 90 feet 5 inches.

All the places in the shot put went to Bates. Leavitt was 1st; Loveland, 2d; Gilman, 3d; distance, 31 feet, 10 inches.

In the hammer-throw Leavitt, Bates, was 1st; Hastings, Bowdoin, 2d; Loveland, Bates, 3d; distance, 69 feet, 3 inches.

MEMORIAL SERVICES IN MEMORY OF RICHARD ALMY LEE, JOHN FRANKLIN MORRISON, HARRY JOSEPH DUGAN

On Sunday afternoon in King’s Chapel, special services were held in memory of the three undergraduates who lost their lives during the past summer. The services were very impressive, and will never be forgotten by those who attended, both for the occasion and the words that were spoken. The Orientation is very thankful that it is able to give the address in full:

ORDER OF SERVICE.

Violin Solo "Intermezzo" from Mascagni's "Cavalleria Rusticana".

Selection—"Lead, Kindly Light" Chapel Quartet

ADDRESS

HENRY LELAND CHAPMAN, LL.D.

This service, held in affectionate memory of the beloved friends and comrades who were taken from us during the last vacation, is but an outward expression of the tribute which is paid them in our hearts, and which is a continuing memorial of feeling, rather than of utterance. We try, instinctively, to say how much we valued them, and how great is our sense of loss,—to put into words our love and our grief;—but even in the effort we find that the words which we hesitatingly use do not compass our emotions, and only partially express our thoughts. You have known these class and college and fraternity mates in a hundred ways that are vivid to your recollection, but were too intimate and fleeting for recital. They were bound to you by ties so delicate and strong that they cannot be fully disclosed in speech. Here, where they were accustomed to meet with you in the daily service of worship, you gather now to honor their memory under an impulse more profound than any form of language can adequately describe. It must be so in any experience of loss and sorrow which is sincere enough to crave expression.

When Alfred Tennyson lost suddenly from his side a college friend who was endeared to him by the intimate converse and companionship of academic life, he tried to give some utterance to his sorrow. But, master of language as he was, and of its deeper and subtler meanings, he found it inadequate to his need, and he broke off for a moment, when he was but well begun, with the exclamation,—

"I sometimes hold it half a sin
To put in words the grief I feel,
For words, like Nature, half reveal,
And half conceal the soul within."

Nevertheless, it was a satisfaction to him, and half a comfort to speak of his friend; to recall their hours of congenial intercourse in the club, the dormitory, and the college walk, to remember the winning qualities of his heart and speech, and the manliness and nobility of his ideals; to gather some consolation from the thought that "tis better to have loved and lost, than never to have loved at all;" to confirm his faith in Providence and immortality with the assurance,—

"O, yet we trust that, somehow, good
Will be the final goal of ill;

That not one life shall be destroyed,
Or cast as rubbish to the void,
When God hath made the pile complete."

You, likewise, not only dwell with gratitude upon the memory of past associations, but you desire to give some token to each other, and to those outside the college, of the affectionate esteem in which these young men were held while they were still with you, and which you do not cease to cherish for their memories when they are no longer with you. And it is, surely, just and grateful to bear public witness to the genuineness of their characters; to the uprightness of their lives; to the manliness of their conduct; to their appreciation and support of whatever was honorable and right; to their conscientious fidelity to the trusts confided to them; to their loyalty and helpfulness in the various relations in which they stood to college and class and fraternity.

And that this may not seem to be merely my own estimate of them, I wish to add some extracts from the memorials of their respective classes, that the testimony of those who were nearest to them in college life, and most familiar with their characteristic traits, may form a part of this public tribute. Through a committee chosen to speak for them the classmates of Richard Almy Lee and John Franklin Morrison speak thus of them: "Both were hearty, wholesome college fellows, men who endeared themselves to us by the close ties of three years of intimate connection. Both were fellows whose moral life and personal characteristics were above reproach, leaders in the class, men who were willing always to work for the college and for the class. Whatever was done in college that aimed for the right, they could be depended upon to render assistance. In the front rank in pleasure and labor, yet it is not for what they did that we cherish their memory, but for what they were. To those who knew them as we classmates knew them, there remains the consolation that the whole course of their lives was pure and noble in every way."

And those who speak as the representatives of the classmates of Harry Joseph Dugan say of him: "He was a young man of noble qualities, and the life cut short was one of great promise. His manly traits, his studious tastes, his upright character, and his social nature endeared him to us who were closely associated with him as classmates during the past year, and will long be cherished in our hearts. His death comes to us all with a sense of personal loss."

We may well mourn the loss, and cherish the memory of college men of whom these things can be said by those who knew them in the intimacy of class fellowship. The college was proud to count them in its enrolled membership, and it is not less proud to remember their generous devotion to it, that they loved its history and associations, that they were jealous of its honor and good name, that they endeavored in all ways that were open to them to

Sectional Clubs

Bowdoin has been and is still strong in many departments. In the social life of her undergraduates, she has up to this year enjoyed almost unprecedented success through her sectional clubs. This year offers, to these clubs, unusual opportunities. For the established clubs it offers possibilities for further expansion and to those men who are unattached, in many cases, the chance is offered for consolidation with men from their locality and state. The Massachusetts Club can thrive under the addition of eighteen new men and it is to be noted with pleasure and at the same time with the hope that something will come of it that there are now nine men in college from the state of New Hampshire, and five men from the state of New York. To all these mentioned and many not mentioned, the ORIENT can say but one word: organize. Organize the sectional clubs as these clubs foster the spirit of fellowship which Bowdoin, which every college holds as an ideal well worth attaining. The rumor is current that the students from York County contemplate the formation of a club. To these men the ORIENT can offer nothing but the most cordial congratulation at this step and along with the right hand of congratulation the ORIENT urges these men to effect their formation without delay that others, less decided, may emulate the example thus set. Above all let those men who grow faint-hearted at the prospect of a club with only five or six members, remember that number is not the only requisite nor yet is it to be reckoned the prime object of a club. Fellowship based on an intimate

Celebrations

An item in the ORIENT this week mentions the fact that there was "but very little celebration after the Colby game on Saturday." Are Bowdoin students forgetting the art of celebrating? If we look back on the past few years it seems as if there had been but very few of the real old-time celebrations of late. In days gone by a celebration of any important athletic achievement was a well-planned and a notable event. A bonfire was always built in front of the chapel, a parade was formed, headed by a band, and the procession marched around to the various professors, who are always only too glad to speak on such occasions, and a general jollification resulted. But we have had not a decent celebration of this kind in years. It certainly is to be regretted if the moving of the centre of college life from campus to fraternity house has brought forth such a condition. Now the ORIENT does not believe that a celebration requires any great display of "college spirit." Hackneyed as this term is, still in its truer sense college spirit is never displayed by hallooing and shouting. But hallooing and shouting are college pleasures, which the student body need never feel ashamed to display in a worthy cause. Last spring when our baseball team made an unequalled record on the diamond, there was not a decent jollification during the whole spring. Now we do not believe in celebrating every minor victory that may fall to our lot, but the students are certainly becoming too dignified if they are forgetting the art of displaying pleasure when something notable is done. If, as the year past, something worthy does fall to our lot, let's not be austere, but all get out and have a good time to show our appreciation of it!
acquaintance is what a club holds in store for its men. Organize in spite of small numbers and as Bowdoin grows numbers will come to swell the ranks.

MEMORIAL SERVICES

promote its interests, and to make it, so far as their example could help, a seat, at once, of learning, of honorable activity, and of Christian influence. It is significant that Morrison and Lee had been chosen president and vice-president of the Christian Association of the college, an association that stands for the ideals of brotherly kindness, of mutual helpfulness, and of right living here in college.

It is not permissible for me to speak at this time of the more sacred ties of family and home which have been severed, futher than to say that the remembrance of them adds to the burden of our own sorrow, and fills us with a sense of deep, unuttered, sympathy for the hearts and the homes so darkly shadowed.

But to those homes, and to the college, remains the comforting thought that these young men, in whom both alike were interested, have left behind them a clear record, and a fragrant memory. They have left behind them the honorable esteem, and the unfeigned love of those with whom they lived in the intimate joys of home life, and in the scarcely less intimate associations of college life. They have emphasized anew for us the truth that the sure way to win the confidence and affection of our fellow-men is by a straightforward and manly adherence to our convictions of right, and by an unobtrusive devotion to the things that are honest, and true, and pure, and lovely, and of good report.

They have, also, exemplified for us the truth, equally important, that a brief life is long enough in which to show the quality and worth of character, and to earn the reward of the servant who, having been faithful in a few things, is bid to enter into the joy of his Lord.

These truths are the shining lessons of affliction, which we may carry with us, to mitigate our grief, and haply to guide us in the way we have, ourselves, to walk.

MEDICAL SCHOOL OPENS

The Medical School of Maine commenced its eighty-eighth Annual Course of Lectures on Monday of this week. Registration commenced on Thursday. Six weeks are allowed to students in which to register, so that the lists given below are not necessarily complete. The entering class is of average size. To the new men the Orient extends a hearty welcome.

The registration of the first and second year medical students is as follows:

At its first meeting, which is to be held on November 18, Professor Henry Johnson will read a paper on Petrarch. Among the other papers to be read during the course of the year are the following:

Marco Polo, by Professor Lee.
Benvenuto Cellini, by Professor Hutchins.
Galileo, by Professor Moody.
Machiavelli, by Professor Allen Johnson.
Savonarola, by Rev. Herbert Jump.

The Faculty Club proposes to issue, in the near future, a complete programme of its plans for the sessions to be held this winter.

Mr. A. W. Staub, who spoke at the Y. M. C. A., meeting, Thursday evening, conducted chapel, Friday morning.
Arthur Smith, '09, has returned from Farmington, where he has been employed during the past two weeks.
Assistant Manager Robinson guarded the board track during the celebration following the Bowdoin-Colby game.

F. P. Richards, '11, and Whitmore, '11, are singing at the First Congregational Church at Bath, where Cushinig, '09, is organist.
The celebration last Saturday night was not very general—a fire in front of the chapel being the only evidence of a well-won victory.
After the Colby game the students, while giving the Bowdoin yells, were stoned and egged by the Waterville "mob element"—or boys.
Andrews, '06, having lately recovered from a severe illness, has sailed for Carlsbad, Germany, where he will remain for some time.
Professor Little is showing the Freshmen around the library. He shows them where the books are to be found and how they are to be taken out.
Hale, '06, has been spending a few days in Brunswick, prior to his winter operations with the United States Brown Moth Commission in northern Maine.
For the second time Doctor Whittier prophesied that Bowdoin would win from Colby—and in the first half, too. And for the second time his prophecy came true.
There will be a meeting of the College Orchestra, Friday evening, November 1, at 7 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. Rooms. Everybody come and bring instruments.
Tefft, '09, and Hale, '10, took a t-amp to Orr's Island, Sunday, returning in the same day. The distance involved was something like thirty-two miles.
Matthews, '11, who has been confined in the hospital in Portland with typhoid fever, is so far improved in health as to be able to go home. He will return to college later.
The student who tore all the notices down from the bulletin board on Saturday evening may have labored under the impression that he was showing college spirit, but it certainly was misplaced spirit!
The college band will accompany the team to Portland, Saturday. The fellows have been working hard this week to make the band a success and wish to thank the student body for the financial support received.
David T. Parker, '08, heads the list of applicants who recently took an examination at Lewiston for recommendation for appointment to Annapolis. This gives him the privilege of an examination there next spring.
Last Friday's game at Waterville was the twenty-third time that Bowdoin and Colby have struggled on the gridiron. Of these games Bowdoin has won fifteen, tied three, and lost five. The largest score was in 1900 when Colby was defeated, 68-0.
Weston, '08, while on the cross country trials, Monday, cut himself badly in attempting to jump a barbed wire fence. It was found necessary to take two stitches, but he expects to be able to compete Saturday.

Quite a number of men went up to Lewiston with the Freshman Track Team. When they arrived back at the city the results of the first half of the Quacks were just arrived. Dr. Whittle was the first to see on the bulletin, "First half—Bowdoin 5, Colby 0." He at once exclaimed that his prophecy at the mass-meeting the night before had come true.

"At the annual meeting of the Connecticut Modern Language Association at Hartford, Nov. 9, Prof. R. J. Ham of Trinity, will give an address at the meeting session." Bowdoin friends of Professor Ham will be glad to learn that he has been so early honored in his new position.

There is a noticeable lack of guitar players in college. Thus a strong incentive is offered to enterprising individuals to take lessons and make a strong bid for the mandolin club. If they make this club, they will not only have many pleasant times themselves but they will also be of service to the college by adding strength to the musical clubs.

At the annual match of the New England Inter-Collegiate Golf Association, held at Woburn, Massachusetts, on Wednesday, October 16, the team match was won by Williams. Three colleges were represented in the tournament, Williams, Dartmouth and Technology. This is the third consecutive time that Williams has won the golf trophy. H. W. Stucklen, of Dartmouth, won the individual match. Bowdoin was not represented, although the college retains membership in the association.

It should be stated for the benefit of the students that the Orient arrives in Brunswick, Friday afternoon, and that they may be secured at the post office Friday afternoon or evening. It sometimes happens that they are not delivered until Saturday, but they can always be secured on Friday if they are asked for at the post office. When evening mail is given after supper at the post office, only first-class matter is handed out, but the Orient can always be secured by asking for them.

"In contrast to the neat green caps which the Chicago freshmen are wearing is the straw hat which the Bowdoin freshmen are required to wear wherever they go."—Daily Maroon, University of Chicago. As a fact, not a straw hat can be seen now, all the members of 1911 having discontinued wearing them since initiation. It would probably be better here at Bowdoin if instead of some outlandish headgear being prescribed each year for the entering class, which is worn for about a week, some neat cap was provided which should be worn all the year. But then, this is the custom we have, and it is a hard thing to change established practice!

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

Last Thursday evening, Mr. A. W. Straub spoke to the Christian Association on "Student Volunteer Movement for Foreign Missions." First Mr. Straub gave a short history of the student volunteer movement, starting its origin, growth, and accomplishments. In speaking of the kind of men wanted in the foreign mission service, Mr. Straub said none but college graduates were acceptable; men of sterling characters, high purposes, and firm resolutions.

As for the field of service, there is none greater in the world. The work is chiefly along religious and educational lines. The old-time idea that the foreign missionary must fight his way and be put to a thousand and one exposures is speedily being lost sight of and in the place of that idea men are learning that the dangers are not as stupendous as have been imagined and that there is a great willingness and eagerness on the part of the heathen to receive whatever of enlightenment the Christian nations of the world can bring him. Mr. Straub suggested that an element of "the square deal" ought to enter into our relations with those people to whom God is unknown.

COLLEGE BAND

Leader Kane has thrown himself into the work of developing and directing the proposed band with praiseworthy energy and it should be noted that he is being supported in a gratifying manner. The plans of the band, at present, seem concentrated about the single idea of making a creditable showing at the remainder of the games, but during the winter they propose to continue practicing systematically so that by spring they may prove effective attraction at the baseball games and track meet. There is another end to be accomplished by this continued winter practice than that of temporary perfection. It is hoped that with the nucleus remaining in college of this year's band that interest in a college band may be re-awakened and that next year a band can be developed which will surpass any band Bowdoin has ever had.

COMMUNICATION

The stand which the Orient takes in regard to the plans for Freshmen having some branch of athletics compulsory, is meeting with much favor. The college will be the gainer, but by far the greatest benefit falls on the student himself. The exercise result-

Mr. Melcher belonged to a Brunswick family noted in the last century for their skill as carpenters and

C., to make a magnetic survey of that ocean. In August he left the Yacht Galilee at Alaska and went down the Yukon River as far as Dawson City to make magnetic observations. TUFTS, 19; BOWDOIN, 2

Bowdoin Loses in Hard Game at Portland.

Tufts defeated Bowdoin at Portland, Saturday, by a score of 19 to 2. The game was far closer and more interesting than the score would indicate.

Gould kicked off to Wandtke who advanced the ball from the 15 to the 30-yard line. Newman and Lee made a yard each; then Gould punted to Tufts' 38-yard line. Tufts fumbled but recovered the ball several yards nearer their goal. A forward pass was tried unsuccessfully; and Tufts was penalized 15 yards. Green punted to Gould 25 yards down the field.

Newman gained a yard; on the next play, however, Bowdoin was penalized 15 yards. Commins went through left tackle for 3 yards and Crowley made 1 on the forward pass. Gould then essayed a field goal, the ball falling short by about a yard.

Green ran the kick back 20 yards. Sheedy made 4; then 40 on a neatly executed trick play.

On the next play Tufts fumbled, but recovered the ball. Wallace was thrown for a loss. Green then punted to Phipps on Bowdoin's 12-yard line.

Tufts held and Gould punted to Green who ran the ball back 15 yards. The ball was now on Bowdoin's 28-yard line. Wallace failed to gain; the forward pass gave Tufts 15 yards; Hooper made 3. Two plays brought the ball within a yard of Bowdoin's goal and Hooper was pushed over for a touchdown. Green missed an easy goal.

Gould dubbed a kick along the ground which Lee secured on Tufts' 35-yard line. A poorly executed forward pass cost Bowdoin 15 yards. Phipps made 10; Bowdoin fumbled on the next play and Tufts received the ball, rushed it to Bowdoin's 30-yard line, where Green dropped a pretty goal.

Receiving the ball on the kick off Bowdoin rushed it up the field to the 7-yard line where Green intercepting a forward pass was dragged behind his own goal for a safety.

Tufts secured one touchdown and a goal from the field in each half.

Tufts excelled in trick plays, continually making them to good advantage. Bowdoin was stronger in straight line bucking. Several times during the game the team was within striking distance of Tufts' goal, only to be penalized or to lose the ball through poor headwork.

Captain Green of Tufts was the individual star of the game. He used exceptionally good judgment in running his team and outpunted either Gould or Newman. His goal from the field in the second half was the feature of the game.

For Bowdoin Phipps proved to be the best ground gainer, frequently making from 10 to 20 yards. Haley at guard was a tower of strength, continually breaking through and rushing the Tufts runner for a loss.

BOWDOIN VS. BATES

The Great Game of the Year Tomorrow!—Everybody Up to Lewiston!

Next Saturday at Garcelon Field, Lewiston, Bowdoin meets Bates in what promises to be one of the most stubbornly fought contests in the intercollegiate football series. Bates will be no easy opponent, having scored on Harvard, beaten New Hampshire State and held Exeter and Colby to low scores. Added to this good showing Captain Schumacher, who has been ill for the past few weeks, will be back in his old place at tackle. But Bowdoin supporters will go to the Spindle City full of confidence, with a good team, with a week's hard and consistent practice behind them, to bring back a victory. It is quite probable that the old Exeter back, King, and Manter, will be seen in Bowdoin togs.

If Bowdoin wins this game, and at the same time if Maine should beat Colby—Bowdoin will have a clear field for the championship, the best that Maine could do would be to tie with Bowdoin, by winning the game at Brunswick the coming Saturday. If Colby wins the—Bowdoin will have to beat Maine on the 16th to win the championship.

The probable line-up:

Bowdoin.

Wandtke, I.c., Cummings
Newman, I.t., Schumacher (Capt.)
Haley, I.g., Booker
Lente or Boynton, c., Cochran
Sewall, r.g., McKenna
Commings, r.t., Parks

Phipps or King, I.h.b., Keane

Bowdoin Loses Cross-Country Run

TUFTS, 27; BOWDOIN, 28—COLBATH, OF BOWDOIN, COMES IN FIRST.

Bowdoin was defeated by Tufts last Saturday morning in the first cross-country run she has ever held with another college. The race was a success and one will be held every year in the future, if possible. The result of this race was Tufts 27, Bowdoin 28. The course was four and a half miles in length and lay as follows: Start at Theta Dlta Chi House, go out McKean Street, turn to right, down across the railroad to Pleasant Street, along east and north sides of cemetery, cross the brook near the river, go straight up over Standpipe Hill to the River Road, along this for a hundred yards, then turn sharp west through an orchard, then across the golf links to a side road, down this to Pleasant street, and so home, the last half-mile being the same as the first. When the course was laid out the brook was so narrow that it could be jumped, but after the rains had raised it a seow had to be moored across it.

The runners for the two colleges were:

Tufts.

Marshall, 2
Morrison, 3
Williams, 5
Powers, 6
Simmons, 10

Total, 27.

Bowdoin.

1, Colbath
3, Sloman
7, Morss
8, Simmons
9, Weston

Total, 28.

At the end of the first mile the Tufts men were bunched in the lead with the Bowdoin runners in a group close behind. This arrangement was kept practically the same during the first three miles. When the men reached Pleasant Street, the second time they began to increase their speed and string out more. At the beginning of the last half-mile they were in two groups a hundred yards apart. In the first one were Marshall, Morrison, Colbath, Slocum and Williams, in the second, Powers, Morss, Weston, Simmons, Lennon.

Colbath won easily by about twenty yards. The others finished in this order: Marshall, Slocum, Morrison, Williams, Powers, Morss, Simmons, Weston, Lennon. The time was 31 minutes, 26 and 2-5 seconds.

The judges at the finish were Col. H. A. Wing of Lewiston, Coach O'Donnell of Bates, Dr. Whittier of Bowdoin, Stevens of Tufts, Prof. Hutchins, and S. B. Furbish.

CROSS COUNTRY

PROSPECTS OF ANOTHER RACE—BATES SEEMS DESIROUS TO RUN

“There has been much interest in cross country running here this fall. Clifford, '08, has been elected captain of the team. After trying to arrange a dual meet with Bowdoin, that college has at last succeeded in finding a successful excuse and has evaded a meet. We were ready to run under any suitable conditions, but the Brunswick athletes were hard to please.”—Bates Student.

The above appeared in the current issue of the Bates Student. The Orient has no desire to make comment which would stir up any feeling between the two institutions. If Bates felt the Orient was using that college unjustly in its news comment of two weeks ago, we offer apology to their feelings. The Orient is coming to be distinctly a newspaper and we stated the news exactly as the facts were. However, in view of the fact that the Student appears to believe that it was Bowdoin who was anxious to avoid running... a race, and that there may be no wrong impression in regard to this, the Orient called the attention of the Bowdoin Track Association to the comment and efforts are now being made to arrange for a cross country run between the two colleges. We most sincerely hope that such a race can be arranged. Bowdoin is willing to agree to any terms whatsoever, and there is plenty of time to arrange for a contest. We at Bowdoin have not the slightest ill feeling towards Bates and most sincerely hope that a cross-country can be run. Much better feeling has grown up between the two colleges in the past few years and we most sincerely hope that the mutual relations will continue to be the best. At present the contest is not decided. Bowdoin should stand a good chance, with the experience gained in the former race. As it is evident that Bowdoin has no desire to avoid any contest, we certainly believe that Bates will be good enough sportsmen to accept our offer.

MUSICAL CLUBS

There seems to be a good outlook for the Musical Clubs this year. There is a lot of good new material in the Freshman Class and these new men are turning out well for the clubs. The Glee Club is to hold rehearsals every Monday, Wednesday and Friday at five o'clock, and the work of thinning out the men will soon begin, so as to bring down the number from the present forty to the twenty or less who are to be taken on the trips. Nothing definite is announced about the trips to be made, but there is some talk of holding a joint concert with the Dartmouth Musical Clubs in Portland some time during January.

COLLEGE ORCHESTRA

The first rehearsal of the Orchestra was held Tuesday evening in the Y. M. C. A. Rooms. There was a good number of fellows out and the prospects for a prosperous season seem good. The rehearsals will not be extremely long and will not come oftener than once or twice a week. This is a good way to practice, and everybody who is interested in music should spend at least one or two hours a week for practice. If the scheme materializes trips will be planned and there will be good fun for all.

DELTA UPSILON CONVENTION

The Delta Upsilon Fraternity held its annual convention Oct. 17th and 18th with the Minnesota Chapter at the West Hotel, Minneapolis, Minn. The President of the Convention was W. B. Chamberlain, a Michigan alumnus, and the afternoon of the first day was spent at the President's summer home at Lake Winnetonka, with a trip around the lake on a chartered steamer. On the second day the business of the convention was disposed of and in the evening came the national banquet, which was the crowning event of the convention. Speeches were heard from President W. B. Chamberlain, Chancellor E. Benjamin Andrews of the University of Nebraska, Prof. Paul S. Reinsch of the University of Wisconsin, and Prof. E. McDermott of the University of Minnesota.

The trip to Minneapolis was interesting. The delegates from the East traveled by special car from Boston as far as Chicago and from there on by special train. The delegates from the Bowdoin Chapter were Edgar F. Sewell, '09, and Percy G. Bishop, '09.

BIBLE STUDY PLANS

About twenty-five students met with Rev. Herbert A. Jump last Monday evening in the Y. M. C. A. rooms and laid out the plan of Bible Study for the year.

It is planned to hold about fifteen meetings, extending from the present time to the middle of March, during which time the Christian Bible will be studied as comprehensively as possible. The course is to consist of lectures, readings and discussions. The topics for immediate study are: "The King James Bible, its Aim and its Humanity," "Its Ancestors and its Posterity," "The Bible Story of the Beginning," "Aims and Methods of Bible Scholarship."

These topics are to be followed by a study of Hebrew History, Poetry, Prophecy, etc., and then the rest of the year is devoted to work in the New Testament.

The course promises to be of an informal nature and all men interested are urged to come, for a knowledge of the Christian Bible forms an essential part of every liberal education.
Tufts most effectively showed that two large groups of college fellows would attend an athletic contest without any but the best of spirit. The Orient is particularly pleased at the high expressions of praise that the Portland papers printed in regard to the conduct of the large crowd of Bowdoin men in the city. These are things which help the college more than we can imagine. Lively, enthusiastic, and never-say-die spirit throughout the game and gentlemanly character about the city are characteristics that the true college man should never forget. Remembering ideals such as these does more good for the college than any other factor.

1911 Class Colors at Bowdoin, the Orient looks upon as the duty of every Bowdoin man to uphold. The three upperclasses, we trust, need no stimulus to their zeal as supporters of those things which are distinctly Bowdoin. So, assuming and feeling confident of the loyalty of the upperclasses, we address ourselves in this case to the Freshman Class. It has been the custom, it might almost be called a tradition, since it has been the heredity of generations, for the incoming class to adopt the colors of the outgoing class. That is to say, the class colors of 1907 were Red and White and the Orient, which in matters of this kind always represents college sentiment, hopes that at their next meeting the Class of 1911 will show its conservativeness in maintaining college customs by voting to adopt as their class colors, Red and White.

Class Numerals the Athletic Association should attend to at its next meeting. When the present Association rules in regard to the wearing of class numerals were formed no provision was made for granting numerals to members of class teams which competed with class teams of other institutions. These rules were adopted when Bowdoin did not hold regular class meets with any other college. Now that a meet has been held with Bates some rule should be adopted. As it now stands, Bowdoin Freshmen who won points in the track meet with Bates cannot rightfully wear numerals. The Orient would recommend that the Athletic Association at a coming mass-meeting attend to this at once and award numerals to those men who won first or second place. As the Athletic Association governs the matter of the wearing of class numerals, its rules should be made comprehensive and should be enforced.

DRAMATIC CLUB

The cast of "Halfback Sandy" is rehearsing regularly twice a week now, Monday and Thursday evening. Good progress is being made under the coaching of Miss Curtis and the fellows seem to be showing good interest in the work. The first two acts have been rehearsed several times and the third is to be taken up soon. The play is to be given in three places in the State, besides Brunswick, and there is some talk of a Massachusetts trip.

FINANCIAL REPORTS

As was stated in the Commencement Orient, owing to a fatal accident to the managers of two athletic organizations, it was impossible to secure all the reports at that time. The reports, having but just come to our attention, are printed in this issue. Together with the baseball report is shown a brief comparison of the season with that of 1906. The Season Ticket idea in baseball proved to be a marked failure, causing considerable loss. The effect of the weather was of marked importance in the attendance. The cancelling of one of the Dartmouth games by the council also made a distinct loss. The Track Association shows slight deficit. These deficits and the consequent falling off of subscriptions in all branches of athletics are serious food for thought. It shows in plain figures how Bowdoin students are refusing to pay for their own athletics.

COMPARISON

Owing to the deficit of this season, the management considers it only fair to itself to submit the following items of comparison between the various items of expense during the 1906 and 1907 seasons, that it may be shown that the deficit of 1907 is not due to excessive bills.

From these figures of corresponding games, it is seen how much less the attendance was in 1907 than in 1906—due to the extreme coldness of the weather. Also, two games were cancelled in 1907—Bates and Tufts—with much expense.

The cancelling of one of Dartmouth games by Athletic Council cost $60.

COMMUNICATION
There have been many inquiries as to whether the Class of 1910 will hold the annual Sophomore Hop this year. Last year the hop was held in Memorial Hall, the evening of November twenty-third, which is just before the Thanksgiving recess. It is hoped that the members of the class will talk the hop over, and that definite action will be taken on it at a class meeting, called in the near future.

Clifford, '10, acted as usher at the funeral of the late Monsieur Wallace at Lewiston.
Many Portland people remarked upon the fact that Bowdoin men were certainly good losers.
The Dramatic Club is holding rehearsals regularly, and some very good work is being done.
Many thanks are due the Freshmen who so kindly acted as flagmen on the cross-country course.
Monday noon the chapel choir gathered in the Y. M. C. A. rooms to practice some new hymns.

Now that Bowdoin has made a start in cross-country work, we hope to see more of it done next year.
Files, '09, Goodspeed, '09, and Callahan, '11, are out of college for a week, being employed at Gorham in picking apples.
The Bowdoin students are to be congratulated on the display of college spirit which they showed at the game with Tufts.
General Joshua L. Chamberlain, LL.D., delivered an address before the Associated Charities of Maine at Portland, last Tuesday.
Manter, '09, who has been laid up for several weeks, with an injured ankle, has again returned to practice with the squad.
Goodspeed, '09, attended the initiation of Psi Chapter of Kappa Sigma and the celebration of Maine night at Orono, last Saturday.

The class in Mechanical Drawing has moved into its new quarters in the room over the chemistry lecture room.
The next rehearsal of the Orchest a will be Monday evening at 7 o'clock, in the Y. M. C. A. Rooms. Everybody come!!

The Lewiston Journal reports the return of Pres. Hyde in the near future. His health has been much improved by his long rest.
Almost the entire student body gathered at the Theta Delta Chi House last Saturday, to see the finish of the cross-country race.
Ginn, '09, was confined to his room for a few days last week by an attack of the grip, but has now recovered.
F. H. Hobbs, '10, was called to his home in Waterboro on last Friday by the serious illness of his father.
Brunswick High School met defeat at the hands of Gardiner High on Whittier Field last Saturday, 12 to 6.
Several of the professors kindly granted adjourns last Saturday morning to enable the students to see the cross-country race with Tufts.
McDade, '09, umpired the game last Saturday at Auburn. Westbrook Seminary defeated Edward Little High School by a score of 6—5.
The fall meeting of the North Cumberland Conference of the Congregational Churches was held last week with the First Parish Church.
It is hoped that a large Bowdoin banner, similar to the Tufts banner displayed in Portland, will be in evidence to-morrow at the Bates game.
The Orient takes pleasure in announcing the unanimous election of Mr. Joseph M. Boyce, 1908, of Portland, to the editorial board of the paper.
The band made a very creditable showing at the game in Portland and much credit is due the leader, manager and the student body who have worked so hard to make it a success.
The class and fraternity resolutions on the loss of the Bowdoin undergraduates printed in the first issue of the Orient this fall, were reprinted last week in the Medford, Mass., Mirror.
The Orient has received a copy of the pamphlet by Edward Stanwood, '01, editor of the Youth's Companion, on "The Separation of Maine from Massachusetts," for which we acknowledge our thanks.
Prof. Hastings and Div. A of the class in surveying won cigars from a farmer in Topsham a short time ago. There was a wager over the area of a piece of land and Prof. Hastings calculated nearer than the owner of the land.
In the current issue of the Brunswick Record is a report from H. D. Evans, director of the State Laboratory of Hygiene at Augusta, in which he states that the Brunswick water system is of exceptional purity as shown by a recent analysis. The water system is from driven wells wholly.
The Portland Telegram of last Sunday spoke of the orderly conduct of the Bowdoin students in Portland and of the deference they showed by lifting their hats while a funeral was passing.

The Freshmen have a good chance to make their numerals by playing on their class team in the Freshman-Sophomore game, which will probably take place just before the Thanksgiving recess.

Bates and Maine played a hard-fought game which resulted in a tie last Saturday, the score being 6 to 6. This practically puts Bates out of the championship series, but gives Maine a chance to tie with Bowdoin or Colby.

The time-honored celebration of Purification Night took place last Monday evening. The Freshmen were compelled to do a series of stunts and then were given the water cure, the scene of operations being in front of the chapel.

King, the famous Exeter halfback who played on the team that defeated Andover four years ago and who played with Hogan, a Yale star of two years ago, and Tad Jones and Cooney, two Yale stars at present, has entered Bowdoin Medical College and will probably make the team this year.

Dr. W. E. Sargent, '78, principal of Hebron Academy, delivered an interesting address on "Endurance," before the Christian Association last evening. Dr. Sargent was followed by Mr. Clayton S. Cooper, international secretary for Bible Study who kindly consented to step off at Brunswick while on his way from New York to a convention in Canada.

Themes 29, 32, 34, 36, 40, 41, 43, 46, 52, 54, 59, 64, 67, 69, 72, have been cancelled from the list in English III and outside reading will be substituted for them. Owing to the large size of the class, Prof. Foster has been unable to give proper individual attention. This change he had made that he may have more time to devote to the needs of the separate men.

One of the Tufts students, in his enthusiasm for his Alma Mater, in Portland, Saturday, inscribed her name on some of Portland's business blocks. He was only saved from arrest by the entreaties of his fellow-students and by his agreement to erase all the chalk marks. A large and interested crowd of spectators overlooked the operation which was superintended by a squad of police, much to the chagrin of the Tufts enthusiast.

The contest for positions on the Orient board promises to be very spirited this year. Already a considerable number of Freshmen have commenced work, besides four men from 1910. The Freshmen are showing the right spirit. There are a number of vacancies to be filled and there is still opportunity for men to enter the competition. After our next issue, new connectors cannot enter, so any who have delayed commencing work, should begin at once.

The Ibis met for organization last week and will hold its first regular meeting on next Monday evening at the New Meadows Inn. An interesting course of speakers is planned for the year and the club will give at least one jubilee lecture. The membership of the club this year is as follows: All-Seniors, William R. Crowley, Jay L. Gray, Arthur T. Gould, Arthur H. Ham, George P. Hyde, Mamie P. Merrill, Arthur L. Robinson, Carl M. Robinson.

Bowdoin Wins Second Game in Maine Intercollegiate Series in Hard-Fought Contest at Lewiston

Bowdoin narrowly defeated Bates on Garcelon Field, Saturday, by the close score of six to five.

The game which was hard fought throughout was one of the roughest games in the history of Maine college football. Bates was the worst offender in this respect, both Hall and Keaney were put out of the game on account of rough tactics.

The feature of the game was a spectacular run by Files who intercepted a forward pass by Schumacher and raced ninety yards down the field before he was downed.

Phipps played a star game for Bowdoin as did Newman, Commins, Haley and Captain Crowley.

Captain Schumacher excelled for Bates. He was the only man able to stop Bowdoin's backs, he outpunted Newman, and was in every play.

Out of respect for the late Professor Rand of Bates neither college indulged in organized cheering.

The first half was evenly contested, but in the second half Bowdoin showed superior form, gaining almost at will through the Bates' line and continually forcing the Lewiston college to punt.

Commins received the kick-off on Bowdoin's thirty-yard line and advanced the ball ten yards before he was downed.

Lee made nine yards on the first play and Phipps added eight. On the next play Bowdoin was penalized ten yards for off-side. Newman punted and the Bates man was downed in his tracks.

Bates made five, then three yards. Schumacher tried an onside kick which Wandtke nabbed.

Bates was penalized five yards on each of the next two plays for offside; then fifteen more for holding. Neither Phipps nor Files could gain; a forward pass was blocked and it was Bates' ball.

Two plays netted six yards, and Schumacher punted to Burton, who ran the ball back four yards.

Lee was unable to gain, on the next play. Bowdoin fumbled but recovered the ball. Newman punted and on a free fumble Boynton recovered the ball on Bates' 35-yard line.

Bowdoin worked the ball to Bates' 18-yard line. Here Burton attempting a forward pass, failed to win out five yards, and the team was penalized 20 yards. A forward pass touched the ground before it was intercepted and it was Bates' ball on her own 37-yard line.

Bates failed to gain in two downs and Schumacher punted to Phipps on the thirty-yard line. Bowdoin was unable to gain and Newman punted to Cummings.

Two plays netted six yards; Schumacher again punted to Phipps. Bowdoin soon punted and Cobb ran the ball back thirteen yards.

From this point Bates worked the ball to Bowdoin's 25-yard line where Files caught Schumacher's forward pass and sprinted to the 21-yard line before the Bates captain pulled him down. Newman carried the ball within a foot of the goal line; and Commins was pushed over for a touchdown. Newman kicked a goal.

Commins again received the kick-off. Lee made two, Files six, Newman punted to Cobb on the fifty-yard line. Sargent made four, Keaney five, a double pass netted twenty. Then Sargent waded eighteen yards through Bowdoin's line for a touchdown. Schumacher missed the goal.

A few more plays were run off, then time was called.

On the second half Bates receiving the kick-off rushed the ball up the field to Bowdoin's twenty-five yard line. Here Schumacher failed to kick a field goal.

No scoring was done in this half, but Bowdoin excelled in rushing, twice having the ball within Bates twenty-yard line.

BOWDOIN VS. MAINE TOMORROW

GREATEST GAME OF THE SEASON ON WHITTIER FIELD

To-morrow Bowdoin meets her old rival, Maine, in what promises to be a battle royal. Maine will bring along a very strong team, backed by a large contingent of supporters. Maine has had a good team this year, having trimmed Tufts and Colby, tied with Bates, and made Harvard and Dartmouth fight hard to run up large scores. The team will arrive at eleven o'clock and at two will line up against Bowdoin on Whittier Field. Bowdoin's team will be there, too, and will give a good account of itself after the victory over Bates last Saturday. Hubbard grandstand will present one solid mass of men. If Bowdoin wins this game, the intercollegiate championship belongs to her. It will be remembered that in 1905 Maine defeated Bowdoin 18-0, while last year Bowdoin won by a score of 6-0. The hand under Leader Kane will be on the field to help swell the music. The officials will be Stevenson, of Exeter, Umpire; Knight, of Michigan, Field Judge. The Head Linesman has not yet been selected.

The probable line-up:

BOWDOIN

Wandike, 1.e., King
Newman, 1.t., r.f., Ham

Softly at even the bell is tolled,—
Silver drops in a fount of gold—
It chimes through autumn sunset haze,
That floods these paths and leafy ways.

Many are they who come again,
But in their hearts is speechless pain,
No longer scattered far and wide
They sit in silence side by side.

My thoughts fly back to that June day
When underneath these portals gray,
They, too, were with us gathered here
And gave the sad last-chapel cheer.

Toll softly on, O chapel bell,
Ring forth your very clearest knell,
For somewhere in the vast blue sea
Old friends and true are hearing thee.

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION MEETING

At the Christian Association meeting on Thursday evening of last week the members were addressed by Principal W. E. Sargent of Hebron Academy in a spirited lecture on "Endurance in College." From the nature of his address his words were of particular interest and appeal to his listeners; and would doubtless (with practice) prove of inestimable value in the formation of a man's character while in college.

Clayton S. Cooper, International Secretary of Bible Study, next spoke to the meeting, disclosing facts in regard to the widespread extent of Christian Association work and Bible Study in American colleges which opened the eyes of the fellows present to their scope and importance of work.

BOWDOIN COLLEGE PREACHER

The next College Preacher will be the Reverend Floyd Tompkins, D.D., who comes to Brunswick next Sunday. He has been enthusiastically recommended to the committee in charge of the College Preacher Fund as the man in America best fitted to represent the Episcopal Church before a college audience. To meet his engagement with us he travels further than any guest we have had up to this date. He is one of the best-liked preachers at Harvard, and combines with intellectual insight a spiritual fervor that has given him a wide hearing through all the Eastern United States. After graduating from Harvard and the General Theological Seminary he was a missionary in Colorado and Wyoming for eight years. From 1883 to 1899 he served Episcopal parishes in Keene, N. H., New York City, Hartford, Conn., Chicago, Ill., and Providence, R. I. In 1899 he became rector of Holy Trinity, Philadelphia, the church made famous by his predecessor, Bishop Brooks.

College Preacher

To-morrow at the Church on the Hill Bowdoin students are given the opportunity to listen to one of the most foremost Preachers of the country, made possible by the most kind fund for this purpose. The Orient desires to remind the students editorially of this fact and to express the hope that the majority will not become too much fascinated in “talking over” the great game of Saturday on Sunday morning and forget all about this on Sunday morning. The attendance when the last college preacher occupied the pulpit was positively disgraceful to the college in every way. There were scarcely enough students present to fill two rows across in the balconies. We believe that condition was brought about mainly through forgetfulness. The purpose of this editorial is that you may not forget this coming Sunday.

If We Win

If our team wins the game to-morrow, we must certainly have a real old-fashioned celebration in the evening. We ought to have a rousing good bon-fire and then march around the town behind our new banner. There has been something said about burning the board track, but surely all thoughtful fellows will agree with the Orient that that would be no way to celebrate. To rejoice in the victory of one team at the expense of some other branch of our athletics is certainly poor policy. The track team is but poorly supported at best and can ill afford to have any of its property destroyed. Manager Lee was unable to come out square in his accounts because he had to rebuild the track, and of course no one thought of increasing his subscription to pay for the damage he had done. Remember, then, to be thoughtful in celebration if we win the championship.

GIFT TO COLLEGE

In the will of Mrs. Esther A. Drummond, widow of Rev. James Drummond of the Class of 1836, $2,000 is donated to the college, the interest to be used in buying books for the Library, and the fund itself to be established as a gift in memory of her husband.

THE PRESS CLUB

At present there is a scheme on foot to form a Press Club. The idea is to have the college representatives of the different papers unite into an organized body and also have a member of the Orient Board in the club. The bringing together of men interested in the same kind of work, would undoubtedly be a mighty good thing for the college as a whole and for the men individually. In this way Bowdoin will be better known to the outside world than she is at present. The club will organize this week and regular meetings will be held. The men who are engaged as correspondents to the various papers are: Boyce, '08, Portland Argus; Townsend, '10, Boston Herald; Portland Express; Martin, '10, Kennecook Journal; Crosby, '10, Bangor Commercial; Stone, '10, Bangor News; Wing, '10, Boston Journal.

ONE ON PROF. ??

During the educational meeting at Bangor, October 26, three members of the Bowdoin Faculty, while crossing a foot-bridge, met a man, who was about "half seas over" in spite of the fact that the Sturgis Commission is actively at work in that city. As the Professors approached him he drew back and then suddenly exclaimed to the one in advance, "Well, if you ain't King Edward, you look exactly like him."

There are now forty-three members in the Club, which shows a marked increase since the Club was organized four years ago. Then there were only sixteen members in the whole college. He taught in the Brunswick School of that city, of which G. E. Carmichael is head master, for a number of years, and for the past year has been in newspaper work. The News says of Mr. Kelley: "Among those who are acquainted with the aims of the organization and who know Mr. Kelley, it is the opinion that the society is to be felicitated upon obtaining his services. His knowledge of boys, his power in appealing to them, his acquaintance with a majority of the Greenwich young men and the esteem in which they hold him, are all features which will have part in making him successful in the position which he is to assume. The News for itself and for the many readers whose sentiments it knows expresses thanks for his past work and hopes for the best of success in his new field of endeavor."

CHAMPIONS OF MAINE!

Bowdoin Wins the Greatest Football Game in Years and Becomes Unbeaten Champion of the State—Bowdoin, 34; Maine, 5.

Bowdoin decisively defeated University of Maine by the score of thirty-four to five on Saturday afternoon before the largest crowd ever assembled on Whittier Field. This victory gives Bowdoin the undisputed title of State champions as the team has previously defeated Colby and Bates.

Maine excelled during the first ten minutes of play and during the remainder of the first half the team put up a good game. The second half, however, was all Bowdoin's and from a non-partisan standpoint extremely one-sided. The Bowdoin backs tore holes through Maine's line or circled her ends for substantial gains. Three touchdowns were made in the first ten minutes of this half.

The entire team played superbly, and it would be impossible to select any one man as the individual star.

Lee made several long runs and gave one of the prettiest exhibitions of tackling ever seen on Whittier Field. Phipps put up his usual star game at left half, figuring in every play until his retirement. Files was especially strong on interference. Burton showed excellent judgment in running his plays; and made frequent gains on quarterback runs.

Newman and Commins were each a tower of strength, gaining almost at will on the tackle buck formation. Newman outjumped Bearce, and near the end of the second half kicked a beautiful placement goal from the thirty-yard line. The officials, however, ruled that Bowdoin's formation was illegal and refused to allow the score.

Sewall and Haley each put up a good, consistent game at guard. The passing of Boynton at center was perfect. Wandtke played a fast, aggressive game, and Smith, who replaced Captain Crowley, showed that he is built of varsity timber.

For Maine, Chase at right half was the one individual star. A. Cook, who replaced Miner at quarter, also played well. Bearce, the Freshman whose place kicking won the Colby game, failed in his only opportunity.

Miner caught the kickoff and advanced the ball from the twenty-five to the twenty-eight yard line. On the first play Chase made twenty yards, Hammond made five, then three yards round left end. On the next play, Maine made first down, Chase made three, then Bowdoin held. A forward pass to Cook netted 15 yards. Two more plays brought the ball to the twenty-yard line, where Bearce attempted a goal from placement. The ball, however, went wide of the goal posts.

Newman kicked from the twenty-five yard line to Miner, who ran the ball back to the center of the field. Higgins made two. Phipps threw Chase for a loss, and on the next play received Maine's forward pass.

Files made two yards. Bowdoin fumbled and it was Maine's ball. Captain Crowley was sent to the sidelines for rough playing and Maine given half the distance to her goal line on the next play. R. Smith went in at right end.

Two plays sufficed to rush the ball over from the 15-yard line. Bearce missed the goal. Score—Maine, 5; Bowdoin, 0.

Bearce kicked off to Lee who ran the ball back thirty yards. Files failed to gain; Newman made a small gain. Here Captain Higgins was ruled out of the game and Bowdoin given half the distance to her goal. Metcalf replaced Higgins.

Files carried the ball from the forty to the thirty-eight yard line. Newman made three. Maine fumbled an onside kick and Wandtke securing the ball made a touchdown. Newman kicked the goal.

Score—Bowdoin, 6; Maine, 5.

Lee ran the kick-off back twenty-five yards. Phipps made two. Maine lost five on offside play. Phipps made three, and Newman brought the ball to the center of the field for first down. Newman made four more, then he punted to Hammond on Maine's twenty-five yard line.

Metcalf made four; a penalty of fifteen yards was inflicted on Maine. Metcalf failed to gain, and Bearce punted to Burton.

Bowdoin was penalized fifteen yards;
Phipps made up four. Newman fifteen. Newman punted to Miner on Maine's fifteen-yard line. Miner made nine yards; a bare yard gave Maine first down. Chase was thrown for a loss by Lee. On the next play Maine failed to gain, and Bearce punted to Phipps on the forty-seven yard line.

Burton made twenty on a quarterback run. Commins added ten. Newman made five; Commins six yards. Newman brought the ball within a foot of the goal and Commins took it over. Newman missed the goal.

Score—Bowdoin, 11; Maine, 6.

No more scoring occurred during the remainder of this half. Near the end Bowdoin brought the ball within a yard of Maine's goal but was penalized fifteen yards.

Commins received the kickoff and advanced the ball from the fifteen to the thirty-four yard line. Lee made a spectacular run of forty-five yards on a double pass. He then made three. Bowdoin failed to gain. Bowdoin tried the forward pass, and was penalized fifteen yards. Wandtke recovered Newman's punt. Phipps brought the ball to the seventy-yard line and Newman carried it over. Time—2½ minutes. Newman kicked the goal.

Score—Bowdoin, 17; Maine, 5.

Receiving the kickoff Maine was unable to gain. Burton caught Bearce's punt in the center of the field. Two plays netted five yards. Newman punted and Sewall recovered the ball on Maine's 27-yard line. Commins made five, then Lee dashed for another touchdown. Time—about two minutes. Newman narrowly missed a difficult goal.

Score—Bowdoin, 22; Maine, 5.

It required less than five minutes to make another touchdown. On the kickoff Phipps made forty-five yards. Never losing possession of the ball, the team rushed it over for another touchdown. Newman kicked the goal. Score—Bowdoin, 28; Maine, 5.

Here Maine played football for a time. Receiving Newman's kickoff, she worked the ball to Bowdoin's 50-yard line, where Newman's recovered it on a fumble. Maine held for downs, receiving the ball again on her own fifty-yard line.

From this point Chase and Hammond rushed the ball to Bowdoin's five-yard line. Here Bowdoin held. Newman punted out forty yards and Cook ran back ten. Bowdoin held, and soon rushed the ball down the field for the final touchdown. Newman kicked the goal. Score—Bowdoin, 34; Maine, 5.

No scoring was done in the last ten minutes of the play. Newman drove the ball between the cross bars for a placement goal from the thirty-yard line, but the officials ruled that Bowdoin's formation was illegal and brought the ball back.

DEBATING

Bowdoin Interscholastic League for 1907.

The Bowdoin Debating League which was organized last year among the preparatory schools of Maine and carried on with such eminent success, now enters upon the second year of its existence. The League remains the same with one exception, Portland High takes the place of Gardiner High. The popularity and the strength of this League among the principal Maine fitting schools, is attested by the fact that six new schools applied for admission for the coming year and were turned down on the ground that too many schools would make the League cumbersome and unwieldy and the too frequent debates would detract students' attention from other work.

The results of the interscholastic debates during the past year were highly pleasing. The citizens of the various cities gave loyal support to their schools, and the schools entered into it themselves with all the "vim and vigor" worthy of such a purpose. The most ambitious, capable and energetic men in the schools devoted much time in preparation of their questions and when they met in public the contests were spirited, logical, and fair.

The purpose of the Bowdoin Debating League in instituting and encouraging this spirit among the Maine Preparatory Schools is to arouse in them the desire for doing what so few men can do, that is, express themselves in public in a clear, concise, commanding manner, and to produce action as a result of conviction; for inculcating in men the indomitable determination to win by more extended research, and by display of superior skill and power, qualities and characteristics that make for the highest, most efficient and most progressive type of citizenship.

The following is the agreement governing the Bowdoin Debating League for 1907:

1. The name of this organization shall be the Bowdoin Debating League.

2. The members of this League shall be:
   - Edward Little High School, Auburn
   - Cony High School, Augusta
   - Jordan High School, Lewiston
   - Portland High School

4. The questions shall be submitted by Portland and Auburn and approved by the Bowdoin Debating Council. The choice of sides shall fall to Augusta and Lewiston, and shall be announced within ten days after the receipt of the question.

5. The winning schools in the Preliminary Debates shall hold a Final Debate at Bowdoin College on May 1, 1908. The question and sides shall be determined by the representatives of the school in consultation with the Manager of the Bowdoin Debating Council.

6. The Presiding Officers for the Preliminary Debates shall be chosen by Auburn and Portland; for the Final Debate by the Bowdoin Debating Council.

7. The Bowdoin Debating Council agrees to furnish each school, without expense to the school, a competent coach for each debate.

8. The schools agree that there shall be no coaching on the argument except that provided by the appointed coach.

9. The expenses of the Preliminary Debates, except the expenses of the coaches, shall be paid by the schools, each school paying one-half the expenses of the debate in which it takes part. The expenses of the Final Debate, except the traveling expenses of the teams, shall be paid by the Bowdoin Debating Council.

10. To each member of the winning team in the Final Debate and to the winning school shall be awarded a prize cup, appropriately engraved.

11. Each school shall select one representative, and these men, together with the Manager of the Bowdoin Debating Council as Chairman of the Board, shall be the official representatives of the schools in all matters pertaining to the League.

12. In case of any disagreement between schools, each school shall select one arbiter: who, with the Professor of Argumentation at Bowdoin College, shall render a final decision on the point in dispute.

13. The Judges for each debate shall be instructed as follows:
   - Each school selects alternately the questions to be debated and sends the formulated question to its opponent, leaving to its opponent the choice of sides. The side which either school chooses to advocate shall not, therefore, represent the prevalent type of opinion in that school, or even the individual opinion of the debaters.
   - The League is agreed upon the general principle that the award should not be made on the merits of the question but on the merits of the debate; that is to say, consideration as to what may seem to a judge therein the intrinsic merit of either side of a question should not enter into the award; but the award ought to be made to that school team which shows in general greater argumentative ability and better form as speakers.
   - In determining argumentative ability, the judges should take into consideration thorough knowledge of the question, logical sequence, skill in selecting and presenting evidence, and power in rebuttal; and in considering the form of the speakers, as distinguished from their arguments, they should regard bearing, quality of voice, correct pronunciation, clear enunciation, and directness, variety and emphasis in delivery.
   - Matter is to be regarded as more important than form. Should one team excel in matter and the other to an equal degree in form, the award should go to that team which excels in matter.
   - The Judges, without consultation, shall hand written ballots to the Chairman who shall at once announce the decision.

14. Portland shall submit to Augusta and Auburn shall submit to Lewiston, before the first day of January, 1908, a list of ten men proposed as judges. From this list the school to which it is sent shall endeavor to secure three men to act as judges. If the school cannot secure three satisfactory judges from the first list, it may ask for a second list of ten names.

Professor Foster has chosen the following men as coaches for the teams composing the Bowdoin Debating League: Haven Atwood, '90, of Auburn; Edward Little High; William T. Harris, '09, of Lynn, Mass.; Lewiston High; Albert T. Gould, '08, of Thomaston; Augusta High; and Fred L. Pennell, of Portland, Portland High.
Consistent with the policy which the Orient previously advanced, we have not considered it essential that every occasion where Bowdoin has won or lost an athletic contest, was necessarily worthy of editorial comment. But the notable achievement of the football team this fall is certainly an occasion of special moment. Again we have won a championship, and an undisputed championship. Undefeated in the State, Bowdoin may well be proud of our record on the football field this fall.

To the captain, coach and team we offer our hearty congratulations. From a group of men which appeared of but little prospect at the opening of college, has been developed the best team that has been put on the field in several years. The season has been a particularly satisfactory one in every way. Everyone has been interested, there has been a good number of players out right through the season, the men have trained faithfully, and the financial support has been good. It would be trite for the Orient to advance any comment on the consistent, hard, never-say-die spirit that prevailed in all the playing. That Ross McClave has had the unbounded confidence of very man, player and student, is well-known. We wish him all success through the year. "Undefeated champions" in baseball in the spring, and then in football in the fall, are honors in which it is pardonable if we show a little pride.

A Plea for Common Courtesy

In an editorial a short time ago the Orient commented favorably on the excellent spirit maintained between the two bodies of student supporters at a football game. This was an early game. Regrettable as it may seem, the Orient feels it must make quite a reverse comment from recent events. That Bowdoin is the rival of every college in the State, is an admitted fact. That Bates, Maine and Colby had all rather defeat Bowdoin than any other team, we have constant evidence from their own statements. But that this triple rivalry should be such as to deny to Bowdoin the courtesies of sportsmanlike contest is as regrettable as it appears evident to be. We cannot help but feeling as each big game has been played in football this season, that we are not being shown the same courtesies that we are being shown. The Orient feels that Bowdoin cheering has always been courteous and sportsmanlike. We were glad to see that at our recent game, whenever a change was made in the line-up of the visiting team, the Bowdoin cheering section gave a cheer for the player of the other institution. And the Orient is further proud to note that in general all "yagging" was kept out of the cheering as much as the leaders could do so. But, frankly now, are our efforts appreciated? After the recent big game of Whittier Field, the Bowdoin students, while forming to march from the field, halted in front of the bleachers where the supporters of the opposing team were still spiritedly cheering, the Bowdoin men gave cheer after cheer for our visitors. But was there any notice taken of this courtesy? Did Bowdoin receive a single answering cheer? The Orient does not believe that a man who yells in a crowd that "So and So will be killed if he ever goes up to our college on the Hockey Team," or another who excitedly advises his friends to “hurry to the station before the Bowdoin students start fighting and mobbing us,” ever really represent true sentiments. But the Orient does feel that Bowdoin students as a body are to be congratulated on the courteous and sportsmanlike conduct that they have as a body maintained this season, regardless of whether we have at all times been shown answering courtesy.

On Combinations

Once again we have to comment on the old subject of combinations in class elections. We had thought this was an evil which we were abandoning at Bowdoin, of which the students had realized the senselessness. But it seems that the present Senior Class has desired to record itself as one in which the members were not willing to let elections be conducted by individuals, but rather preferred they be conducted by parties. The Orient does not desire to make any further comment. What is the use? We believe that all the class officers are capable and representative men. It is not the personnel that is open to criticism, but there certainly is an element of disgrace in that even good men cannot be chosen without resource to politics. 1908 must always be known as a class of combines. The Seniors have set an example which we most heartily hope will not be followed.

An Appreciation

It certainly was a pleasure to every Bowdoin graduate and undergraduate who was on the Whittier Athletic Field last Saturday to see the hearty interest and cooperation that the citizens of Brunswick show in the life of the undergraduates. No more enthusiastic Bowdoin supporters were at the game than these men, who marched to the game accompanied by a band and cheered vigorously throughout for Bowdoin and Bowdoin’s team. When a Bowdoin team plays in Lewiston, we are proud that there are Bowdoin supporters there; and a group of Bowdoin’s most loyal alumni live in Bangor; but we do take a particular pride in the thought that when a visiting team plays in Brunswick, there is but one local loyalty; and all of Brunswick is Bowdoin. Bowdoin students may act thoughtlessly at times. There are occasions when student conduct is not above reproach. But the Orient is glad to note that the town of Brunswick forgets in the long run what shortcomings a college student may have; and whenever a notable occasion arises, Brunswick and Bowdoin are one. For this we are all very thankful and appreciative.

DELTA SIGMA RHO

Bowdoin Invited to Establish Chapter of Honorary Society of Men Interested in Public Speaking.

During the past few years an intercollegiate debating society has been formed in the Middle West for the purpose of improving the character and the standards of debate and oratory. This organization known as Delta Sigma Rho, already has chapters in the Universities of Minnesota, Illinois, Iowa, Chicago, Northwestern, Michigan, Nebraska, and Wisconsin, while several Eastern universities have made application for membership. On account of the enviable and almost unequalled reputation that Bowdoin has attained among the Eastern universities and colleges, we have been asked to identify ourselves with this movement, which to all probabilities, will in time include the principal colleges and universities in the country.

The purpose of Delta Sigma Rho may be inferred from the following extract taken from a chapter circular. “The central thought in the formation of Delta Sigma Rho was to bring together those who with the splendid equipment obtained from training and practice in public speaking, would make up an organization composed of the flower of the college and university men. The native ability, personal force, spirit and courage sure to be found among and in those who had gained honors in severe intellectual contests would insure an organization of power and effectiveness in the promotion of its aims. Not only does it seek to improve the character and standards of the work of intercollegiate debate and oratory, but it will reach out beyond these immediate purposes and attempt to rouse public spirit, stir patriotism and elevate in every way the standards of citizenship.”

Whether or not we make use of this opportunity, as Bowdoin men, we are glad that it has come to us, for it signifies that our reputation is not confined to the limits of New England, but is known among the great universities of the West. Furthermore, as we are the first New England college asked to affiliate ourselves with this movement, it is a sure indication that in one thing at least we have in the past done something worth while, and when this matter is brought before the Debating Council it is hoped that it will be given every consideration and respect.

This society is purely-honorary and no person is eligible until he has actually participated in an intercollegiate contest of debate or oratory. This seems to be only fair for many of the most ambitious and energetic men in college devote much time to oratory, thereby sacrificing frequently the opportunity to make the various athletic teams, and honorary societies such as Phi Beta Kappa and Sigma Psi. For this reason excellence in public speaking should be recognized, for wherever it is carried on effectively—at the bar, in the pulpit, on the platform, in legislative assemblies, before committees, in the club or the lodge—there lies its field of usefulness. The importance and the inevitable influence of such a society as Delta Sigma Rho with such a purpose and such a horizon needs no further exploiting.

COLLEGE PREACHER

On Sunday last Bowdoin College students had the privilege of listening to the Rev. Floyd Tompkins of Philadelphia, the second of the college preachers. Mr. Tompkins' talk was based upon the story of Gideon found in Judges, 6, 11. In a brief way he told the story of this biblical hero, and then cited it as an example of the rule of the individual or minority. In part he said: The great achievements in this world have been brought about not by the class but by the individual. This is found to be true in the New Testament where Christ takes his disciples not collectively but individually, and thru the individual brings about the redemption of the world. So it is in any organization. A college is not known by the achievements of any body connected with it, but rather by the individuals who stand out by themselves. The position of the individual may be obscure, as was that of Gideon, it may be humble and held in scorn, but during all this time a character and individuality may be forming that will make for success bye and bye. Accordingly, we as college students by the very fact of our massing together should strive not to allow our own individual aims to be swallowed up by the influences of those about us. Finally, we should strive not to be alike but to be different from our fellows and that difference should be characterized by simplicity and sincerity, both of which rest on an absolute purity of heart.

SATURDAY'S CELEBRATION

After the game Saturday a great celebration took place. At eight o'clock the students formed in line and headed by the French band, marched down Main Street, around to the Professors' homes, and thence to the campus, where cheers were given around a huge bon-fire in front of King Chapel. Maine Street was one mass of bon-fires and fireworks were set off in front of many of the stores, thru the generosity of the townspeople. Impromptu speeches were given by Professors Foster, Sills, Woodruff, Allen Johnson, Henry Johnson, Fles, Edwards, Robinson and Mitchell. Never before was there such a celebration in Brunswick—a fitting tribute to such a great victory.
College Notes

After several years of experience Bowdoin's manager did the right thing, booked the game for two o'clock. This fact alone was responsible for the presence of a great throng from Portland.—Portland Sunday Times

Prof. Allen Johnson has an interesting article in the Nation of Nov. 14 on "Fraternities in the Small College." This article has especial reference to Bowdoin and considers the question from the viewpoint of an unbiased observer.

The following men received the nomination for assistant manager of the football team: Thomas Otis, '09, of New Bedford; Summer Edwards, '10, of Cambridge, Mass., and Harry W. Woodward, '10, Colorado Springs, as alternates.

That old joke of bringing dogs into chapel is getting a bit worn out. With the possible exception of "Dooley," who has attended chapel services long enough to realize proper conduct even better than a few of the undergraduates, the average canine seems unable to properly appreciate the services. The sense of propriety of men in college should be strong enough to keep the chapel services dignified.

Alumni Notes

CLASS OF 1866

Ezekiel Hanson Cook, Ph.D., died after a brief illness 8 Nov. 1907, at Madison, Wis. Dr. Cook was the son of Hanson and Nancy Jane (Wheeler) Cook and was born 18 Dec.
1845, at Madrid, Maine. He was prepared for college at the Maine State Seminary, Lewiston, Me. His college course at Bowdoin was interrupted by his service in 1864-5 as quartermaster-sergeant in the First Maine Light Artillery. After graduation he was for successive years, principal of Wilton Academy. Superintendent of Schools at Orange, N. J., principal of Woodstock Academy, Conn., and the first principal of the State Normal School at Westchester, Penn. In 1871 he became principal of the High School at Columbus, Ohio, a position he held for nine years bringing that institution to a high state of efficiency. The next three years were devoted to rest and out-door life, and were spent chiefly in mining in Arizona. In 1883 he was chosen principal of the State Normal School at Potsdam, N. Y., which under his administration became the largest of the nine then existing in the state. From 1889 to 1891 he was headmaster of Rutgers College Preparatory School at New Brunswick, N. J., and the following two years superintendent of public schools at Flushing, L. I. He was one of the founders, an associate editor and for several years business manager of the Educational Review. Ill health forced him to give up professional work in 1893 and the rest of his life was given to business enterprises. He was connected with the Birkbeck Loan & Investment Company of New York City from 1893 to 1895, and subsequently was president and manager of several mining companies with headquarters at Denver, Col., and residence at Boulder, Col.

Dr. Cook received honorary degrees from Colgate and St. Lawrence Universities; was secretary, president, and a life director of the National Educational Association and president of the Teachers' Associations of New York and of New Jersey. Few, if any, sons of Bowdoin, have been more widely and more favorably known than he in that field to which he gave his best years and all his energies.

CLASS OF 1881

The sudden death of Dr. Edward H. Chamberlin, at Cheran, S. C., on November 9, 1907, affords another instance of the courage and self-sacrifice so often exhibited by members of the medical profession. He had been called to relieve the sufferings of a man violent with an attack of delirium tremens. While laboring with the patient, he received from him a severe blow upon the head that resulted in his own death the following day.

Dr. Chamberlin, son of Henry and Mary Elizabeth Chamberlin, was born 11 January, 1858, at Westford, Mass. He was prepared for college at Westford Academy under the tuition of W. E. Frost (Bowdoin, 1870). After graduation he entered upon the study of medicine, and attended lectures at the Eclectic Medical Institute of Cincinnati, Ohio, where he received the degree of M.D. in January, 1884. After practicing a short time in Lowell, Mass., and in Clarendon, Vt., he settled in Chelmsford, Mass. Here he was actively engaged in professional work until March, 1903, when the ill health of his wife and daughter led him to remove to Cheran, S. C. He had acquired a successful practice and at the time of his death had served both as secretary and chairman of the Homeopathic Board of Medical Examiners for the State. Dr. Chamberlin married, 1 June 1886, Flora Elizabeth, daughter of Timothy Adams of Chelmsford, Mass., who survives him with their three daughters, Jessie Rose, Elizabeth and Gertrude Chamberlin.
THE OCTOBER QUILL

The October Quill, appearing in mid-November is none the less welcome for its tardiness, and this will be freely excused on receipt of the promised tri-weekly, or possibly bi-weekly, numbers that are to complete the work of the present board of editors.

As a review of the Quill is primarily intended to stimulate and guide in a friendly fashion the presumably faltering pen of the undergraduate, a certain embarrassment arises from the fact that out of the four prose pieces of this issue only one is the offering of a student now on the ground. This regrettable circumstance, to be sure, is nothing new, and is in a measure offset by the effective expression of student thought and feeling in the three pieces of verse. But it is very much to be wished that the board would make a determined effort to arouse greater literary activity in the four College classes. The editors could count on the cordial co-operation of the instructors in the English Department, and indeed every member of the Faculty would gladly second the undertaking.

The writer of “Matthew Arnold, the Honest Doubter,” has seized firmly on the central quality of this poet’s nature—his essential religiousness—which gains for Arnold a hearing that otherwise would be refused him by many earnest minds, thus spreading widely, for good or ill, an influence which profoundly affected Arnold’s own time, and which, as this paper shows, is still potent with a younger generation.

An interesting feature of this and of recent numbers are the “Notes on Works of Art in the Bowdoin Collection.” The accompanying portraits of the Misses Walker recall anew the debt of gratitude that every Bowdoin man owes to these benefactresses.

Under the rather conventional and unpromising title of “The Course of True Love,” we have the happy conclusion of an entertaining short story in which incident and character sketching are well combined. The dialogue runs naturally and easily, and the lively, warm-hearted Sally strikes one as a real personality. This writer’s work in College writing gives promise of success in a larger field.

In “Some Impressions of Gloucester” by one of the younger students, imagination, observation and sympathy express themselves in a simple and sincere way, thereby illustrating the advantage of dealing with a subject that is a part of one’s own experience. Such a choice of subject is to be recommended especially to those who are beginning to write. In a degenerate time it is a pleasure to find a young writer using shall and will correctly, as in this case; but on page 188 in the sentence, “Would we not see, etc., would ought to be should.” On the next page, the care required in the management of English pronouns and adverbs is evident in the sentence, “How many eyes have welcomed them which they had never again dared hope to see,” where the context compels which to refer to them and they to refer to eyes; while again must go with see.

Of the three contributions in verse, “Compensation” contains a simple thought simply and clearly set forth; “The Quest” has true devotional feeling unmarred by cant or halting movement; “The Eventide” gives utterance with grace and fitness to the deep and lasting sorrow felt by the whole College and community in consequence of the calamity of the vacation. These pieces rise above the average of undergraduate verse. In metre they are as good as much of Whittier, and in poetic quality they compare favorably with Longfellow’s earlier work.

The passing of “Gray Goose Tracks” will not be regretted, on the whole, by most readers.

An excellent plan is announced in “Ye Postman” of placing the Quill exchanges in the Periodical Room for general perusal. It is highly important that students here should know what their contemporaries elsewhere are doing in the matter of writing, and such access to student publications can scarcely fail to promote a healthy spirit of emulation in those who desire—and who does not desire?—to keep Bowdoin abreast with other colleges in literary as well as in all other excellence.

COMMUNICATION

Brunswick, Maine, November 28, 1907.

To the Editor of the Orient:

My Dear Sir: Will you kindly allow me the use of your columns to bring forward once again a topic which has often been informally discussed? One of the great needs of the College today is, at least in the minds of many, a building or hall or club-house where every one can meet on common ground as Bowdoin men. Now that every fraternity has a house of its own, there is still more need of one place where the social and democratic life of the whole College may center. A building on the campus, which should in a very modest way correspond to the Harvard Union or to the building which Amherst is proposing to erect, would be of great service. We ought to have some sort of a hall or union where all who are interested in Bowdoin College, Alumni, undergraduates, faculty, fraternity and non-fraternity men would be perfectly at home—where we could all meet for the general good of the College.

In bringing forward again such a project as this, I am perfectly aware that the College today has many pressing needs. The first thing to be provided is the proposed increase of the endowment funds. And the College certainly ought to have a new gymnasium soon. But it will take a long time for such a project as a Bowdoin Hall to mature. For several years men dreamed of the Harvard Union before the generosity of Major Higgins made the dream a reality. For several years the dean of Columbia College pleaded for a home for the undergraduates of that institution; and only a short while ago Hamilton Hall was dedicated. It is likewise possible that the gift of such a building to Bowdoin might appeal to some friend of the College where other appeals fail. Very likely there will be something to be said on the other side. But surely we can all work for more unity in the social life of the College. The question for discussion is whether such an undertaking as I have suggested is pertinent and practicable.

Very truly yours,

Kenneth C. M. Sills, '01.

THE COLLEGE MINSTREL SHOW

Date Definitely Fixed for January 22. Several Old Stars to Be in the Cast Again.

The date of the Bowdoin College Minstrel Show, given each year under the auspices of the Baseball Association, has been definitely fixed for January 22. Of the six men who did such creditable work last year, Lee, Cox, Sheplean and Ralph Smith are still in College and will again appear in the cast, while "Bill" Crowley has consented to act as interlocutor. The Ohio this year will be exceptionally strong as it includes, besides such well-known artists as Boyce, Kendrie, the Mikelsky Brothers and Bert Morrell, other men of considerable ability who purpose to give numbers which cannot help but be remarkably effective. The date of the first rehearsal has not been fixed upon, but it will probably occur directly after the Christmas holidays. It is urgently hoped that the fellows will give their strongest support to the show in order that a chorus may be developed which will be admirable, not only for its volume, but also for its quality. As a result of previous negotiations, the management have every reason to hope that the entertainment will be staged in Augusta. The show this year will be under the direction of the same man, who has for three previous years coached so many successful College Minstrel Shows, Mr. Robert A. Toothaker. With so many old stars in line for a nucleus and with such a remarkably fine lot of new talent to build upon, Mr. Toothaker cannot fail to stage a performance which will rank high among its predecessors and challenge favorable comparison with any college minstrel show in the country.

NATIONAL STANDING OF THE MEDICAL SCHOOL

At a recent meeting of the American Medical Association the Maine Medical School has been ranked among the five leading schools of the country. This fact is based upon the percentage of those who failed to pass the examination required before they are admitted to practise. The Maine Medical School had a very low percentage and was ranked accordingly. The association inspected the school and found everything very satisfactory. This is one of the greatest honors that has been conferred upon this institution for some time. The Maine Medical School is now ranked with Johns Hopkins, Harvard, Yale and Tufts. In point of number the school is smallest in the list and is the only one among the number that is a State institution. This is an honor which should certainly give a feeling of pride to every Bowdoin man, collegiate as well as medical.

EXPLOSION AT THE STATION

Boiler Blows up Killing Three and Injuring Two.

Shortly after midnight last Sunday morning one of the heating boilers in the Maine Central Station blew up, doing considerable damage to the building and causing some loss of life. The dead are as follows:

William Woodward, night baggage master.
Walter Harris, car inspector.
Joseph Terriault, railroad employe.
The injured:
Fred Sylvester, employe of the American Express Company.
Clyde L. Pinney, night operator.

The boiler had not been used for some time and explosion was caused by the water getting too low or else by the turning of water into the tubes when they were dry and hot. Woodward had just gone into the cellar to fix the fire when the explosion occurred, and his mangled body was found a short distance from the wrecked boiler.

Harris and Terriault were standing on the platform outside the ticket office and were crushed beneath the roof when it was broken down by the weight of bricks from the gable end above. Harris was instantly killed, but Terriault, although terribly injured, survived at the Lewiston hospital until the next day.

If the accident had occurred a short time before, the death rate would probably have been larger, as the station was crowded just before the departure of the Boston train.

A peculiar circumstance about the explosion is that, although brick walls were torn away, the windows in the waiting room and the glass in the clock face were not broken. The breaks in the brick wall will be temporarily covered with boards until the weather is warm enough for the use of mortar.

FOOTBALL—1910, 0; 1911, 0

The Freshman and Sophomore football elevens played a rather unsatisfactory game on the Delta Tuesday afternoon, November 27. As a result of the mid year warnings, the Freshmen were deprived of six of their best players, including Captain Haley. The muddy condition of the field prevented fast playing, and rendered long end runs impossible. For 1910, Newman, Ross and Nulty played well. Sullivan, Richards and Hitchborn excelled for 1911.

The line-up and summa y:

1910.
Matthews, Wandtke, l. e. --------- r. e. Hitchborn
Morton, l. t. .......................... r. t. , Kern
Sanborn, C. A. Smith, Stone, l. g. --------- r. g. Gibson
Boynton, c. ................................ c., Purington
Edwards, r. g. .......................... l. g., Marston
Warren, r. t. .......................... l. t., Hawes
Russell, Deming, r. e. .......................... l. e., Wiggins
Ross, q. b. .......................... Wadsworth, q. b., Pearson
Nulty, l. h. b. .......................... r. h. b., Sullivan
Hawes, Ballard, r. h. b. .......................... l. h. b., Richa ds
Newman, f. b. .......................... f. b., Torsney, Hussey

Score—1910, 0; 1911, 0. Referee—Crowley, '08.
Meanwhile, we are only too glad to do anything possible to increase this sentiment. In particular, we would be pleased to receive further communications on this same subject from interested friends and graduates. The Orient unhesitatingly believes that the founding of some “Bowdoin Union” is the most urgent improvement needed for maintaining and increasing of democratic college spirit. May the idea suggested in our communication increase and see realization at no far distant date!

On Warnings Now that the regular midterm “warnings” have been sent out and the vacation of Thanksgiving time has given opportunity for “home explanations,” there is one comment that the student body desires to make for future time. We wish that a definite and uniform standing for warning be established. As it is at present, each professor is interpreting the meaning of this in a different way. Some only “warn” when the student has a mark below the passing-grade, while some send warnings on “D” grade, or higher, that is, when any student is simply low. A changing schedule is scarcely fair to the students. Technically, and as “warnings” are regarded as serious enough to debar men from all College athletics, we believe it is not right to “warn” a man, unless he is below passing. This has been the practice in former years. At any rate, we hope the faculty will grant the student body a consistent schedule, so that one may know definitely what grade has—or rather has not—been attained, when one receives a warning notice. We do not believe that a student may be “warned” on “any grade whatsoever,” but rather must have failed to attain some definite, fixed mark.

College Rally In past years it has been customary for the President of the Athletic Association to appoint a committee to make preparations for the Annual College Rally. Since no formal motion to this effect was made at the last mass-meeting, the Orient would recommend that steps be taken to appoint a committee to take charge of the affair. We most certainly want a good, hearty, rousing rally next spring, and in order to make it such preparations should begin at once.
GIFTS TO COLLEGE

Dr. and Mrs. H. C. Bradford and his sister, Miss Clara F. Bradford, of Lewiston, have presented the Bowdoin College library with a complete set of the original silhouettes of the class of 1825. The silhouettes were originally owned by Dr. Richmond Bradford of Auburn, a member of the class. The silhouettes are in an excellent state of preservation, and most of them contain original autographs.

ICE HOCKEY

With the rink nearing completion, and the cold weather setting in, ice hockey is next on the program. From last year's team the following men are at College: Captain Abbott, R. W. Smith, Dresser, Hughes, and Hamburger. Many promising men will be out to complete the team, of whom might be mentioned, Hyde, Leavitt, Wight, Johnson, Draper, Pearson and Byles. Games have been arranged with Dartmouth and Maine, subject to the approval of the Faculty. Negotiations are pending with Bates and Harvard. The Dartmouth game will be played in Hanover, while one Maine game will be played on Whittier Field, the other in Orono. The prospects are good, to say the least. A manager will probably be elected in the near future, by the student body as a whole, it is hoped.

Fisk, '09, has been having considerable difficulty in collecting sufficient money to pay the band which helped us celebrate after the Maine game. Subscription papers in the Chapter Houses have been poorly responded to.

A crew of men has been busy for the past few days, repairing the water main just below the chapel in order to secure more water power in Appleton Hall. Porcelain bowls with hot and cold water faucets are to be placed on each floor. This convenience will be greatly appreciated by the students in this dormitory.

Workmen have been engaged during the past two weeks fitting up a room in the basement of Searles Science building for the use of students in water analysis. This step was made necessary by the constantly increasing number of students who are taking the course, and will serve to give added facilities to the work in the Chemical Department.

"Mille noncenti X—I,
Vive la crimson and white Phi Chi,
Broxico, Rexico, Raxico, Keven.
Bowdoin! Bowdoin 1911!"

One on the Orient! In a recent issue appeared a note to the effect that a theme was handed in to "Professor Wilnorg B. Mitchell." Truly there was nothing remarkable about this statement. It should, however, have said "Wilnort," but in the vagaries of proof-reading this was corrected where it should not have been. Hence, we do not blame you if you did not "see the point."

A valuable and interesting gift has latey been received by the library from the General Convention of the New Church. It consists of a complete fac simile made by the photo-typography of Emanuel Swedenborg's Memo abilia or Spiritual Diary from 1747 to 1760, and forms three large folio volumes.

Now that "All Maine's" are in the air, the following is an Orient suggestion for an All-Maine High School team: Cha les Mitchell, Portland, Lc.; McBrady, Portland, L.; Lawlis, Edward Little, Lg.; Carl Mitchell, Portland, c.; Littlefield, Portland, r.g.; Doherty, Portland, r.; Guthrie, Bangor, r.e.; O'Connell, Portland, q.b.; and captain; Winslow, Portland, t.h.; Tolford, Portland, r.h.b.; Stacey, Edward Little, f.b.

DRAMATIC CLUB

Definite arrangements have been made for the Dramatic Club to play at Belfast, Maine, next Friday, December 13, and at Camden on the following evening. The club will probably leave here Friday afternoon. Rehearsals are being held every evening, and this schedule will continue until the club leaves its trip. It is hoped that those members of the club who were in danger of being dropped on account of wantings, will be able to continue in the cast. There are several prospective dates for the club, but nothing definite can be announced at present.

COMMINS, '10, FOOTBALL CAPTAIN

At the meeting of the football team Tuesday, Commings, '10, was elected captain for next year. He is a Somerville High School man and captained the eleven there. This year is the second in which he has been on the eleven here. He will probably be able to influence good football men from the vicinity of Boston to come to Bowdoin. With him to lead the team there is every hope for another championship next fall.

ART BUILDING NOTES

The college has just received a large painting by Joseph Vernet. The subject of the picture is the "Shipwreck." The painting is four feet wide and five feet ten inches long. It was given by Mrs. Helen M. Shepley, of Portland. Vernet was the pupil of Adrian Manglard, of whom the college has a marine painting, No. 135, Bowdoin Gallery, Tu-rish Ships. The new painting hangs in the Boyd Gallery.

At Bowdoin he was a member of the Zeta Psi Fraternity and sang in the College choir during his Junior and Senior years. After graduation, he became a mining engineer and was employed in the zinc and lead mines of Joplin, Missouri, and the neighboring region, having his residence at Baxter Springs, Kansas. He married, 1 June, 1904, Frances Clark, daughter of the late Charles W. Daniels of Chicago, who, with his daughter, Dorothy, and his brother, George L. ELECTIONS

At a mass meeting held in Memorial Hall on Friday evening, November 22, the regular fall elections were held. J. Sandish Simmons, '09, was elected manager of the football team; and Thomas Otis, '09, assistant manager. At the same meeting Leon F. It further was voted that men winning points in any class meet held with classes of other institutions be granted their class numerals.

PHILOON, '05, CAPTAIN OF MAINE TEAM

Bowdoin undergraduates and members of the younger Alumni will note with interest the election of Wallace C. Philoon, '05, as captain of the West Point football team for the ensuing year. Philoon, who is the son of Samuel Philoon, of Androscoggin County, fitted for Bowdoin at Edward Little High School. While at Bowdoin, he played on the varsity for four years, and captained the 1904 team, which won the championship of the State. He was a member of the Ibis, the Athletic Council, president of the Athletic Association senior year, also popular man Ivy Day. He is a member of the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity. Philoon is a hard worker. Bowdoin men will eagerly follow the progress of the Cadets next season.

Dramatic Club

 Makes First Trip This Week—Play and Cast

This week the Dramatic Club makes its first trip. Last night it played in Brooks, to-night it is to be in Belfast and to-morrow night in Camden. The play being produced is a football story entitled "Halfback Sandy." Following is a brief summary of the plot of the story:

Sandy Smith is the cousin of Philip Krop, whose father, Josiah Krop, owns a farm where Sandy works. The elder Krop illegally possessed himself of Sandy's inheritance when Sandy's father died. With this money he also sends his son Philip to Queenstown College. This college has a great rival in Kingston College which is situated at the other end of the same city. As Sandy is a great halfback Philip Krop, manager of the Queenstown team, and Kenneth Sumner, manager of the Kingston team, are both trying to win him, each for his own college. Krop tries by the aid of a chum of his, Bill Short, who is disguised as a girl, to get Sandy to come to Queenstown out of love for this supposed lady. Sumner enlists the aid of Sue, a darkey girl, a friend of Sandy's, and McReady, dramatic instructor at Kingston, but the deciding influence in favor of Kingston is Mabel Sumner, Kenneth's sister, with whom Sandy is in love, but who is engaged to Philip Krop. Here the first act ends.

In the second act the second great game between the two colleges since Sandy entered Kingston, is approaching. Sandy is in debt and unhappy. In a final attempt to get him to Kingston Phil Krop, disguised as Sue, and Bill Short, also in the guise of a girl, go to his room. Phil's plan is successful and he has almost persuaded Sandy to leave Kingston, when Mabel appears, fleeing from a drunken student. She acknowledges her love for Sandy, so Phil's plan fails. As a last resort Phil and Bill lie in wait for Sandy in his room, seize him as he enters, and carry him bound and gagged to an unused room in one of the college buildings. Thus ends the second act.

The next day is the day of the game. Sandy is absent and the first half ends with the score 6-0 in favor of Queenstown. Between the halves Mabel and the real Sue, to whom Bill Short gave the key to Sandy's hiding place, mistaking her for Phil, chance to discover where he is hid and release him. He plays in the second half, winning the game for Kingston, 12-6. Sue, who has caught Philip Krop and locked him into the room where Sandy was, after the game brings him out. He acknowledges who he is. Mabel breaks her engagement with him and all ends happily for the hero.

Students—Cox, '08; Rich, '09; Sturtevant, '09; Brewster, '09.

Timberlake, '09, is manager, and R. D. Morss, '10, Assistant Manager. Sturtevant is property man.

The club left Thursday morning and will not return till Sunday or Monday. Miss Curtis, the coach, will accompany the party.

If this trip is successful there is hope of another and perhaps two more trips after the Christmas vacation. The club has done remarkably well this year considering the number of changes which the Faculty have obliged them to make. We wish them all possible success.
CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION MEETING

At the meeting of the Christian Association on December 5, President Purington reported for the various committees. Sturtevant, '09, was elected treasurer in place of Cole, who has left college for a while. Miss Evelyn Stetson sang a soprano solo. The speaker of the evening was C. C. Robinson, '00, the State Y. M. C. A. Student Secretary. He spoke upon "A Satisfactory College Life," taking as his text his favorite line from the Bible, "He satisfieth the longing soul." Among other things he said that a man should get from a satisfactory college life enough culture and vocational training so that he need not be obliged to drift about for two or three years after leaving college without being able to earn a living. The college man must realize that all education does not come from schools. Many self-educated people can put to shame a college graduate in the very accomplishments upon which he prides himself. The statement so often made that the four years spent in college are the four best years of a man's life, is not true. Each year ought to be better than the last. College life is more than honors, more than athletics, more than studies. It is the time when a man should be forming his character. College is a good place for a man to get established in his religious faith and to act upon it. A man should bring his religion to college, not leave it at home. The world is more and more demanding that kind of character which a man forms by leading a Christian life in college. At college there are many chances for social service, or "interest in an effort for one's associates," and a life of social service is a satisfactory life.

Theta Chapter of the Alpha Kappa Kappa Medical Fraternity held its annual initiation at the chapter hall, Saturday afternoon, followed that evening by a banquet at New Meadows Inn.

Dr. George Cook of Concord, N. H., Grand President, and Dr. Frank Y. Gilbert of Portland, Primarius of the Fraternity, were present at the ceremonies.

Besides the above the following were present at the initiation and banquet: Harold J. Everett, M. D.; E. S. Cummings, M. D.; W. E. Webber, M. D.; E. V. Call, M. D.; D. M. Stewart, M. D.; George H. Stone; Adam P. Leighton, Jr.; John A. Greene; George I. Geer; John H. Woodruff; John H. Potter; Arthur L. Jones; J. Calvin Oram; Charles F. Traynor; Elmer H. Ring; E. Eugene Holt; Joseph B. Drummond and Richardo G. Valladares.

Following the banquet a business meeting was held. An alumni association was formed, and it was voted to invite the fraternity to hold its next annual convention in Portland. Adam P. Leighton, Jr., was chosen delegate to attend the national convention which occurs next month in Atlanta, Georgia.

The officers of Theta Chapter for this year are as follows: President, John A. Greene; Vice-President, Joseph B. Drummond; Treasurer, Adam P. Leighton, Jr.; Secretary, J. Calvin Oram; Marshal, Charles F. Traynor; Warden, Richardo G. Valladares; Chaplain, E. Eugene Holt, Jr.

MASSACHUSETTS CLUB

The Massachusetts Club held its second meeting of the year at the Delta Kappa Epsilon House last Saturday evening. Professor Foster gave a most interesting informal talk upon some evils connected with life here at Bowdoin and the ways in which they could be remedied and more men be induced to come here. He made suggestions with regard to curing some of the faults of our present "rushing" system. For instance, he suggested a plan somewhat similar to the plan used at Amherst by which the fraternities are pledged not to give a new man any bid or come to any understanding with him until the second Monday of the fall term. He strongly condemned anything in the way of "combines" in college or class elections such as are so much of an evil here at present. He mentioned a plan which has been suggested of having a college council composed wholly of students and elected by the whole student body, which should take the place of the Jury and perhaps of the Inter-fraternity Council. This board should be the means of communication between the undergraduates and the Faculty. It should be of a positive nature, not negative as was the Jury; that is, it should aim to make improvements, not simply punish offenders against college rules. This Council would also take charge of, or oversee, the fixing of all dates for college activities, in order that there may be as few conflicts as possible.

Professor Foster outlined another plan which is designed to draw more students to Bowdoin. As we all know what a fine place this college is, all that is necessary to bring more men to it, is to spread this knowledge. The plan is to have a rally just before spring vacations where every man can obtain catalogues and bulletins describing Bowdoin's advantages. Each one shall also take some blanks to fill out with the names of prospective students, their schools, tastes, proficiency in studies, ability to pay their college expenses, and other information which shall guide the committee on relations with preparatory schools in sending out literature. If every man did his share in this work by visiting his own preparatory school next spring, we should soon see Bowdoin a college of the size she ought to be, with all her interests well supported without all the work being done by a few as at present. As the object of the Massachusetts Club is to get more Bay State men to come to Bowdoin, each member of the club should make an individual effort to secure the names of prospective students.

MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP

Mrs. Leslie A. Lee has established a fund in memory of her son, to be known as the Richard Almy Lee Scholarship. This scholarship which covers in full the tuition of one student is to be awarded preferably to some member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity.

Mr. Benjamin F. Morrison of Medford, Massachusetts, grandfather of John Franklin Morrison, has established a scholarship, to be awarded preferably to a student from Medford, Massachusetts.

Vol. XXXVII.  DECEMBER 13, 1907  No. 19

Once again the Orient desires to remind the college world that we are the college paper and to request that items of particular college interest should receive publication first in these columns. It seems only fair that such bits of news as schedules, gifts to the college, additions to the library and art collections, which are items particularly for the college world, should appear first in the columns of the Orient. We desire to acknowledge with pleasure that the recently organized Press Club has agreed to respect this privilege, and that such items as these will not be sent to the daily papers until the Orient has published them. We desire to ask all the college if it will not take particular care to respect this request. Not only to the students, but particularly to the faculty also, do we address this. We ask that such items as are of particular college interest and do not demand immediate publication be given to the Orient before the daily papers.

There are in Bowdoin at present thirty-one men who are the sons of Bowdoin men, besides several who are grandsons, brothers and cousins. Of the thirty-one, nine are in 1908, seven in 1909, four in 1910, and eleven in 1911. These figures bear out the statement so often made that Bowdoin is a family college. All Bowdoin alumni, wherever they are, intend to do as the second verse of “Bowdoin Beata” says and “send their sons to Bowdoin in the fall.” The more of these Bowdoin men by inheritance there are here, the better it will be, for they cannot but be filled with the traditions and respect for our Alma Mater of which the older alumni think so much. Any man reared on Bowdoin lore must have in him a marked degree of love for old Bowdoin, so we gladly welcome among us the eleven new men among these sons of Bowdoin’s sons.

ORIENT COMPETITION

The editor desires to call attention once more to the competition for positions on the Editorial Board of the paper. The contest has been permitted to grow lax during the past few issues, but notice is now given that the work must be steadily maintained during the winter term. There are eleven more issues of the Orient in this volume and the contest will continue in ten of these. It must be stated that the work of the Sophomores in the contest has been very good, but no Freshman has as yet done the work required for membership, and unless the members from this class brace up, there will be the peculiar condition of no Freshman qualifying himself for the board at all! From now on the contest must be kept up regularly. We desire to notify candidates that each man should make effort to see the Editor at least by Monday of each week and receive assignments for news write-ups. Competitors should remember that three editorials are required from each man. In particular, remember that the Orient is a newspaper and quantity and the value of items as news should always be considered.

IBIS LECTURE

On last Friday night in the Deutscher Verein Room at the Hubbard Library, the Hon. Augustus F. Moulton, of Portland, delivered a very interesting and scholarly paper before the members of the Ibis, on "Anne Hutchinson, the Savonarola of Boston." The author described the condition of life in the earliest days of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, and the political and religious aspects of the times, both in America and in England. He then outlined the nature of the doctrines that Anne Hutchinson expounded and showed the profound effect that these had upon the colony. He showed how Anne Hutchinson herself was a woman who maintained her womanly modesty and decorum throughout all the excitement of her trial. Mr. Moulton further showed how Anne Hutchinson was the first to declare the doctrine of liberality of thought to the Puritans. He pointed out how though she had undoubtedly received unfair and harsh treatment, it is justified when we consider the political uncertainty of the time, and the exceedingly precarious position in which the colony itself was situated during the first experimental years. A discussion followed the reading of the paper.

DEUTSCHER VEREIN

Last Monday evening the Deutscher Verein met and organized for the year. The club was entertained at New Meadows Inn by Prof. George T. Files. Alumni Notes

CLASS OF 1850

Hon. William P. Frye was again chosen president pro tempore of the United States Senate at the opening of the session in December. He has held this office continuously since Feb. 7, 1896.

The recently published autobiography of General Oliver O. Howard contains an interesting chapter on his college life at Bowdoin.

CLASS OF 1864

It is somewhat unusual for a lawyer in active professional life to be the recipient from a foreign government of an honor distinctively literary. Those who are acquainted, however, with the attainments of the French language and literature of Hon. Charles F. Libby were not surprised to learn that he had been made an officier d'Academie and has recently received the palmes academiques, an insignia consisting of two palms in silver suspended by a dark violet ribbon.

The position held in medical literature by Dr. Charles Jewett's Practice of Obstetrics is indicated by the recent appearance of the third edition.

CLASS OF 1904

William Edward Lunt, ’04, of Lisbon, Maine, who is now a fourth year graduate student at Harvard, was recently awarded the Ozias Goodwin Memorial Fellowship by the Harvard faculty.

CLASS OF 1905

Raymond Davis, ’05, is engaged in the lumber business in Duluth, Minnesota.

CLASS OF 1907

A. James Voorhees is now located in Chicago, Illinois.
EDWARD TEMPLE PICKARD

On Sunday, December 15, but two days after President Hyde’s return from Europe, the college was suddenly cast into gloom by the sad death of Edward Temple Pickard, 1910. This death made the fourth among our undergraduates since last Commencement, but it was the first to occur on the campus, and the feeling of sorrow among Bowdoin men for their lost college-mate, needed no further expression than the unanimous attendance at the sad funeral held in the chapel on the Tuesday following the decease.

Edward T. Pickard came to Bowdoin in the fall of 1906 from the Newton High School, near his home at Auburndale, Mass. He joined the Delta Kappa Epsilon Fraternity, was a member of the Mandolin Club, and last spring was elected Assistant Manager of the Varsity Tennis Team. He was always a jolly comrade, and in the fraternity, class, and college his loss is greatly felt. He was not taken seriously ill until the Thursday preceding his death; he was put to bed in his fraternity house, and, on Saturday, was operated upon for peritonitis, from which he died on Sunday evening. His mother and grandfather were here, but his father and sister could not reach him. The two latter arrived on Monday, and on Tuesday the simple funeral services were held which will live long in the memories of all our undergraduates.

A short service was first held in the library of the Delta Kappa Epsilon house, where only members of the Fraternity were present. The service was led by Professor K. C. M. Sills, who read a few verses from the Bible, and a few stanzas of poetry selected for the occasion. The casket was taken from the house to the chapel, where the whole college formed and marched in double file, by classes, to their usual forms, after which the casket was borne by Pickard’s fraternity delegation to a place before the pulpit. A violin solo was then beautifully rendered by F. E. Kendrie, ’10, following which, Prof. Henry L. Chapman read a short passage from the Bible, and addressed to the students a simple, short talk, long to be remembered by all present.

After these exercises, the college rendered its last tribute to their comrade, by forming again by twos, and marching bareheaded to the railroad. The Seniors went first, followed by the Juniors and Freshmen, then by the Sophomores who immediately preceded the casket, which in turn was followed by the fraternity, and the carriages bearing the family to the station. At the railroad crossing, the lines of students divided, allowed the hearse, the fraternity, and the family to pass quietly between them to the station. From there, six members of the Fraternity accompanied the family to Pickard’s home in Auburndale, where, on Wednesday, they acted as pall-bearers at the funeral held at the house of the grandfather, Mr. E. L. Pickard, whose death in California last week it is the Orient’s sad duty to chronicle.

At the first funeral there were received from the Sophomore Class, and from several fraternities, flowers which were deeply appreciated by the family and friends of Pickard, all of whom expressed before leaving Brunswick, their sincerest thanks for the sympathy and attention which was professed them here on every hand.

THE NOVEMBER QUILL

In spite of the entire absence of fiction the November Quill is readable throughout. The opening article with the paradoxical title, “The Usefulness of the Useless,” is a fresh, thought-stirring treatment of the old theme with which each successive generation grapples in its turn, the antithesis of the immediate and the distant goal; of the practical as defined in terms of bread and butter and money-getting, and the really practical, as the insight of broadening experience identifies it with well-rounded manhood and the largest satisfactions life can offer. The numerous illustrations drawn from daily college life show how necessary it is to worry the student out of the narrow view by the prodding of insistent requirements, and they suggest, too, the travail of soul through which alone the birth of larger manhood comes. Here is a chance for the undergraduate to see himself as the alumnus sees him.
Of the three short poems "Nature Music" gives melodious utterance to a mood natural to a lover of the forest to whom the sea's mighty harmonies are mysterious and fearsome. An equally devoted lover of the sea would hear inspiring music in its winds and waves, and shrink with dread, perhaps, from the gloom of the forest, instead of hearing "the silence sing," and listening with gladness for "The noises that wild creatures make,

More still than silence is."

But with all this sensitiveness to the charm of nature in some of her myriad aspects, the human outlook at the close of this little poem is dreary.

"Revelation" tells the story of normal spiritual growth, out of unthinking acceptance of tradition, through rash rejection of all creeds, to the "deeper trust" as assured conviction that somewhere there is more than man. In next to the last line the change of "was" to is would be an improvement.

The brief musing entitled "Pemaquid" plays about the mystery which historic ruins enshrine for the questioning mind.

Number IV. of the "Notes on Works of Art in the Bowdoin Collections" is of special interest, for the bulk of it is given to Corot's landscape, "Near Ville d'Aveay," which ranks as "the finest as well as the most popular casel picture in the college collections." The Quill is doing a good service in calling attention to our art treasures and making them better known. The reproduction of this Corot is excellent, the account of the genius and manner of the painter is illuminating, and the charming glimpse afforded of the donors of both the Walker Art Building and many of its works of art will enhance the enjoyment of their gifts.

In Stevenson's "Child's Garden of Verses" copious quotations, framed in by brief notes comment and appreciation, reveal the simple grace and fascination of Stevenson's muse. No writer has come so close to the heart of the child in his innocent and exuberant imaginings, and in the writer of this essay Stevenson has found a sympathetic interpreter.

The longest article in the number is the sketch of "Quebec, Past and Present," a pleasing composite of history and description, made vivid apparently by a recent visit. The natural and architectural beauty of this old city, the heroic deeds there performed, and the quaint simplicity of life in a town "left behind in the march of progress," are all dwelt upon with painstaking care. The most obvious blemish is the distorted forms of several proper names which eluded the vigilance of the proof-reader.

"Ye Postman," who inadvertently speaks of the "alumni pages" of the Vassar Miscellany, with his gleanings from college exchanges enables his readers to sample the passion and pathos of the rising generation of poets and see new pictures in love's kaleidoscope, thus closing a number that keeps well up to the Quill's standard in interest and excellence.

FENCING AT BOWDOIN

For several years attempts have been made to form a fencing club at Bowdoin, with the ultimate hope of having a team to meet those throughout the State. This year, by the generosity of the college, and the kindness of Dr. Whittier, the Seniors will be able to have the best possible instruction. For Mr. Charles D. White of the Pianelli Fencing Club of Augusta has been engaged to meet those members who are interested in this art, at the Gymnasium from 8 to 11 every Saturday night. This arrangement will continue as long as there is sufficient interest among the students, and there now is a good prospect of getting duals with several teams throughout Maine, a letter, asking for a date, having already been received from the Bangor Y. M. C. A. This opportunity is a rare one for Bowdoin, so let every Senior be at the Gymnasium next Saturday night to help make the team a success.

COLLEGE TEA

The first College Tea of the year takes place this afternoon from four to six o'clock in Alumni Room, Hubbard Hall. It will be for the students and the people of Brunswick, as usual. All students, especially Freshmen, are cordially invited to attend.

The first Junior Assembly will be held tonight in Memorial Hall. The patronesses will be Mrs. Hyde, Mrs. Foster, Mrs. A. Johnson and Mrs. Baxter. Music will be furnished by Kendrie's Orchestra and refreshments by Given.

CLASS OF 1910

Once more the Class of Nineteen Hundred and Ten has experienced sorrow in the death of one of its members: Edward Temple Pickard, our beloved classmate, has been called to the home of the Father. In his death both college and class have lost a worthy, esteemed member. He was one whose character and conduct were pure, whose happy nature made him loved by all who knew him, and whose life was one of service to his fellows. In classes and in sports we shall miss his smiling presence; his death makes a void which time can only lessen. Though our loss is bitter, yet we are thankful for the privilege of having had him with us thus far in our college course. He was a true Bowdoin man, an honored classmate, and a sincere friend.

Therefore we, in our sorrow,

Resolve, That we, the Class of Bowdoin, Nineteen Hundred and Ten, extend our heart-felt sympathy to the bereaved family and friends, and assure them that we also share in their grief.

Henry Q. Hawes, William H. Sandborn, Sumner Edwards,

For the Class.

WHEREAS, It has pleased the Father of our spirits in His infinite wisdom to take unto Himself the soul of our brother, Edward Temple Pickard, we, the members of Theta Chapter of Delta Kappa Epsilon, reverently submit to his Good Will. But it is not without the keenest pain that we contemplate his loss. His life among us was one of gentle comradeship. His mild, genial nature and unobtrusive character will always remain a blessed memory. In our sorrow we would not forget those who were bound to him by ties stronger even than those that bound us together in our college family. The fraternity wishes to express its gratitude for the sincere sympathy shown us by the college community in our sorrow.*

COLLEGE CATALOGUE

The catalogue for 1907-1908 was issued last Monday. The total number of students is 394. Of these 93 are in the Medical School and 305 in the Academic Department. These are divided as follows: Seniors, 31; Juniors, 58; Sophomores, 73; Freshmen, 118; Specials, 23. There are two graduate students. A new plan has been adopted of putting after the names of those students, who have not their class standing and whose names, consequently, appear in the list of some other class, their own class numerals.

The entrance requirements have been changed in that 28 points instead of 26 are now required for admission, but to balance this English counts 6 instead of 4 points. The French and German departments have appended to their requirements lists of books which they recommend be used in preparatory schools. A new course, Mathematics 9 and 10, has been added. This is a course in Advanced Algebra for men who do not wish to take up the higher forms of Mathematics.

The Old Year and the New

It is a good thing now and then to pause a moment and look behind us. Especially at New Year's time each year is it customary to glance over the months that have passed and look forward to those ahead. For Bowdoin College, Nineteen Hundred and Seven will always be remembered as a year of great sadness. It is this one fact that is distinctly prominent when we look back on what the past year at college has meant. Four undergraduates who were with us a year ago have passed away. Because the weeks have slipped by so quickly, it is by no means true that the memory of these fellows is sinking with each day rapidly into the past. On the contrary in the hearts of all the members of Bowdoin will there ever remain implanted the well-loved memory of those four college mates who departed forever from us in 1907.

In the college in general the year Nineteen Seven was prosperous. A large class was graduated in June, and the largest Freshman Class we have ever had is beginning to learn a little of what it means to be Bowdoin men. Bowdoin was granted $50,000 by the General Educational Board towards the raising of $250,000, a distinct honor to the college as this is the first time money has been given in New England and Bowdoin was selected with Yale as being a worthy institution. Of the required sum the college has raised approximately $100,000, which with the gift of Carnegie last month of $50,000 more, makes about $50,000 yet to be secured. The year has further shown that the scientific side of the curriculum is at last receiving the attention it deserves. New courses in mechanical drawing, surveying and geometry are offered and if in the years to come the college is to broaden its curriculum, the universal demand now is that these lines be given the increase. President Hyde is again with us, and much improved in health.

In athletics nineteen-seven has certainly been a banner year. It is trite for the ORIENT to recall again our two championships, undefeated in any championship contest by any college in the State, both football and baseball, and that our baseball team won a victory from Harvard! That Bowdoin has begun to take a broader view in athletics this year is shown us in recalling that for the first time a Bowdoin team travelled beyond New England and attained notable victories in New York. In tennis we had our share of success, winning one championship in the Maine tournament. In track only did we lack success, losing the State Meet by but one point. In other college interests the year was well for the college. We won two intercollegiate debates.

If there were anything particular to be mentioned for the coming year we would but reiterate the oft-expressed sentiments: That the courses along scientific lines will be increased leading ultimately towards an engineering course; that in athletics the college will take a broader outlook and strive to gain more of a place in the State. Our successes of the past year make this year a particularly opportune time for the broadening of our athletic horizon, that for undergraduates may the influences that tend towards the greatest democratic spirit gain force. It would even be an ORIENT wish that the present year see the initiation of a movement towards founding a Bowdoin Union. These statements may seem ideal or nearly worn out. They are meant but for the summing up of a few of those conditions which we all hope to some time see at Bowdoin. We saw improvements in 1907; may every Bowdoin man, by real love and labor for his college, try to make the coming year of 1908 a year of honor and profit for his Alma Mater.

Another Way to Look at It

It would seem most wondrously monotonous if we should follow in the footsteps of our editorial predecessors and write an editorial in regard to chapel "wooding" again. The Orient has criticized and criticized, and we must confess with only a minimum of result. But there is one other way of looking at this. Last year through the Interfraternity Council all the fraternities voted to eliminate this feature of chapel. Now did it ever occur to you that when a man kicks a steam pipe during a prayer he is not only exhibiting himself as an ungentlemanly boor—a title which in itself would appear to have but little effect in some fellas—but he is also publicly disgracing his fraternity and advertising to his associates that he holds his society, and what rules it may make, in utter contempt? This is the way the Orient cannot help regarding this feature. It is not just the individual but the fraternity as well that is disgraced. It would be well for some of the lowerclassmen to think in this way.

ALPHA DELTA PHI DANCE

On Friday evening, December 20, the Bowdoin Chapter of the Alpha Delta Phi gave over its Chapter House and set as hosts for a dance. Hutchins, and Mrs. Arthur C. Gibson. The committee in charge consisted of Fisk, chairman, Clifford, Warren, and Parkman. Much humorous comment has been prevalent about college of late over the notice that has been travelling the rounds of the daily papers to the effect that "Robert A. Toothaker is to coach baseball at Bowdoin. As a fact he is not coaching baseball. This mistake is easily explainable, when we consider that Mr. Toothaker is coaching not the baseball team, but is musical director of the Minstrels, which is given for the benefit of the baseball team. There is no doubt that "Bob" could coach baseball if he had the opportunity, and could teach us something at that! But "Bob" is putting in all his spare time and work, too, for Bowdoin now in directing our show, and we certainly are appreciative of what he is doing!"

The chapel service Sunday was conducted by President Hyde. He spoke briefly saying that he thought the college was not receiving as much benefit from the college preachers as it should. He said that unless the students enter into the church work they will not see any benefit to be derived from it. He used as an example the statement of Mr. Wright, the inventor of flying machines, who said that he used to watch the birds for hours to see how to fly, but he could not understand. After he had worked out for himself the theory of flight he then saw that the birds flew in the same way. President Hyde said that it was the same with church work. After the students work for themselves they will understand better the college preachers. After the talk Mrs. Thompson sang a solo.

At the meeting of the Maine State Board of Health which was held at the State House, Tuesday forenoon and afternoon, the secretary reported that in a series of papers in one of the leading public health journals of Germany, an Austrian military commission in Vienna had carried on an elaborate series of experiments for the purpose of determining the most efficient processes for disinfection with formaldehyde, and had reported that, as compared with other methods, including some which had within the last few months been reported on favorably in some of the government laboratories in that country, the permanganate method worked out and made available to the public and to health officers by the State Board of Health of Maine is preferable to all other methods.—Kennecott Journal.

The above clipping is of particular interest to Bowdoin men as the method referred to above is that which was discovered and developed practically in the chemical laboratories of Bowdoin College, by Prof. F. C. Robinson.

Alumni Notes

CLASS OF 1841

George Albert Thomas, son of Elias and Elizabeth (Widgery) Thomas, was born 16 September, 1819, at Portland, Maine. He was prepared for college at the Portland Academy. After graduation, he studied law in the office of Judge Howard (Bowdoin, 1821), and was admitted to the Cumberland Bar. He never, however, practiced his profession to any extent. Early in 1850 he went to California, where he remained five years, being occupied in mining most of the time. On his return to Portland he was engaged for a short time in the land warrant business, and subsequently in care of the family real estate. Soon after the great fire of 1866, he moved to the well-known house on Danforth Street which, with his sister, Miss Charlotte Thomas, as its mistress, became known as the "Social Corner," and for half a century was one of the centers of the musical and social life of the city.

Mr. Thomas' Commencement part was on the Fine Arts and to one of them, music, he was enthusiastically devoted throughout his long life. For twenty years he was musical director at St. Stephen's Church. Early interested and active in the anti-slavery movement, his part in public was to sing the songs of liberty. In private life he was a successful conductor in the underground railway by which many a slave gained his freedom. His jovial nature and skill and power as a vocalist made him a welcome guest at alumni banquets. The loss of eyesight which came to him in later life did not chill the kindly, cheerful spirit which marked his earlier years. To the last he was a good, earnest and unselfish man. His death, the result of an attack of la grippe, occurred 20 December, 1907. Mr. Thomas never married.

CLASS OF 1846

Frederic Dummer Sewall, son of General Joseph Sewall, was born at Bath, Me., 22 January, 1846. After graduating with honor he studied law and practiced his profession for a time in his native city. At the outbreak of the Civil War he entered the service as Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General on the staff of General O. O. Howard, and was discharged for promotion in June, 1862, and commissioned Colonel of the 19th Maine Infantry Volunteers in July, 1862, and mustered in as such on August 25, 1862, and discharged as Colonel of the 19th Maine February 23, 1863, by reason of disability. He was appointed Colonel of the Regiment Veteran Reserve Company in June of 1863 and was mustered out of service as Brevet Brigadier General of Volunteers, January, 1868. The principal engagements he was in during the war were the siege of Yorktown thirty days, Fair Oaks and Front of Richmond, on staff duty with Generals Howard, Sumner and Burnside, with the 19th Maine. He was commander of the brigade in defense of Washington and in front of Alexandria, from December, 1863, to July, 1864. He was commander of District of Annapolis from February, 1865, to September 18 of the same year, when the Military District was dissolved. He was president of Court Martial and other detached service from September, 1865, to March, 1866, when he was ordered to staff of General Howard as acting inspector-general and served until January of 1868.

Since the war he has been special internal revenue agent at the office of the Internal Revenue Department in Washington and Boston, and was one of the highly respected and efficient officials in the department. His death, from heart failure, occurred at Boston, 16 December, 1907.

CLASS OF 1848

John Dinsmore, son of Thomas and Sally (Houghton) Dinsmore, was born 21 April, 1821, at Anson, Maine. He was prepared for college in the academies at Bloomfield, Gorham, and Yarmouth. After graduation he taught for a year in Industry, Me., and studied theology at Bangor Seminary. In 1852 he became pastor of the Congregational Church at North Hampton, N. H. A pastorate of ten years there was followed by one of sixteen at Winslow, Maine. In 1860 he removed to Brunswick, and was successively acting pastor at Anson and Athens, and Harpswell, Maine. Some ten years later he took up his residence at Auburn, Me., and while not engaged in preaching was an active and honored laborer in religious work. In 1904 he removed to North Harpswell where he died 8 December, 1907, of old age. Beside a widow, Mr. Dinsmore leaves two sons, John E. Dinsmore, A.M., of the American Colony at Jerusalem; Nathan C. Dinsmore of Turner; and a daughter, Mrs. Althea C. Curtis of Harpswell. A wide circle of friends and old-time parishioners will long remember his earnest, faithful Christian life.

COMMUNICATION

To the Editor of the Orient:

I am going to brave the displeasure of my college contemporaries of the late Eighties, by voicing an impression that I have received from two or three visits to the institution during the past two years. It is what seemed to me to be a distinct raising of the "tone" of the college. It seemed to me that the undergraduates are more tidy in their dress, more courteous and deferential in their manner, and more serious-minded in their attitude toward their work than they were in our day. There is less of what we may call (I hesitate to say it) the "rowdy" spirit. As I recollect it, there used to be a certain affectation of rakishnes sand unkemptness in dress and manner that did not sit well.

Part of this is doubtless due to the increased prosperity and wealth of the country and the general raising of the standard of living, and part of it probably to the unconscious influence of the improved physical surroundings—the new chapter houses, the grading and beautification of the quadrangle, and the serene and imposing new buildings. But I do not believe this explains it all. I cannot but feel that there is a new Presence, a clarifying and toning-up of the moral, spiritual and intellectual atmosphere.

THE FIRST JUNIOR ASSEMBLY

Last Friday evening the first Junior Assembly was held, and proved to be a great success. The hall was beautifully decorated with banners and flags of Bowdoin and other colleges, with a large 1909 banner over the entrance. The music for the twenty dances was furnished by Kendrie's Orchestra. Refreshments were served by Given of Brunswick. About forty couples attended, including Miss Carrie Johnson of Hallowell, Miss Charlotte Hubbard of Wellesley, Mass., Miss Lynn Phillips of Rutherford, N. J., Miss Gwendolyn Jenkin, Miss Mildred Cotton, Miss Esther Wright, Miss Dorothy Wright, Miss Eugenie McIntosh, Miss Laughlin, Miss Eunice Bodwell, Miss Marion Dana and Miss Louise Malley of Portland, Miss Louise Weatheril, Miss Virginia Woodbury, Miss Dorothy Johnson, Miss Sue Winchell, Miss Isabel Forsaith, Miss Emily Felt, Miss Ethel Webb, Miss Sarah Merriman, Miss Helen Eaton, Miss Margaret Sutherland, Miss Lula Woodward of Brunswick, Miss Helen Paine of Foxcroft, Miss May Silver of Silver Mills, Miss Avesia Stone of Lynn, Mass., Miss Florence Howe of Concord, Mass., Miss Alden of Stamford, Miss Lena Paul and Miss Helen Percival of Auburn, and many others.

The patronesses were Mrs. Hyde, Mrs. Allen Johnson, Mrs. Foster and Mrs. H. C. Baxter.

The committee in charge consisted of Heath, Brewster, Rich, Burton and Brown.

THE NEXT COLLEGE PREACHER

Altho we are disappointed that, owing to illness, the Rev. Donald Sage Mackay will not occupy the pulpit of the college church next Sunday, we look forward with pleasure to the coming of the Rev. Edward F. Sanderson, who will fill the vacancy. It will be remembered that Mr. Sanderson preached here about one year ago and those who heard the sermon were much impressed by this rising young minister. He is much sought for as a college preacher and we are fortunate in having the opportunity of listening to him here at Bowdoin.

Mr. Sanderson studied at Hartord Seminary and Amherst College and is a man of broad views. After graduating from college he occupied the Congregational parish at Beverly, Mass., for one year. He is at present in one of the richest and largest parishes in New England, the Congregational Church at Providence, R. I., where he has a large attendance of Brown University students every Sunday.

Bowdoin can show her appreciation of hearing so distinguished a man by a large representation at "The Church on the Hill," next Sunday.
MINSTREL SHOW

An Entire Innovation—A Whirl of Frivolity

On Wednesday evening, January 22, will occur the annual production of the Bowdoin Minstrels. The show is given for the benefit of the baseball team. For the past two weeks a chorus of sixty-five men have been rehearsing faithfully until they have neared the point of perfection. The end men, Boyce, Draper, Lee, Sheehan, Cox and Smith, led by Bill Crowley, have compiled a series of jokes which are well in keeping with the strength of the performance. For an Olio, such men as Thewlis, handcuff, straight jacket and pillory expert, Frank Kendrie with his violin, Burt Morrell with his clubs, Mike with his stories, and the never-failing fun-maker, Boyce, in the new role of “Box Car Jimmy,” are well able to insure the balance and strength of the second part of the show.

The curtain will rise promptly at 8.15, and a particular effort has been made to avoid tedious waits between the numbers.

The tickets go on sale at F. P. Shaw’s bookstore on Monday, January 20. It is hoped that the student body will turn out to a man, thereby supporting the baseball team, and in return the management guarantee a first class show!

RHODES SCHOLARSHIP FOR 1908

As the time draws near for the 1908 Rhodes Scholarship examinations the college men of Maine are naturally becoming interested in the event. This year, in our State, the candidate will be chosen from the University of Maine; Bowdoin, Colby and Bates, having each respectively sent a man to Oxford. The examinations, known as “Responsions,” consist of Mathematics, Latin and Greek, and Prose Composition, all of an elementary character and practically like those required for a college entrance examination. The one exception is that they require marked proficiency in grammar.

The examinations are not decisive nor do they fulfill all requirements; before choosing the candidate, the State committee must consider in addition, the student’s ability for leadership, his love for outdoor sports and his character and temperament in general. The maximum age limit for students is twenty-one years, and although the candidates are not required to be members of a college, yet in the opinion of those Maine men at Oxford, it is better to have completed at least two years at college before taking up the work there. The scholarships entitle the recipient to enter any college at Oxford University.

At the first issue of the scholarships in 1904, the colleges of Maine were given the choice of candidates in turn, according to the age of the institution. Bowdoin had the honor of leading in the person of David R. Porter, ’02. In 1910 the examinations are open to the State at large irrespective of institutions.

The scholarship of American students at Oxford is of a very high order and they have won many of the prizes offered by the administration.

SUNDAY CHAPEL

In the Sunday Chapel President Hyde quoted from a speech delivered by Rudyard Kipling to the students of Yale University. His theme was:

“Money-making should not be the sole aim of anyone’s life.”

“If one needed money,” he said, “to accomplish his work, he should gather it with his left hand and should save his right hand for his life work. A man is measured, not by himself, but by what he strives for; and if a man’s energies are devoted to accumulating wealth, he is generally a small man.”

Kendrie, ’10, and Kellogg, ’11, rendered a beautiful violin duet.

THE ROMANIA MEETING

On Monday, January 12, the Romania held its first meeting at the home of Professor Henry Johnson, who explained the purpose of the group as commented upon elsewhere in this issue. It was decided to meet if possible on every other Wednesday evening after the fraternity meetings, but that the next meeting should be held tonight, Friday, January 17, at the home of Professor Brown. Those who are to form the group at first are, besides Professor Johnson, Professors Brown and Sills: Davis, ’08; Gould, ’08; Ham, ’08; Huse, ’08; Ricker, ’08; Burton, ’09; Carter, ’09; Cushing, ’09; Hovey, ’09; Hurley, ’09; Marsh, ’09; and Stahl, ’09. Davis, ’08, was chosen secretary.
CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

The first meeting of the Christian Association of the New Year was held Thursday evening, January 9th. Rev. L. S. Coons, '08, addressed the members assembled in a lecture upon "God's Dependence Upon Man." In developing his topic he particularly emphasized the fact that God can do without man but does not wish to; that the progress of his creation, begun so many centuries ago, continues still, ever drawing nearer toward an ultimate completion; that he relies upon man as an individual to do his part toward this achievement of perfection.

ART BUILDING LECTURES

Soon after the opening of the second semester, Professor Henry Johnson, curator of the Walker Art Building, will give a series of talks on the contents of the art building. These informal gatherings offer a splendid opportunity for men to learn something about Bowdoin's fine art collection and the ORIENT sincerely hopes that there will be a large number present. These talks are not only a source of pleasure, but are of no small value as a part of a college man's education.

DRAMATIC CLUB

It is a matter worth noting that the Dramatic Club has made such a successful trip last month. Three performances were given: In Brooks, Belfast and Camden, and nothing but praise of the performance and the manner in which the members of the club conducted themselves, has been heard. Since the advent there of the club our college has risen greatly in the esteem of the residents in that part of the State. An organization which can gain such a reputation upon its first trip deserves the best wishes of the whole college. The club has been a success in every way and the manager has received many good offers for other trips.

NOTICE

All changes in the names on the Room Contract Book at the Treasurer's Office must be made before the First of February. Otherwise the Room Rent will be charged to the name appearing as signed.

COMMUNICATION

I should like to call to the attention of the faculty and the student body the lack of interest and perhaps thoughtfulness in regard to the raising of the flag on Memorial Hall. There were two flags given to the college by Edgar O. Achorn, '80, one to be used for pleasant days and a smaller one, for stormy or windy days. It does not seem in accordance with the proper spirit or to be in keeping with the agreement under which they were given, that the flags should not wave over the building erected as a memorial to those who lost their lives in the service of their country.

ATHLETIC COUNCIL MEETING

A regular meeting of the Athletic Council was held in Dr. Whittier's office on Monday evening. Little more than routine business was transacted. The Council approved the schedule of games for the Ice Hockey Team, and granted permission to the Track Association to be represented at the B. A. A. meet by a Relay Team, and in such other events as was deemed advisable. The Council officially adopted in its By-Laws a clause, making managers of all regular athletic teams eligible to wear the "B" of their department on hat, cap or sweater. Such has formerly been the custom, but owing to the loss of records had not been regularly adopted before this. Other matters were discussed, but no official action was taken.

MEDALS FOR THE DEBATNG TEAM

Not discouraged by the fact that for the past three years all the medals called for have been gold, the donor renews, this year, his generous offer of medals to the debating team—gold if they win, silver if they lose, in the debate with Syracuse University.

'68 PRIZE SPEAKING

The Class of '68 Prize speaking will take place next Thursday evening, January 23, 1909. The following is the order of speakers: Joseph A. Davis, Albert T. Gould, Arthur H. Ham, George P. Hyde, Arthur L. Robinson, Carl M. Robinson.

The presiding officer will probably be President Hyde. The judges and the subjects of the essays have not yet been decided. It is hoped that the College Orchestra will furnish the music.
Communication  As a self-appointed critic the Orient takes it upon itself almost too often to put before the student-body their short-comings and errors, and it is with much satisfaction that they publish herein the communication relative to the moral and intellectual atmosphere of Bowdoin. The Orient is always glad to receive communications of all natures and is particularly glad to present a communication of appreciation from an alumnus of the college.

Be Fair to Bowdoin and the Managers  It will doubtless be a pleasure to the students and friends of Bowdoin College to learn that the football management has already secured Ross McClave as football coach for the season of 1908. But before the undergraduate begins to indulge in dreams of the gridiron glories offered by the coming season it would be well to turn attention to the one that has already closed. As usual in all college activities some students were freer with their promises than with their actual support. As a result unpaid subscription blanks are still in the hands of the management. The tendency to dodge a manager is fast becoming a popular fad, but at the same time it is a fad that forces an athletic management to drag unsettled accounts along for three months after the close of the season, and compels the editing board of a paper to think seriously for some way whereby printers can be induced to do their work without remuneration. Aside from this, the neglect to properly support any legitimate branch of college activities is equivalent to a deliberate sacrifice of representative interests, for the main way in which the present standing of the college can be judged, and compared with other institutions is by the standing of athletic teams, the strength of our debaters, the excellence of the college periodicals and the loyalty and honesty of our undergraduates.

It seems only a fair thing for those men who signed in for subscriptions, who reaped the advantages of unpaid for season tickets, or who still have football toggs in their possession to come to some terms at once with the management. It is high time that all old scores were settled and the management left free to devote its undivided energies to the coming season.

The Romania  On Monday evening there met at the house of Professor Henry Johnson, two professors and a group of students to start an informal organization to be known as the Romania. The idea, which is that of Professor Johnson, is to form a group where all shall act together in seeking to become familiar with the current course of politics, religion, art, music, or any other phase of the life among the Latin races of the world. Americans, except when travelling, usually think but little of the great nations of Europe, and Professor Johnson seems to have hit upon the pleasantest and best way of bringing their broadening influence home to such Bowdoin men as shall be interested in them. The plan formed is for each member to follow continuously in current periodicals or any other source of information, some activity of the European nations, in which he may be interested; with the hoped for result that each member may, during the conversation at a meeting, add something to the interest of the evening, as well as merely take away something as is the case at our many lecture clubs.

As the group is formed merely for the purpose of gaining information and of broadening the views of the members, there is no fixed standard of membership. It is hoped to keep the number of student members at about a dozen, so as to make it possible to meet in an ordinary room, but members are to be admitted by consent of the group, on application, whenever members drop out either by graduation or some other cause. That is, it has been decided to maintain a waiting list, and anyone in college who is interested in the work of the group, may by handing his name to the secretary of the group, Joseph A. Davis, at the Theta Delta Chi House, become eligible for membership as soon as a vacancy shall occur.

The whole idea is a new one, and without doubt is one which would find a ready response in any college community. It is not only a privilege for students to come into close informal contact with their Professor, as here with such men as Professor Henry Johnson, Professor Brown, and Professor Sills, but there is afforded an opportunity for a liberal education, that should soon put a good number on the Romania waiting list.

BRADBURY PRIZE DEBATE

The Bradbury Prize Debate will take place in Memorial Hall on the evening of March 10. The question for debate is, Resolved, That aside from the question of amending the constitution, the Federal Government should exercise further control over quasi-public corporations doing interstate business. To choose speakers for the Bradbury Debate, preliminary trials will be held in Hubbard Hall, Wednesday evening, January 29, at seven o'clock. Each speaker will be allowed six minutes. The order of speakers will be determined by lot. All students intending to compete must hand their names to A. L. Robinson, before January 28.

YORK COUNTY CLUB

Monday evening the York County Club held a meeting with Ross, '10, at the Psi Upsilon House. Most of the members were present and a pleasant session was enjoyed. The design for the shingle, by Newman, '09, was unanioumsly adopted. Other business was transacted, after which refreshments were served. Plans for influencing York County men to come to Bowdoin were discussed.

The next meeting is to be at the Kappa Sigma House, January 27.

College Notes

There were many graduates and members of the faculty at the Junior Assembly.

There has been some fine skating on the river and at South Freeport, this past week.

"Mike," the college tailor, has a new line of spring suit samples. All students are invited to call and inspect the new samples.

The Sophomores started boxing Monday. The student instructors are Clifford, '10; McGlone, '10; Ballard, '10, and McKusick, '11.

Evans, '10, resumed his studies at the beginning of the winter term after being absent from college several weeks on account of sickness.

The Thornton Academy basketball team, which played in Bath, Friday night, was entertained at the Kappa Sigma House, and was shown over the campus Saturday morning, leaving on the noon train.
The second of the series of trials for the Relay Team took place Tuesday afternoon. The time of each man, though taken, was not given out.

During the holiday vacation the engagement was announced of Rev. Herbert A. Jump of the Church on the Hill, to Miss Mae Ellis Brock of West Somerville, Mass., Mt. Holyoke College, '02.

It has always been customary to invite sub-freshmen down to the annual minstrels. A good opportunity is then offered to show them the talent of the college with some of its good-natured nonsense.

Bowdoin men will be interested to learn that "Tom" Barry, who coached the Bowdoin Football Team three years ago, after a very successful season of coaching last fall will probably coach the Michigan Football Team next year.

J. H. Files, '11, and M. A. Gould, '11, taking French leave, Monday, left college to sail for Europe on a cattle steamer scheduled to sail from Boston on Wednesday. It is to be feared that their courage is better than their judgment.

Considerable trouble has been caused by the recent showers which have caused the water to rise in dangerous proximity to the hot water mains leading into the "ends." Night watchmen were stationed to prevent the possibility of any accident occurring.

A faculty dining club, called the "Octopus," was organized at the beginning of the college year last fall and was formerly composed of nine members. The list of members now is as follows: Mr. Stone, Prof. Edwards, Prof. Sills, Prof. Burnett, Mr. Jump, Mr. Wilder, Mr. Howe, and Prof. Chapman. Bridge, '89, is steward for the club.

"Dave" Porter, Bowdoin, '06, who left college to become a Rhodes Scholar at Oxford, and whose remarkable career all Bowdoin men are proud of, is expected to be in Brunswick Sunday, January 26, to make an address in the Church on the Hill before the students and townspeople. Every Bowdoin man should plan to hear "Dave." He was one of the most popular students in attendance at the college.

The Orient is pleased to note the circulation of a letter in the college community by the manager of the Quill, containing a personal appeal to every member of the college to support the paper. The matter should be taken to heart by all its readers. The question of supporting college organizations and activities is one which has always vexed the managers of those organizations and activities and probably will only find its ultimate solution when the principal assessments are included with the term bills.

HOCKEY

On account of warm weather the rink has not been in suitable condition for hockey practice until this week. As a result the first three games of the season have been cancelled. The first game to be played will probably be with the University of Maine in Brunswick on February 15, as the team will not be definitely picked and in practice until that time. A second, and probably a practice game with Maine, will be played on Washington's Birthday in Orono. A game with the hockey team of Augusta will probably be played at a later date.

ART BUILDING NOTES
A small object among the very rare personal memorials of the Bowdoin family has just been given to the college by Mrs. Albert Remick of New York. It is a funeral ring given to the Rev. Daniel Rogers of Boston for officiating, on July 17, 1748, at the funeral of Madam Bowdoin, the third wife of the first James Bowdoin. The inscription and ename ling have worn off entirely from the ring which is, in shape and substance, of distinctly fine form.

WALTER CAMP ON FOOTBALL
BELIEVES NEW RULES ARE SUCCESSFUL.

Below we print Walter Camp's views on football as played under this year's rules. As Mr. Camp is a member of the Rules Committee, his opinion on the matter is worth comment.

"When the new rules were first introduced two years ago, there were many who contended that it was too much to require of any team that they should gain ten yards in three downs and the prediction was that 'no-score' games would put an end to the ten-yard rule in short order. The contrary has proven true, and already there are those who would like to see the forward pass more restricted, relying upon it as it was a year ago, or even eliminating it altogether and keeping the on-side kick and ten-yard rule. What was needed in the game was primarily to lessen the value of possessing the ball and this the ten-yard rule achieved. With its introduction there went out all the close hammering mass plays which were good for two or three yards on a down but no more. The American college, whether player or spectator, does not care for a game in which the element of chance is paramount. He likes to see or play a game where hard work counts, and a game where definite planning secures a well-appreciated result. For this reason he does not care for the unlimited forward pass which can now be tried without severe penalty on first and second down. Throwing the ball around indiscriminately may be the last resort of a weak or inferior team and as such is unsatisfactory.

"In other respects, like the separation of the line of scrimmage and the improvement in the general conduct and spirit of the play, the rules have fully justified themselves and have rendered the game more popular than ever."

Mr. A. M. Goodwin, sporting editor of the Portland Sunday Telegram and a well-known Dartmouth man, in an article on summer baseball which appeared in the issue of December 29, makes the following statement of interest to Bowdoin men: "I believe that Bowdoin with its self-regulated system of athletics, practically undictated to by an association, is as near common sense purity in athletics as any college in the country, and I do not believe that one of fifty Bowdoin men would support the abolishment of summer baseball."

To Bowdoin Men

A PERSONAL WORD FROM THE PRESIDENT

The college men who obtain the best temporary or permanent positions in July are usually the ones who start looking for them in January. Before you get entangled with any expensive or inefficient employment agency or before you start on a more or less aimless individual search for the position you desire, it will be worth your while to learn about our Co-operative Membership. We are an organization of college men for college men. We can save you time, travel, trouble and money by furnishing you with accurate information while in college and by securing you a desirable position or business opportunity when out of college. There are no involved contracts, no costly commissions, no red tape, no strings attached to our service.
We think we solve an old problem in a new and better way.
Will you let us prove it to you? Just write for particulars, stating your needs.

BOWDOIN Minstrels

Annual Appearance of the Show for the Benefit of the Baseball Team, in Town Hall, Wednesday Evening

The great dramatic event of Brunswick for the year occurred in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening, in the Annual Baseball Show, presenting the "Bowdoin Minstrels." The show was snappy and bright from start to finish. The work of the chorus was particularly fine. The jokes were clean, and the Orient is glad to note that they avoided the personal tone, which in some years has marred the whole minstrel performance so much. A large crowd filled the hall and a generous sum was realized for the baseball team.

Shortly after eight the curtain rose. Thirty men in dress suits were seated on bleachers on the stage with Crowley, '08, as Interlocutor in the centre. On the ends were the six special fun-makers, with black faces and grotesque costumes. College and fraternity banners covered the walk, and a most striking and unique setting was given.

Following the Overture, R. W. Smith rendered a very catchey coon-song, "Who, Me?" Brown followed with a rollicking song, "Colon Town," and Draper then sang "Much Obliged to You." Stone sang "Yo Ho, Little Girls, Yo Ho." The Local Hits by Lee and Shehan quite brought down the house. The quartet selections were particularly pleasing and enjoyable. Boyce gave a coon-song. The ballad by Whitmore, '11, "That's What the Rose Said to Me," was most sincerely appreciated by the audience, this being the first time that Mr. Whitmore's voice has been heard in Brunswick. The song given by Mr. Cox was one of the prettiest and catchiest of the evening, and most exceptionally well rendered. There certainly was a shout of merriment when Tommy Given and his six little girls appeared for the finale, giving "So Long Mary" and the curtain closed on the first part.

Kendrie opened the Olio with a violin selection. The audience received his efforts with appreciation and forced him to extend his number to several encores. As the next number in the Olio "Mike" indicated that as a witty story teller he had lost none of the cunning that distinguished him as reader of the Glee Club.

Joyce, alias "Box Car Jimmy," doubled up the audience again and again with his witty monologue.

Those who came with the expectation of seeing an ordinary, stereotype club swinging act were treated to a decided surprise by Morrill. The evolutions undertaken by him brought well-deserved applause from the spectators.

In closing the Olio Thewlis undertook a task never before attempted in a Bowdoin minstrel show. He successfully extricated himself from all the handcuffs with which he was challenged. This number called forth the well-deserved admiration of his audience and served as a fitting finale for what had proved itself a well-balanced and entertaining college minstrel show. Following the performance, dancing was enjoyed until midnight.

The hard and conscientious work of Mr. Toothaker in directing and overseeing the show certainly deserves special mention. "Bob" has directed the last three Bowdoin performances now, and his untiring efforts, universal cheerfulness, original ideas and good taste are appreciated by all and account to a great degree for the successful Bowdoin performances. Nor should we forget to render credit to Tefft and Webster, the manager and assistant manager, who have had all the labor and worry for the past two months. The following was the complete program of the performance:

MEETING OF THE TRUSTEES AND OVERSEERS

The trustees and overseers of the college met in Hubbard Hall Monday afternoon to remove technical difficulties in the way of the admission of the college to the benefit of the Carnegie foundation for the advancement of teaching. All the difficulties were removed and the way made clear for raising $50,000 that remains to be procured to secure the $200,000 already pledged. The work of raising the last $50,000 will now begin in earnest.

The Board elected Ralph B. Stone, instructor in physics and mathematics, for one year and Hudson B. Hastings, assistant professor of surveying and drawing, for three years. They made provision for additional instructors in chemistry and biology, thus completing the plan adopted last June to strengthen the college in mathematics and sciences, that a student can take both the A.B. degree at Bowdoin and the technical course at an institution like the M. I. T. by combining four years at Bowdoin and two at such an institution. The members of the board of trustees present were: President William DeWitt Hyde, Brunswick; Rev. John S. Sewall, Bangor; Hon. Joshua L. Chamberlain, Brunswick; Hon. William L. Putnam, Portland;Gen. Thomas H. Hubbard, New York City;Gen. Oliver O. Howard, Burlington, Vt.; Edward Stanwood, Brookline, Mass.; and Hon. L. A. Emery, Ellsworth.

B. A. A. RELAY TEAM

At three o'clock, Saturday afternoon the third and last of the series of trials to determine the men who shall compose the B. A. A. Relay Team was held on the straight-away between the Kappa Sigma House and the Medical Building. Two other less important trials had already been held, and the average time of each man in all three, not his fastest time in one of these trials, determined his ability. The men who ran were: Anderson, Medic; Colbath, ’10; Simmons, ’09; Burton, ’09; Stone, ’09; Buck, ’09; Deming, ’10; Timberlake, ’08; Morss, ’10; Edwards, ’10; Ballard, ’10; H. K. Hine, ’11; Kaulbach, ’11; S. W. Pierce, ’11; Allen, ’11.

The men who will compose the team are: Atwood, Colbath, and Deming. Simmons, Stone and Ballard tied for fourth place and will run off the tie tomorrow afternoon. As has been already announced, the team is to run Tufts this year, and from the hard training and faithful practice of the men, as well as the efficient and experienced coaching of Capt. Atwood and Coach Morrell, the team ought to win. A good backing by the student body should be shown at the meet! Manager Brewster announces that he has obtained reduced rates of $5.50 for the round-trip ticket. These tickets may be purchased at the Brunswick station. A good opportunity is offered to the Massachusetts men in college—those from Boston and the vicinity in particular, to visit their homes and to witness the meet on the same trip. The team will probably take the 11 A.M. train, February 1. Tickets for the meet may be purchased at Mechanics Hall, where it is to be held on the evening of February 1. The students who cannot go can prove their loyalty by writing their names on the subscription paper which is being circulated to send the team.

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

Mr. Edward Stanwood, ’01, editor of the Youths’ Companion, addressed a meeting of the Association Monday evening. He spoke in regard to a college man’s choosing his vocation and said in brief:

“Leave the choosing of a profession to time and chance. Do not consider college life (as formerly was done) an equipment for any vocation in particular, but as a means of evolving the nature of your life work. Specialize afterward if you have the time, money, and ability for hard work. A few of the things which should be brought into consideration in choosing your profession are your temperament as an individual, the opportunity which is offered you for study, your willingness to sacrifice, the scope and chance of your prospective profession and the locality in which you will employ it. But, above all, your temperament and tastes as an individual should govern almost exclusively your choice.”

Mr. Stanwood then went on to enumerate, in their order of importance, the professions with their attractions, advantages, pleasures, possibilities and scope. The professions of editorial work, ministry, medicine, law, teaching, librarian and science he carefully touched upon and reviewed.

The largest attendance of the year was shown at this meeting, over a hundred men being present.

THE ROMANIA

The Romania held its second meeting last Monday, at the home of Prof. E. W. Brown on Federal street. A pleasant evening was passed in the discussion of Papal and French politics, the Italian opera singers of the day, and many other topics concerning modern Europe. It was decided to hold the next meeting soon after the opening of the second semester. Those present were: Prof. H. Johnson, Prof. Brown, Prof. Sills, Davis, ’08; Gould, ’08; Ham, ’08; Huse, ’08; Ricker, ’08; Carter, ’09; Cushing, ’09; Hurley, ’09; and Stahl, ’09.

Shop Work In accordance with our often repeated policy that Bowdoin should devote the broadening of its course along scientific lines, we desire once more to recall the great need and advantage in the re-establishment of a shop work course. Five years ago a practical course in shop work was given, which was popular and filled a real demand. There are facilities in regard to room at present. The college is already supplied with a number of excellent machines. To a man who is taking a college course with the idea of later going into scientific study, the more practical help he can gain in college, the more he is fitting himself. The establishment of a course that would give a man some real training in shop work would be exceedingly advantageous. Possibly under our present condition, it might be necessary to keep the course limited at first, perhaps election only for juniors and seniors, or seniors alone, but in connection with the courses now offered in mechanical drawing, geometry and surveying, it would be much appreciated, and is the next logical step. Even if such a course be made small at the start, the college body would be exceedingly glad to see the introduction at no distant date.

To John and Others The Orient notes that John Irwin is back again. Everybody notes it and everybody is glad. I'll tell you, John, we were just a bit worried when we thought you weren't coming back again! It is distinctly noticeable that the baseball interests and football interests have learned that it does not pay to fool around with trial coaches. If Bowdoin is to have a man to coach her team, we want to have a man who knows his business. The finest examples of coaches that Bowdoin has ever had are: Irwin for baseball, Ross McClave for football, and Lothrop for track. We have lost Lothrop; we cannot hope to always be able to retain these other men, but when we cannot get them, may the athletic authorities at Bowdoin be not so blind to the real interests of the college as to think that anybody could do what these men have done for us! We have tried in past years, and may we in future years never experiment in coaches. John, we're glad you are to be with us again. We appreciate you, we know what you've done, we know what you can do, and we know you'll do the best! Here's to you, John!

Our Trophies Bowdoin has many trophies, and now that action has been taken toward supplying a suitable place to keep them, it is time to get them all together and bring their inscriptions up to date. The purpose of this editorial is to state how matters now stand, in the hope that the managers of the various 'varsity teams will take the trouble to have the cups of their former teams properly engraved.

The action which has been taken in regard to supplying a place for the trophies, is that the athletic council has voted to use the first twenty-five dollars which shall be turned in, to buy a suitable glass trophy-cabinet. Further than this, Professor Little, who for several years has kindly taken care of the cups, and had them cleaned with part of the library fund, has offered as a trophy cabinet, the upper central hallway of the library, in the middle of which are now exhibited some of the old Bowdoin catalogues and papers. Our first trophy-cabinet will probably be placed at the south side of the hall, while our two rowing banners and the New England Athletic Association banner of 1899, perhaps may be hung from the ceiling above it.

The cups we now have are:

The Bowdoin Navy Championship cup, presented by the class of '75 (lacking an inscription in regard to any winner); the cup won by the class of '89 in the Athletic Exhibition of 1888 (lacking an inscription, but accompanied by a card); the cup won by the class of '95 for the best class record at Field Day (lacking an inscription, but accompanied by a card); the cup won by the class of '96, for winning the first indoor meet; the cup given in 1897, to be held by each successive winner of the indoor meets, now held by 1909 (lacking any place for inscription, but on the stand of which there is ample opportunity for a row of little silver plates bearing the numerals of the winning classes); the cup for the winner of the class drills at the indoor meets, now held by 1910, but on which only classes win-ing it three times are allowed to engrave their numerals; the cup presented by the class of '90 to be held by each winner of the class baseball series, now held by 1910 (but which has not been engraved since won in 1902 by '99); the Bowdoin Tennis Association cup, awarded annually to the winner of the Bow-doin Tennis tournament, now held by Hyde,
'08 (but not engraved since 1897, when won by Ives, '08); and the football cup to be awarded annually to the football player, whether of the first or second team, who shows the greatest improvement in all-round kicking, now held by M. A. Webber, '07, (not engraved, or as yet awarded for this season).

From among these cups which are awarded for excellence in athletics within the college, there is one cup which is missing, this is the "Punting Cup," formerly awarded annually to the best football punter in Bowdoin, the award to be decided by a special contest.

Besides these, the intercollegiate cups which Bowdoin holds are: Four tug-of-war cups, won severally in '80 from Colby, in '90 from Bates, in '92 from the "Medicals," and in '97 again from Colby; the Maine Intercollegiate Athletic Association cup, to belong to the college winning the greatest number of State meets between 1895 and 1904, of which Bow-doin won nine (not engraved on the ownership or 1904 plate); the Maine Intercollegiate Tennis cup for the winner of the singles in the State tournament, to belong to the college winning it three times, won by Bowdoin in '93,
'94, and '96; and another cup won on the same conditions in '03, '04, and '06; the Southward cup for the runner-up in the singles in the State tournament, to belong to the college win-ing it three times, won by Bowdoin in '92,
'93, and '96; the Maine Intercollegiate Tenn's cup for the winner of the doubles in the State tournament, to belong to the college winning it three times, won by Bowdoin in '92, '93, and '94; and another cup won on the same conditions in '03, '04, and '06. All these tennis cups are correctly engraved, but there is missing a cup which according to the Tennis Association constitution should belong to Bowdoin for winning the doubles in '96, '97, and '99; and there is also a new cup to be held for a year by the winners of the doubles in the State tournament, and to belong to the college winning it three times, which was won last spring by Hyde, '08, and Ham, '08, but which has not yet been received from the Intercolgiate Association.

This shows just how matters stand in regard to our cups, and if the managers of the various teams will take charge of the engraving and the procuring of the missing cups, the Orient will gladly furnish all necessary data.

In addition to these cups we now have one football, representing the championship of 1904, and we earnestly solicit from former and present victorious captains or managers, the footballs or baseballs which they may hold as mementoes, and which if sent to Doctor Whitttier will be properly inscribed, and used to start what we hope will be a long series of trophies of the championships and victories that fall to old Bowdoin.

Comment In its weekly "Bulletin of Complaint," the Orient feels compelled to discover the evident thoughtlessness of some of the students in regard to the treatment of college property and in particular to disparage the lack of respect for the chapel which the recent episode of the advertising elephant so plainly indicates. We all love our college and we ought to show our regard for it even in such a small way as to evince an evidence of outward respect for its property. The chapel, however, should be particularly sacred to Bow-doin men—not because the bell in its tower has so often rung in tones of triumph for victories in athletics, nor especially that the memory of so many loyal Bowdoin sons has sanctified it, but because of the nature of the hall, as an appropriate place to offer the simple morning exercises which begin every weekday of our college life.

SUNDAY CHAPEL

Our fourth college preacher this year, Rev. Edward F. Sanderson of Providence, R. I., conducted chapel on Sunday, using for his text the saying in which Christ likens himself to a door for humanity, he said in brief:

"A great many men are doors for others, as, for example, teachers, who are doors leading into the realms of thought and learning. Christ is the great, universal door which opens into realms of happiness, disclosing to men the higher life, and revealing to them eternal truths. Christ is also the musician who brings forth irresistible strains from the battered and apparently worthless harp, as he inspires to harmony battered and sorrow-shaken souls of men. Both harp and soul were silent or in discord until the mighty musician breathed upon the strings."

Kendrie, '10, opened the service with a violin solo. After the address, a selection was sung by a quartet consisting of McGlone, '10; Kendrie, '10; Brown, '09; and A. L. Stone, '10.

In the evening Dr. Sanderson conducted a questionnaire in the chapel, answering questions which are of vital and continual interest to college men. There were about 50 students in attendance.

Negative: Ginn, Hinckley. Presiding officer, Stahl; judges, Professor F. E. Woodruff, Mr. H. B. Hastings, Mr. P. H. Timberlake. The affirmative was awarded the debate.

It may be of interest to some of the students to learn that, at a national meeting of the Y. M. C. A., held a few weeks ago in Washington, a man of my creed was voted to be ineligible to office in a college Y. M. C. A. The ineligibility of all except Evangelists to hold office in a city Y. M. C. A. was, however, again voted to be.

The chief event of the week, beside the meeting of the trustees and overseers, was the moving of a small farmhouse from a point about two miles down the Harpswell road, to a place on Page street in the rear of the Beta Theta Pi House. The house was dragged on two trees for runners by seventeen pairs of horses and eight yoke of oxen, and when once started it moved at the rate of a fast walk, breaking any branches, telegraph poles or wires that happened to be in the way.

Mr. Charles F. Thomas, Jr., who has been teaching at the Highland Military Academy, Worcester, Mass., was recently chosen principal of Charleston (Mass.) High School. There were seventeen other applicants for the position.

To Bowdoin Men

A PERSONAL WORD FROM THE PRESIDENT

The college men who obtain the best temporary or permanent positions in July are usually the ones who start looking for them in January. Before you get entangled with any expensive or inefficient employment agency or before you start on a more or less aimless individual search for the position you desire, it will be worth your while to learn about our Co-operative Membership. We are an organization of college men for college men. We can save you time, travel, trouble and money by furnishing you with accurate information while in college and by securing you a desirable position or business opportunity when out of college. There are no involved contracts, no costly commissions, no red tape, no strings attached to our service. We think we solve an old problem in a new and better way. Will you let us prove it to you? Just write for particulars, stating your needs.

NEW YORK ALUMNI ASSOCIATION MEETING

Alumni of Bowdoin College met at their thirty-fourth annual dinner in the American dining room of the Manhattan Hotel, last Monday night. H. H. Pearce, vice-president of the association, presided, and there were speeches by Prof. Henry L. Chapman, who represented the college, Gen. Thomas H. Hubbard, George H. Putnam, W. H. McElroy, John J. Wight and David R. Porter.

The officers elected for the ensuing year are: Dr. Warren O. Plimpton, president; F. R. Upton, Dr. Charles Jewett, George Tillson, Edward T. Little and Albert S. Ridley, vice-presidents; Dr. H. D. Foster, corresponding secretary; F. H. Dillingham, secretary; E. B. Merrill, treasurer; Percy W. Brooks, E. H. Sykes, Frederick B. Smith, Joseph B. Roberts and William Powers, executive committee.

Prof. Chapman was the first speaker, after the college hymn had been sung by all standing. He told the Alumni that while there had been changes at Bowdoin, as an historical institution the college remained secure in the affection of her sons and was sending out a great honorable body of young men to make their mark.

Gen. Thomas H. Hubbard spoke relative to a $50,000 gift by Andrew Carnegie, and recent action taken by the overseers of the Maine institution with a view to obtaining the benefit of the Carnegie fund for retired professors.

Gen. Hubbard’s optimistic view of the financial situation at Bowdoin was very encouraging to the Alumni, and his enthusiasm spurred them to greater activity in the interests of their Alma Mater. Referring to the general educational board and its offer of $59,000 to Bowdoin provided the college raises $200,000 before April 1 of this year, Gen. Hubbard pointed out the necessity of combined and quick effort on the part of all the Alumni. He told how Andrew Carnegie agreed to give $50,000 to found a scholarship in memory of his old friend, Thomas B. Reed.

A matter of great importance to all those who attended the dinner was Gen. Hubbard’s explanation of the manner in which Bowdoin became eligible to share with other institutions the benefits of the Carnegie fund for retired professors. Although Bowdoin has always been non-sectarian, it has had on its books for many years records of funds with a religious restriction attached to them.

When the question of eligibility first arose the Bowdoin authorities furnished to the trustees of the Carnegie fund a list of all the donations the institution received and the conditions attached to each.

The Carnegie trustees found in the provisions of the $50,000 Stone professorship of moral and intellectual philosophy an indication of sectarianism. In connection with the professorship it was stipulated that so long as a majority of the board of overseers were of the Congregational faith Bowdoin should enjoy the use of the fund, but that when Congregationalists were in the minority in the board the fund should be used by the Andover Theological Seminary. Gen. Hubbard, as one of the overseers, took the position, some time ago, that the construction of the restriction should be that Bowdoin turn over to the Andover institution the fund in question when Congregationalists were in the minority in the board, but not be compelled to restrict its selection of professors or overseers.

The Carnegie trustees insisted that the original idea was to always keep Congregationalists in the majority, but Gen. Hubbard insisted that such was not the case.

Bowdoin, however, has agreed to turn the fund over to Andover, although Gen. Hubbard wanted it understood that the officers of the institution did not consider that the spirit of the Carnegie fund was violated under the old arrangement. It was simply considered necessary to meet every requirement of the Carnegie trustees.

The speakers appeared in the order above mentioned.
WASHINGTON ALUMNI BANQUET

Annual Meeting of Washington Association Last Wednesday

The Raleigh Hotel was the center of a distinguished gathering, the occasion being the twenty-sixth annual banquet of the Bowdoin College Alumni Society of Washington. Chief Justice Fuller of the United States Supreme Court presided, but soon retired, and Senator Frye of Maine, the vice-president of the society, officiated in his stead. Gen. Ellis Spear, of the class of '58, was the toastmaster.

The guest of honor was Prof. Henry L. Chapman, of the faculty. Prof. Chapman made an address which was elegant in diction and replete with all that was dear to the heart of the Bowdoin man. He brought greetings from President Hyde of Bowdoin who recently returned from abroad restored to health and fit for duty. "The college," said Prof. Chapman, "has a larger number of students than ever before; funds are coming in from various sources, and there need never be a fear that old Bowdoin will fail to continue her good work and make her impress upon progressive manhood."

He expressed his keen delight in the beauties of the Congressional Library and the evident fulfillment of its purpose. "The millions invested there," said he, "were not expended alone to produce a beautiful building and fill it with rare and costly books and works of art, but for the higher and better education of our citizens, for the numberless readers who in the course of years may be seen at the desks.

"So Bowdoin College, with its imposing buildings and lovely campus, is not alone for the eye of the visitor, but for those who enter its halls in search of knowledge, the students from all sections, and even the Washington colored boy who was recently enrolled as a freshman, may say to himself, 'All these are for me."

Prof. Chapman referred to the biography of William Pitt Fessenden, recently published, as a book to be read by every Bowdoin man. "If," said he, "the college had done nothing more than to educate this truly great American, it has proved its right to existence in the forces of progress and education.

"But her great sons and Alumni are not all of the past," he said. "I am proud to have the opportunity to greet a Bowdoin man as chief justice of the Supreme Court of the United States; another, Senator Frye, as president pro tempore of the Senate, and others as useful members of Congress.

"In the helmet-shaped State that guards our Northeastern frontier, looking off Minerva-like with clear shining eyes to the rising sun, there is nothing of more worth and beauty than Bowdoin College, which for more than one hundred busy, patient years has been the expounder of truth, the teacher of righteousness and loyalty, the champion of freedom and the nursery of brave, wise and faithful men; and, best of all, for most of us who sit at this table—the mother of us all."

Mr. Samuel Fessenden, who has recently returned from a residence of five years in Shanghai, where he was one of the few American lawyers admitted to practice before the courts, spoke at length of the esteem in which this country is held by the Chinese, although recent disclosures in the field of high finance, he said, had led to questionings among the people there as to our business integrity. He found no evidence, he said, of hostility in Japan toward this country.

Referring to Mr. Fessenden's remarks, Senator Frye spoke of the recent passage by the Senate of the resolution to restore to China a large part of the indemnity awarded in connection with the Boxer disturbances.

Col. A. L. Varney was another speaker, and addresses largely reminiscent and replete with humorous allusions to college days, of more interest to the Alumni than to the general reader, were also made by D. S. Alexander, Marshall P. Cram, Representative Charles E. Littlefield, who was recently made an LL.D. by the college; Francis M. Hatch, formerly minister to Hawaii; Fred C. Stevens, William Frye White and others.

At a late hour the proceedings were brought to a close by the singing of "Bowdoin Beata," "Phi Chi," and "Let Children Hear the Mighty Deeds."

The officers of the Bowdoin Alumni Society of Washington are: Chief Justice Melville E. Fuller of the United States Supreme Court, president; Senator W. P. Frye and Amos L. Allen, vice-presidents; William Frye White, corresponding secretary; Rev. Frank Sewall, recording secretary; Gen. Ellis Spear, treasurer; D. S. Alexander, Dr. W. Pulsifer, H. L. Prince, Gen. Ellis Spear, William Frye White and Chief Justice Fuller, executive committee.

BASEBALL

A Little Look Ahead Towards Spring

The recent trip of John Irwin, who spent last week getting a line on new material, has aroused interest in our baseball prospects for the coming season. Of last year's victorious team, which won the entire Maine College series and wound up the season by defeating Harvard at Cambridge, Lawrence, catcher, and George Bower, short stop, have graduated. Abbott, who covered left field, although still in the medical school, is ineligible, having played four years. Sparks, one of the nerviest pitchers that ever donned a Bowdoin uniform, has left college. Files is now the only experienced twirler in college and the bulk of the box work will necessarily fall upon him.

Captain Stanwood, who covered first base last season, will return to his old position at third. There are several candidates for the initial bag, of whom W. Clifford, '11, who captained Lewiston High School team last season, seems the most promising.

Claude Bower, who played third on last season's team, is candidate for catcher, as are Byles, '11, and Draper, '10.

Manter, '09, will again be found at second. Black, '11, is also making a strong bid for this place.

Lawliss, '11, of Houlton, and Donnelly, '11, an old Bangor High man, are the two most promising candidates for short stop.

McDade, '09, is sure of his regular position in center, and Caldwell, '11, captain of last season's Hebron team, ought to make good in left field. Hayes, '08, and Sanborn, '08, are also good men.

The most serious problem that Irwin will face is that of developing a twirler able to do a fair share of the box work. Harris, '09, who won his letter as substitute outfielder and change pitcher, gives promise, as do Hobbs, '10, McLachlin, '10, and Scammon, '09, who twirled for the second last year.

The schedule for the coming season includes games with Williams, Brown, Harvard, Princeton, and two games with Dartmouth and Tufts.

The New York trip, inaugurated last year, will again take place during the Easter recess. This trip is of vast benefit to the team and will doubtless become a feature of every schedule. The Orient extends congratulations on the excellent schedule which has been arranged.

B. A. A. MEET

The following men will leave on the 7:27 train for Boston, Saturday morning, to take part in the B. A. A. meet in Mechanic's Hall, that evening: Atwood, Ballard, Colbath, Deming; Edwards, Morrill, Simmons and Stone. The first four will be pitted against Tufts in the relay race, Simmons acting as alternate. Edwards will compete in the high jump and 40-yard hurdles; Stone and Simmons in the quarter-mile novice, while Morrill will compete in the weight events.

MASSACHUSETTS CLUB MEETING

Last Saturday evening the Massachusetts Club met at the Alpha Delta Phi House with Messers. McLaughlin, Robinson, Stephens, R. D. Morss, P. B. Morss, and Kellogg. The meeting was called to order by President Burton and after transacting some business, he introduced Professor Hastings, as speaker of the evening. Professor Hastings gave a most interesting and entertaining talk on the numerous courses at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He outlined each course and gave the demand that there was for those who had completed the course and in many instances gave the salary of those in business. After the talk Prof. Hastings was made an honorary member of the club and the meeting adjourned for refreshments and an informal discussion on the subject of the evening.

Notice to Competitors

The Orient has already printed several "Notices to Competitors"—and with but little effect, to all appearances, and realities. The work of the Sophomores competing for editorial positions continues to be admirable, but the diminishing interest and lack of any real endeavor on the part of the Freshmen is deplorable and will be, unless matters change, fatal to their making the board. The Orient does not expect them to do any exorbitant amount of work, and only that which can be done faithfully with a reasonable amount of time and effort, yet not one of the half-dozen Freshmen competing for the board is maintaining even this standard of qualification. The unique position, already editorially referred to, of the staff of a college publication, composed entirely of men from the three upper classes appears to be an approaching fact; which means the ultimate decline or discontinuance of the paper. For how can the Orient reasonably adopt to its staff men, who are now doing very indifferent work, and expect them to do justice to the paper and to the college after they become members of the board? Such lack of interest as has been shown by undergraduates trying for editorial position on the Orient this year is probably unprecedented! There are now but seven more issues of the Orient before the new members are elected, yet any enterprising man in the Freshman class stands an excellent show of making the board if he can evince the elements of a newspaper man backed by the virtue of ability for hard work! The Orient would also like to see men from the Medical School enter the contest, as a still closer relationship between the men of both departments, and a keener interest in the activities of both would be unquestionably furthered by closer and more complete accounts of news from the Medical School in the columns of the college newspaper.

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

Hon. Herbert M. Heath of Augusta addressed a meeting of the Christian Association, on the subject of a "College Man's Choosing His Profession," Monday evening. His address in brief was as follows:

The old college curriculum was designed to turn out great ministers, but that of the present day is intended to develop men to the broadest and noblest manhood. Thus the college man of the present day has the greatest duty in the world to fulfill. In politics—service of the State and country, the broadest opportunity is offered a man of development to display his talents in the service of fellow-man and—God. No man in State service lives up to the fulness of his manhood unless he serves his State to the best of his ability.

From his broad outlook in life the college man is better able to see where reforms are needed and to make them after he sees them. The clergyman is offered the best opportunity for immediate service to the world, yet the lawyer who is devoted to the noblest purposes of his profession—the search for truth, can from a philosophical point of view, at least, better serve his State. Thus all the discipline, knowledge, strength, received here in college is of inestimable value to the man who is to serve his State to the best of power. Every man should devote a part of his life, at least, to practical politics, aside from a continued theoretical interest in them. The greater the talents with which he is endowed, the more the need that he shall make his personality a living force in the history of his people. There is too little blood to carry the intellect of the twentieth century! In journalism, another great field for service is open to a man; but journalists, unlike lawyers and politicians, are born, not made. Whatever your situation, location, or business, make the Bowdoin spirit—love of duty—the watchword of your career!

COURSES IN EDUCATION

Men who would like to take Education I., in case this course is given next semester, are requested to give their names to Professor Foster at once.

Seniors who expect to teach, and any men who have taken Education I., who would like to take an advanced course next semester in case such a course is given, are requested to give their names to Professor Foster as soon as convenient.

LATIN 7—A course in Virgil, open to Seniors, Juniors, and Sophomores. The course may be taken by men who have had no Latin in college. The Aenid is to be read entire, and the work of the class will consist partly in translations and partly in reports on assigned topics. There will also be frequent lectures in the course, which will discuss such topics as Epic Poetry, Life of Virgil, Virgil in the Middle Ages, Virgil and Dante, Virgil in the English Poets, and the Translations of Virgil into English Verse and Prose. The hours for the course which have not yet been definitely decided, will probably be Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, at 8.30.

The next issue of the Orient will be on the first Friday of the Second Semester.

The Editor.
Musical Club trips begin next semester. There will be no gym. work during exams. Reports in French III. were due last Monday. Shaw, '03, and Spollett, '02, were in chapel Sunday. President Hyde was in Bangor the first of the week. Prof. Edwards granted adjourns in Econ. I., Tuesday. Thomas, '07, is at the Kappa Sigma House for a few days. Make-up examinations were held in History I., Wednesday. There has been relay team practice in the gym the past week. The class in surveying took their final exam. Tuesday morning. Boynton, '10, got a ducking while skating on the river last Sunday. The central path on the campus was used by the relay team last week. The fire in Portland Sunday night was witnessed by many of the students. The Glee and Mandolin Clubs sat for their pictures at Webber's Tuesday. Ballard, '10, entertained his father at the Kappa Sigma House a few days this week. Hiwale, '09, occupied the pulpit of the Congregational church in Saco last Sunday. All themes in English III. which are to count on the semester rank must be in this week. At the trials last Saturday, Ballard made fourth man on the relay team and Simmons alternate. All late themes in English III., excused by the secretary of the faculty, must be in before tomorrow night. All those who desire positions for the summer as "waitresses" are requested to apply to the Registrar. Oxnard, '11, has started a tailor repair shop and will be glad to receive all kinds of mending. Prices reasonable. The semester examination in surveying, which was to have come Monday evening, was held Tuesday morning by vote of the class. Several of the fellows jumped the freight to Portland recently. Clad in heavy boots, corduroy trousers, and sweaters, they hired a box and attended the theatre. "Mike's" new spring samples are in and he wants to transform seedy Freshmen into well-groomed college men. Drop in and look over his samples of stylish spring goods. Kaulback, '11, has been chosen to take the heroine's part in the Dramatic Club to take the place of Pearson, '11, whose studies prevent his making the trips. Rehearsals begin again with the opening of the semester and the manager has received many good offers in regard to trips. Many students are planning to spend a few days at home between the semesters. Mr. O. F. Herrick of the Fisk Teachers' Agencies discussed the subject of teaching with the students in the Delating Room of Hubbard Hall, yesterday evening. By the death of Morris K. Jesup, Commander Robert E. Peary loses a staunch friend and supporter. Mr. Jesup was president of the Peary Arctic Club and backed Peary on many of his Arctic trips. A team composed of Hughes, g.; Wight, b.; Abbott, Dresser and Pearson, rushes, played the Bath Iron Works' team on Goddard's Pond, South Bath, last Saturday afternoon, winning easily by the score of 10-0. The Freshmen, who have, up to this time, declared their intention of trying for the position of Assistant Manager of the Quill, are: Robbins, '11, and Peary, '11. All men who wish to compete are requested to hand in their names at once to Manager L. F. Timberlake, or to Assistant Manager Wing. H. L. Koopman, the librarian of Brown University, and C. C. Soule, president of the Boston Book Co., were about the college this week. They are making a tour of the colleges and inspecting their libraries with a view to getting ideas for the new library about to be erected at Brown. Mr. Soule is an expert in this kind of work. The volume of the college water supply has been diminished because of the excessive waste of water this year. An expense of over $150.00 (considerably above the average) has been already incurred for this commodity. Members of the Sturgis Commission will doubtless have reason to congratulate themselves on reports of this nature prove prevalent throughout the State! A hockey game has been arranged with Augusta, while two games have been scheduled with Maine. The first, which is here at Brunswick, comes February 15, the day after the Junior Assembly, while the other takes place at Orono, the 22d of February. Several men who are at present ineligible for the team will be eligible next semester, and it is hoped that several new men will turn out. The editor of the ORIENT discovered an anonymous communication placed under his door the first of the week, evidently intended for publication. We would respectfully refer the writer to the statement on the editorial page in regard to "no anonymous manuscript can be accepted." We do not require that names be printed to communications, but it is against the rules of the paper to receive anonymous communications. It is nearly time for interest in the spring athletics to be awakened. The Maine meet is to come at Brunswick this year and we must certainly win on our own field. Let every man who can, come out for track work after spring vacation, for it is only from a large choice of material that a winning team can be picked. Remember, too, that seconds and thirds are important in the winning of the meet. Last year a third place would have tied us with Maine and a second given us the victory. Let us not run the risk of defeat this year from mere lack of material to pick from.
A CORRECTION

Last fall in journalistic extravagance the Orient published a clipping from a Washington daily paper, which contained a highly colored statement in regard to a bequest left by the late Col. Wing to a Miss Rittenhouse of $20,000. It is a matter of regret to us that we should have printed this statement without first verifying it. It is, however, with pleasure that we print the following from President Hyde, which would seem to give the truth in regard to this matter, and to correct the report that was circulated so freely in the papers at that time:

"The statement published in the Orient some time ago about Col. Wing was so far incorrect that in justice to his memory the facts ought to be stated. Col. Wing did leave $20,000 to Miss Rittenhouse, as 'he did to others of the family;' but he never knew her mother until the family came to Bayfield some eighteen years ago, and the three-year-old Kate became his pet.

"Sincerely yours,

"WILLIAM DEWITT HYDE."

BRADBURY DEBATE TRIALS

As a result of the Bradbury Trials, held in Memorial Hall on Wednesday evening, the following men were picked to compete in the Bradbury Prize Debate: Harrison Atwood, 1909, D. J. Ready, 1910, affirmative; W. M. Harris, 1909, J. J. Stahl, 1909, negative. R. O. Brewster, 1909, H. N. Marsh, 1909, G. P. Hyde, 1908, and A. L. Robinson, 1908, were named for further trials, two of whom will be selected to take part in the debate. Owing to the sickness of Prof. Mitchell, who was to act as one of the judges, there were but two judges present, Mr. Foster and Mr. Wheeler.

LINCOLN ACADEMY NOTES

The following books have been recently added to the library: Set of International Cyclopaedia, 18 in number; Natural History; History of Germany; Pronunciation of Ten Thousand Proper Names.

Mr. Edgar O. Achorn of Boston, a graduate of the Academy, has offered medals to the winning team in the debate at Lincoln Academy, to be held in some hall or church, of the Twin Villages.

COMMUNICATION

The Orient prints on request the following communication:—

Middletown, Conn., January 17th, 1908.

To the Editor of the Bowdoin "Orient," Brunswick, Me.

Dear Sir:—On February 7th and 8th, there is to be held a conference in Middletown, Conn., on "The Call of the Ministry to Young Men." At the present time there is a great need of more candidates for the ministry in the Episcopal Church, and this conference will discuss ways and means of setting the call to the ministry before young men, especially college men.

Representatives are expected from the seminaries, colleges, and boys' schools, and some of the most influential clergy of the church are to lead the discussion. The meetings will be held at the Berkeley Divinity School.

Thanking you for the favor, I am,

Very truly yours,

W. BLAIR ROBERTS.

YORK COUNTY CLUB

Monday evening, there was a meeting of the York County Club at the Kappa Sigma House. After a brief business meeting, Prof. K. C. M. Sills addressed the meeting informally on the old customs of the college. His remarks were very much enjoyed by all. Afterward refreshments were served and Professor Sills answered many questions in regard to the former methods of work here at Bowdoin. The next meeting is with Kimball, 10, at the Delta Upsilon House, February 17.

CARNEGIE FOUNDATION

At the chapel exercises Tuesday, President Hyde announced that Bowdoin has been placed on the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. The aim of the Foundation is to provide allowances for teachers in the universities, colleges and technical schools of the three English-speaking countries of North America, and to serve the cause of higher education by advancing and dignifying the profession of the teacher in these higher institutions of learning. All technical difficulties were removed when the trustees offered the fund of $50,000 known as the Stone Professorship of Mental and Moral Philosophy to the Andover Theological Seminary.

This gift is the most important the college has received in recent years, in that it will enable the college to secure and retain the ablest of professors.

The retiring allowances are granted on the basis of age and of length of service. To be eligible to retirement on the ground of age, a teacher must have reached the age of sixty-five and must have been for fifteen years a professor in a higher institution of learning. To be eligible on the ground of length of service, a teacher must have had twenty-five years' service as a professor in a higher institution of learning. It is not necessary that the whole of the service shall have been given in accepted colleges, universities and technical schools.

For an active pay equal to twelve hundred dollars the retiring allowance shall be one thousand dollars, increased fifty dollars for each one hundred dollars of active pay in excess of twelve hundred. In the case of Bowdoin the allowance will be fifteen hundred dollars.

Any person who has been for ten years the wife of a professor in actual service may receive during her widowhood one-half of the allowance to which her husband would have been entitled.

Of the 850 institutions in the United States, calling themselves universities and colleges, only one hundred have satisfied the requirements of the trustees of the Foundation. The gift is of importance to Bowdoin as regards its standing as an institution of learning.

BOSTON ALUMNI MEETING

The Bowdoin Alumni of Boston Hold Their Fortieth Annual Dinner—Banquet Held at the Brunswick—Over 100 Present—Many Significant Speeches by Men Notable in Various Professions.

The loyalty and devotion by which every college claims to bind its sons was nowhere more heartily manifested than by the five score sons of Bowdoin who met, as is customary, in the Maine Room of the Hotel Brunswick on Thursday evening, Feb. 5th, for the fortieth annual dinner of the Boston Association. Simplicity and lack of useless formality were the keynotes of the occasion. The big dining-room was void of decoration and the graduates were seated irrespective of class distinction. "Bowdoin Beata," which was sung standing and without accompaniment, enjoyed the unique distinction of being the only song which was sung during the evening. Sylvester B. Carter, '66, the retiring president, presided and read an appreciative letter from President William DeWitt Hyde, who was unable to be present on account of ill health. President Hyde thanked the Boston Alumni for their many and various suggestions along the line of new departments in physics and mechanical drawing. These departments, although they have not yet been established, are under immediate consideration. In closing, President Hyde again thanked the Alumni for their interest, saying, "Intelligent constructive criticism is one of the greatest favors the alumni of a college can confer upon it."

Professor Henry Leland Charman, '66, spoke for the college. "A college ought to be rich enough," he declared, "to realize its own ideals and at the same time to stand firmly on the ground it belongs. For more than one hundred years our college has been the exponent of truth, the gathering place of scholars and the nursery of wise and faithful men."

Dr. Warren O. Plimpton, '82, president of the New York Alumni Association, said that New Yorkers felt that Boston men thought Bowdoin "the ultimate huckleberry upon the persimmon." In the course of his talk, he put forward a strong plea for more donations.

The next speaker was the Reverend George
A. Gordon, who bears the title of D. D. from Bowdoin, although a Harvard graduate. He said in part, Bowdoin is admired by Harvard men for three reasons; in the first place, the educational ideals of Bowdoin have always been and there is every indication that they always will be of the highest quality, the cosmopolitan spirit of Bowdoin has annihilated her comparative isolation and set her in the heart of the world's interests, and finally "Harvard men admire Bowdoin because she stands above all for character. She holds the intellect of her students and the world intellect for the production of manhood. This is her chief distinction—that she is a maker of men. In this she represents the citizenship of a State unsurpassed in the character of its men, women and youth."

James McKeen, '04, of New York, a lawyer who aided Charles E. Hughes in conducting the insurance investigation, spoke of law as one of the greatest factors in promoting the best in legislation. "We must not think," he said, "all men can be made good and of one mind by the abolition of jailers and the gallows. That is the fundamental fault of Anarchism of today." Mr. McKeen gave warning of some of the dangerous tendencies of the times. "We seem to be heading toward a paternalism which if not checked will be fatal. The time is coming for some other kind of leadership than that of voices crying in a barren wilderness of idealism. We want men of courageous spirit who with impartial arm will shatter the idols of modern materialism."

Dr. Frederic H. Gerrish recounted the chief facts in the history of the Medical School of Maine, saying that its chief claim to the gratitude of the people rests on its having competent general practitioners to a multitude of communities throughout the country. For some years the relation between the college and its medical department have been more intimate than they ever have been before, since the studies of the first year in the Medical School have been on the list of senior electives.

Professor Arlo Bates of the M. I. T., a Bowdoin graduate of '76, spoke on the "True Relation of the College to Literature," saying in part:

"The first duty of a college, as I conceive it, is to teach boys to earn a living. Modern times have established admirable machinery for that purpose; and professional and technical schools are doing their work so excellently that they may be safely trusted to attend to it. Nothing can justify the college for abandoning its position as a leader in public thought to become the slave of public caprice."

"Literature is the record of the highest human wisdom; it is the product of the deepest human experience; the expression of human thought in its moments of greatest illumination. Obviously, by no other means can a college so effectively or so vitally advance the general good as by diffusing an appreciation and a reverence for this choicest heritage of mankind. The ages have declared art to be the most enviable treasure of the race; but to the mass of men today the greatest works of the masters are as meaningless and as valueless as the dandelion in the grass."

Professor Bates maintained that the first duty of a college is to the country at large and that by developing the students to a high intellectual and moral standard the college really did a great work for the country. He defines his ideal college president as follows:

"I am not without appreciation of the need that a president shall have qualifications as a man of affairs, but I believe these to be of less importance than that he be of high scholarly attainments, of a personality winning to the young, and of noble enthusiasms."

He further deplored the fact that work in the classics was being abandoned because many of the methods of teaching them were poor. They have, in his opinion, a major place in education. He says, "We shall probably not live to see the classics take their place in the curriculum again, but our grandchildren will, for the simple reason that nothing can fill their place."

These officers of the association were chosen for the following year: Dr. Dudley A. Sergeant, president; Edwin U. Curtis and Dr. Myles Standish, vice-presidents; H. S. Chapman, secretary; Ellis Speare, Jr., assistant secretary; W. G. Waitt, E. C. Burbank, W. H. Greeley, H. C. Fabyan, R. H. Hinckley, A. B. White and G. C. Purington, executive committee.

Among those present were:

Edward Stanwood, the Rev. J. B. Sewall, '48, the oldest graduate present; H. H. Smith, '54; J. G. Stetson, '54; E. O. Achorn, '81; Dr. J. W. Achorn, '79; C. M. Austin, '87; A. A. Badger, '95; Dr. E. L. Banfield, '81; Boyd Bartlett, '85; F. O. Baston, '75; E. O. Beane, Jt., '04; Judge C. U. Bell, '03; Dr. G. K. Blair, '00; Dr. C. R. C. Borden, '96; F. E. Bradbury, '96; C. C. Bucknam, '93; Dr. N. Call, '69; Dr. H. S. Card, '88; H. S. Chapman, '91; the Rev. W. L. Cole, '81; W. W. Curtis, '82;
ICE HOCKEY

Bowdoin Meets Maine Tomorrow on Whittier Field

Saturday Maine meets Bowdoin in the first hockey game of the year between the two institutions. Although Maine has an exceptionally strong team, in that her last year’s team is intact, and Bowdoin has a practically new team,—the game is certain to abound in sensational plays. Practice has been steady during the week, and Captain Abbott feels confident that the men who compose the team will give a good account of themselves. Dresser, ’09, who has been ineligible thus far this season, expects to be back in the game Saturday. The Orient has been unable to get Maine’s line-up, but Chase, Pray, Lamb and Bagg will probably be on the field, the first being one of Maine’s football stars, the last two being members of last year’s hockey team. The probable line-up for Bowdoin is: Capt. Abbott, Hamburger, Johnson, Dresser or Thompson, forwards; Hughes, cover, point; Wight or Leavitt, point, and Smith, goal.

THE JANUARY QUILL

The New Year’s Quill is distinctively an undergraduate number, for, barring two bits of verse, the entire forty pages are from the pens of undergraduates. Although, in the reviewer’s opinion, every number of the Quill should have one story or essay and one poem by alumni, so much, during the last year, have the editors been obliged to depend upon graduate writers that this increase of student contributions is encouraging.

Four poems, two stories, one essay and one description, besides “Silhouettes” and “Ye Postman,” make an attractive table of contents. The poem, “Memory,” recalls in four lines that ring true the joy of companionship during a “week of sumer evenings by the sea.” It is unfortunate that tlines otherwise musical should be marred by the false rhyme of “gone” and “forlorn.” In vernacular verse of rural New England—the “Biglow Papers,” for example, these two words, like “pine” and “join” in Whittier’s lines, might possibly be made to rhyme but in a less provincial realm of letters, never.

In “Monhegan” the rhyme is correct and the meter regular and harmonious. The thought, too, which the writer suggests, the important part which a Maine island played in the early settlement of the capitalists, has its peculiar charm. However, however, the verse pleases the ear rather than the reason or the imagination. Of course, as Lowell has put it, occasionally in poetry two times two make five, but however much license in reasoning is given to the poet, the pictures he presents should be vivid and consistent. The ordinary Quill reader will find it hard to form any permanent impression of a “light” which is “kindly harbored” which “summons” her “magic grace” and “fuses” into a race a “mood” whose “power” “hurls” a “strength.

Is not the fundamental weakness here vague (phrasing)?

In “To ______”, on the other hand, the picture is noticeably clear and consistent, the parallelism between a life and a star being well kept in every line. The lines also are free from the unconscious insincerity which often characterizes undergraduate verse. The picker of flaws, however, cannot but ask why “Living” in the last line is capitalized. If it is an attempt to elevate the diction, the reviewer can only bid the poet be wary of the false emphasis of capital; but if the line be “continued” on page 13, or “salutary” on page 10, or “Summer” on page 31,

the critic must remind the editors that careless proof-reading is irritating to both Quill writers and Quill readers.

After reading the excellent volume of “Bowdoin

Verse,” published last year by Mr. J. C. Minot, ’96, one would think the imprint every letter of a symbol, or custom connected with the life of our college has found a place in rhyme. There the “Seniors’ Last Chapel,” “King Chapel,” “Hubbard

Hall,” “The Pines,” “Thorndike Oak,” even the “Common Campus Posies” are celebrated in verse.

It seems strange, then, that before this time no Bow-doin poet has chosen for his theme Bowdoin’s motto. In the old days, we know, the motto on the scholar’s book-plate had much significance for him and his friends, for often it suggested his desires and ideals. Thus the temper of Longfell-low’s life and poetry has never been more concisely expressed than in that now famous book-plate motto, Non Clamor sed Amor. No less significant for Bowdoin graduates is the motto from the bookplate of Hon. James Bowdoin—Ut Aquila versus Coelum. What this should mean to every Bowdoin man and to the college as a whole Mr. Isaac Base-sett Choate, ’62, with his accustomed grace, has musically told us in his verses, “Bowdoin’s Motto.”

The first story, “A Lady in Distress,” is the act-between of a practical joke which one student, by donning female attire plays upon another. Though given the first place in the Quill, this is by no means the writer’s best. It contains, to be sure, some

The Carnegie Foundation

The Carnegie Foundation has made a single greater beneficent contribution to Bowdoin within the last few years than that which was made known to the college by President Hyde in chapel last Tuesday morning. Bowdoin is now able to come under the provisions of the Carnegie foundation. It is hardly necessary to remark that this is a distinct honor and advantage to the college. It increases the honor and efficiency of the institution along the most essential lines of its educational work. Better men will be able to be secured and to be retained. Nor has Bowdoin sacrificed any of her ideals or principles in the delay until the present time. All of us as Bowdoin men—alumni, faculty and students—may well congratulate ourselves upon this notable honor.

AnAcknowledgment

The Orient acknowledges with pleasure the kindness of those graduates who have been thoughtful in sending us accounts of the various Alumni Reunions that have recently taken place. To Mr. Roberts in New York, to Mr. Carter of Boston, and to others we declare ourselves indebted and take this opportunity of expressing our thanks. For an editorial board composed wholly of undergraduates the task of reporting alumni activities away from home is always difficult, but it makes us feel as if our efforts were being just a bit appreciated when Alumni remember to help us. We trust that as the only distinct Bowdoin news publication we will be able to report satisfactorily all graduate happenings this year, as we are most eager to do. Again, we thank you.

incisive, vigorous phrasing, but in too many places the English is careless. Was "audience of one" used advisedly? It is barely possible. At all events "could not help but feel" is a bit of newspaper English that will not pass muster, and the coarse ejaculation of "the stoop-shouldered young man" is an attempt at realism that fails. The story has in it enough of movement and incident to hold the reader's attention throughout, but the plot is either pretty flimsy or the details are not well managed. If Clarice Vaughn had really wished to deceive Harland, would she have so quickly "slipped her arm confidingly through his"? Would she have blown cigarette smoke into his face, or suggested a moonlight stroll when no moon was shining? At all events, the density of John Harland, "star halfback and all round athlete," doesn't argue forcibly for the intellectual quickening of athletic training.

In general the undergraduate story-teller may wisely confine his plots to life that he knows intimately; but the "Doom of the Petrels," though a romantic story of daring adventure on the Pacific, has a plot that seems plausible. The language, too, however it might seem to an old tar, to a landlubber appears technically correct. There is at least no "coiling of the keelson" or "reefing of the weather hatch." Indeed, though here and there appears an awkward sentence, in many places the phrasing is noticeably apt. There is a goodly number of sentences worded as well as this: "The gale whipped the crests from the waves, carrying the spray to the trucks." The story also ends at the right time.

John Ruskin, as Mr. Frederic Harrison has so well shown, was a consummate master of English prose, and he was a prose. He not only wrote down beautiful thoughts; he sought to build up a beautiful world. It is this concrete application of his theory, this carrying of his message, exquisitely expressed though it was, into the street, that the writer of "Ruskin's Practical Realism" emphasizes in his short essay. There is not much new thought expressed in the essay and such a phrase as "the liberal donor to certain institutions that seemed imbued with his ideal of economic reform," is too indefinite to be enlightening, but in general the essay is graceful and sympathetic. Readers who recall that Ruskin repudiated all modern science, modern machinery, and modern politics, are likely to take exception to the statements that his realism never permitted him to be blind or flighty and that he never indulged in one-sided speculation.

So full of apt allusions and interesting comments is "The Impressions of Marblehead," that readers will forget they are perusing description, a kind of prose they have generally set down as dry. If we close our ears to the unhappy repetition of "old," the following bit, the best to be found in the whole Quill, at least suggests the touch of a Stevenson.

"But I fancy these old inhabitants are in much the same plight as a wizened old man I saw sunning himself on his door step. I was seeking the old cemetery. 'Will you show me the way to the old graveyard?' said I. 'I will,' he answered, a bit sourly, 'for I'm fast on the way there myself.'"

Every undergraduate should read "Silhouettes," for the first two paragraphs express gracefully and succinctly what the Quill should mean to a Bowdoin student. If in the next eight numbers the Quill approaches the editors' ideals as there made plain, or if indeed it maintains the standard set by the January number, Volume XII will measure up to the excellence of the eleven volumes that have preceded it.

SECOND JUNIOR ASSEMBLY

The second and last Junior Assembly takes place tonight at 8 o'clock. The patronesses are to be Mrs. Hyde, Mrs. Henry Johnson, Mrs. Hastings and Mrs. Woodruff. The committee in charge of the dance consists of Heath, Brewster, Rich, Burton and Brown. As the dance comes on St. Valentine's day there will be a dance appropriate for the occasion. It is hoped that there will be a good number of students present. The music will be furnished by Kendrie's Orchestra. Given, of Brunswick, will be the caterer.

COLLEGE TEA

The second college tea takes place this afternoon from four to six o'clock in the Alumni Room, Hubbard Hall. It will be for the students, their friends and the people of Brunswick. All students are cordially invited to attend. The committee in charge of the tea consists of: Miss Chapman, chairman, Mrs. Woodruff, Mrs. Hutchins, Mrs. Mitchell, and Mrs. Brown.

RALLY COMMITTEE

C. E. Files, 1908, has appointed the following Rally Committee: Walter D. Lee, Nathan S. Weston, William R. Crowley, Francis P. Wight, Joseph M. Boyce, Floyd T. Smith, Harry H. Hayes, Harry W. Purinton, and Arthur H. Ham. The committee will hold its first meeting at the Zeta Psi House, next Monday evening. The Rally will be held about the middle of April.

B. A. A. MEET

Tufts Wins the Relay Race

For the third consecutive year, Tufts won the relay race from Bowdoin in the annual Indoor Meet held by the Boston Athletic Association, February 1. Tufts drew the pole, thus gaining an advantage. Atwood was unable to pass his man at the corners, but finished even with him. Both Denning and Ballard lost a little and Colbath was not able to make it up. Each man did his best. Tufts had a good, fast team. None of the men entered in the other events secured points. Morrill did not get placed in the shot. Edwards in the high jump did 5 ft. 5 3/4 inches, which, with his handicap, made him among the first few. Simmons and Stone in the quarter each got third place in their heats, but only first and second men qualified for the finals.

The Brunswick High School basket ball team defeated Cony High School in Brunswick, Saturday evening, by a score of 19-18.

Many students attended the show in Portland, Monday night, and many more saw the “Dairymaids” in Lewiston, Tuesday.

Bowdoin calendars are now on sale for half price—fifty cents—at the College Book Shop, at Chandler’s or at No. 7 South Winthrop.

Townsend, 10, has been appointed Bowdoin Associate Editor for the Intercaligiate. The position was formerly held by Duddy, ’07.

The members of the Maine Branch of the New England Classical Association were the guests of the College at a dinner at the Hotel Eagle, Friday evening.

Swathmore College, which was offered $1,000,000 on condition of giving up all inter-collegiate athletics, is contemplating changing its character and becoming a girls’ college.

The current issue of Smith’s Magazine contains an article on the work of Abbott Henderson Thayer, also a reproduction of the mural decoration entitled “Florence” in the Walker Art Building.

The Bugle Board held a meeting with Editor Burton at the Delta Kappa Epsilon House on Monday evening. The material for the annual is well under way. The cuts from the photographs and drawings have arrived and the prospects of an early Bugle seem bright.

For the first time, the long-distance squad, on Monday afternoon, took a short run. Colbath, ’10, led the squad. There was a good-sized bunch out: Allen, ’11; Kimball, ’10; Robbins, ’11; Slocum, ’10; Grace, ’10; Ready, ’10; Robinson, ’11; Brown, ’10; Smith, ’09, and Morris, ’10.

Professor Sills has been elected president of the Maine Branch of the New England Classical Association for the ensuing year. Professor Allen Johnson is on the committee on recommendations in regard to the teaching of Greek and Roman History in secondary schools.

Gen. Joshua L. Chamberlain, ’52, will speak in the Christian Association Rooms, Thursday evening, March 5. Gen. Chamberlain was president of the college from 1871-83, and is too well known to require any introduction to Bowdoin men. Everybody should try to hear him.

The following statement, taken from the second annual report of the president and treasurer of the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Learning will interest Bowdoin men: "With Princeton and Bowdoin, Dickinson is the only other American college possessing the distinction of having graduated in arts both a President of the United States and a Chief Justice of the Supreme Court."

"King Pepper," the farcical opera to be presented by the Kennebec Yacht Club, at the Columbia Theatre, Bath, Feb. 13 and 14, was once a Bowdoin production, and 65 students took this excuse for "song and dance" to Augusta and sold out that house in two hours. It was an all-men production and a grand one. "Cy" Denning was the Queen and weighed 220 lbs. Burns, who directed the Bowdoin production, is in charge of the Bath presentation.

Beatrice Herford comes to Brunswick. Perhaps no one is more enthusiastically received by the public now-a-days than Beatrice Herford in her original monologues. One has only to read the Boston papers to learn of her popularity. The large price she commands seemed at one time to make her coming here under the auspices of the Saturday Club impossible, but arrangements have been made and she will give these impersonations in Town Hall at eight o’clock Friday, the 21st. No one who enjoys the keen humour of his own and his neighbor’s frailties and foibles will fail to attend this entertainment.

To Bowdoin students as a whole and to those who think the Quill entirely unworthy of their support, the following clipping from a magazine of one of the larger Western universities may be of interest. "From the quantity of printed matter we cannot judge as to the quality of a magazine, as is proved by a review of the Bowdoin Quill. Although it is one of the smallest of our exchanges, we class it among the very best. Very rarely, indeed, if ever, have we found in it a poor article. Unlike many of the larger magazines, it does not occasionally have to sacrifice quality for quantity. In the November number we found several excellent essays, the most interesting of which to us was the one entitled 'The Usefulness of the Useless.' This number contains no fiction at all but the poetry is of an unusually high order."

PHI CHI INITIATION

The annual initiation of new members into the Phi Chi fraternity of the Medical School took place January 31 in Brunswick.

The third and fourth year men from Portland were present at the occasion but no alumni attended. The following is the list of initiates:

Elmer H. Jackson, Jefferson, Me.; Malford Wilcox, Theophilus, Wakefield, R. I.; Cornelius J. Taylor, Bangor, Me.; Harding Hallock, Lente, So. Thomaston, Me.; Arthur L. Lancaster, Richmond, Me.; Albert

No banquet was held at that time but it was postponed to about the first of April on account of the illness of Dr. Nichols of Boston, who will give an address at that time.

To Bowdoin Men

A PERSONAL WORD FROM THE PRESIDENT

The college men who obtain the best temporary or permanent positions in July are usually the ones who start looking for them in January. There are no involved contracts, no costly commissions, no red tape, no strings attached to our service. We think we solve an old problem in a new and better way. Will you let us prove it to you? SECOND JUNIOR ASSEMBLY

Friday evening in Memorial Hall occurred the second and last of the series of Junior Assemblies. The patronesses on this occasion were: Mrs. William DeWitt Hyde, Mrs. Hudson B. Hastings, Mrs. Henry Johnson and Mrs. Frank E. Woodruff. The committee in charge consisted of Heath, Brewster, Rich, Burton and Brown. The hall was beautifully decorated with banners and flags and appropriately ornamented with large and small red hearts. The affair was a brilliant one, over two hundred people in attendance.

Among the invited were: Miss Charlotte Lowell, Westbrook; Miss Dorothy Foss and Miss Elizabeth Bragg, Woodfords; Miss Mary Dinsmore and Miss Helen Wagg, Lewiston; Miss Marion Harmon, Mrs. Robert Chapman, Miss Louise Malley, Miss Georgie Vales, Miss Helen Cressay, Miss Blanche Lennon, Miss Medora Haskell, Portland; Miss Virginia Woodbury, Miss Frances Little, Miss Louise Weatherell, Miss Sue Winchell, Miss Sara Merriman, Miss Dorothy Johnson, Miss Lula Woodward, Miss Ethel Webb, Miss Belle Smith, Miss Emily Felt, Miss Bertha Stetson, Miss Beatrice Hacker, Miss Gertrude Christopher and Miss Sara Pennell, Brunswick; Miss Mollie Palmer and Miss Madeline Clifford, Bath; Miss Mildred Richards, Miss Kate Richards, Lynn, Mass.; Miss Marion Cobb, Miss Alice Webb and Miss Martha Simmons, Rockland; Miss Rhoda Ashworth, Waldoboro; Miss Blandie Sturtevant, Dixfield; Miss Lynn Phillips, Rutherford, N. J.; Miss Marion Heath, Miss Sara Merrill, and Miss Bertha Flint, Augusta; Miss Ruth Roberts, Fairfield; Miss Luona Sylvester, Bowdoinham; Miss Emilie Creighton, Thomaston; Mrs. Eunice Matthews, Kansas City; Miss Christine Kenison, Miss Maude Tower, Waterville; Miss Muriel, New York; Miss Annie Ross, Kennebunk.

As the dancing stopped promptly at twelve, several impromptu dances were afterwards held in some of the fraternity halls, the most elaborate of which was given at the Zeta Psi House, where dinner was served after the dancing.

PHI CHI DANCE

This evening in Pythian Hall the annual Assembly of the Phi Chi Medical Fraternity will be given. The hall will be appropriately decorated by banners and flags. Given of Brunswick, will cater. The music will be furnished by Kendrie's orchestra.

The patronesses will be Mrs. F. C. Robinson, Mrs. F. N. Whittier, and Mrs. Mitchell of Brunswick.

The committee in charge is composed of H. H. Bryant, E. D. Humphreys, and L. F. Hall of the second year; E. H. Jackson, H. H. Lente of the first year. The third and fourth year men in Portland will attend and a large crowd is expected to be present.

THE QUILL

A Lamentable Circumstance—New System

The Quill is not the lamentable circumstance. From the University of Virginia, from the University of Nebraska and from the University of California come commendations which ought to make Bowdoin justly proud of her representative in the college literary world. The lamentable circumstance is the student body of Bowdoin College who, by their lack of support, have forced the Quill to a point where it is a question of stand by it or the Quill ceases to exist. The Alumni of this college are working for its interests with a devotion comparable only to "The Old Guard." Some of their spirit is needed right here among the undergraduates to back a college organization which, when they came to Bowdoin it was their duty as Bowdoin men, if they want to deserve the name, to stand by and foster, as they would an athletic team, or the fair name of the college itself.

The Quill is now with its back to the wall. In spite of the general notion to the contrary among the so-called Bowdoin men, it takes money to run and print the Quill. A new system has been inaugurated to secure that money. The Quill is now put on a regular subscription basis. That is to say, the manager, Mr. Timberlake, has a subscription book, and those of the undergraduates who desire to take the Quill, will inscribe their names in that book. The Quill will then be sent them for one year. If enough men subscribe, the Quill will continue publication, but if enough men cannot be found with sufficient loyalty to Bowdoin and all that represents Bowdoin to give $1.00 to a distinct department in the Bowdoin undergraduate life, then the Quill will only be known in the future by traditions of its high standards and the universal appreciation with which it was viewed by its contemporaries. So it is hoped that the men will not dodge Manager Timberlake, but will come to him and support a department, the discontinuation of which, would redound to the everlasting disgrace of the college for which they profess the profoundest regard.

SCHOLARSHIPS

Last Saturday the announcement was made that the Henry W. Longfellow Scholarship, the interest from ten thousand dollars, presented the college by the three daughters of the poet, Miss Alice M. Longfellow, Mrs. Edith L. Dana, and Mrs. Annie L. Thorp, had been awarded Charles Wilbur Snow of the Class of 1907. The career of this man, the brilliancy of whose college course was a matter of constant commendation, seems unquestionably made. While in college he was chairman of the Quill board, winner of the Class of ’68 Prize Speaking, Junior and Senior Class Poet, a member of the Ibis, and for two years a member of the College Debating Team which defeated Clark, Syracuse and Cornell Universities. He is now an instructor in English, and Argumentation and Debating at New York University. His home was formerly in Sprucehead, Maine, where he lived before entering Bowdoin, through which he put himself by the assistance of the college, and the remunerative work of supplying for some pulpit, Sundays. The Longfellow Scholarship enables a student to pursue a course after graduation at any institution in this country, or abroad, if considered desirable, the work to be done in English or General Literature, the scholarship being for the general advancement of Belles Lettres by men from the Alma Mater of America’s greatest poet. The best wishes of the college accompany Mr. Snow in his work. This is the first time that the Longfellow scholarship has been awarded.

The Charles Carroll Everett Scholarship was awarded Phillip Hunter Timberlake of Lancaster, N. H., a member of the Class of 1908. This scholarship consists in the income of certain real estate in trust in Brunswick, and enables the student to take a post graduate course at any home or foreign institution he chooses. Mr. Timberlake is intending to study at Johns Hopkins next year. This is the third awarding of the Everett Scholarship.

MRS. MARY J. YOUNG

On Friday of last week occurred the death of Mrs. Mary J. Young, widow of Professor Stephen J. Young of the Class of 1859, who was a professor of Modern Languages, librarian and treasurer for over twenty years at Bowdoin College, besides being, in 1883-86, a member of the State Senate, dying on July 16, 1895, at Brunswick. Mrs. Young was a woman of very sweet, unselfish disposition, and will be remembered with affection by her many friends of Portland, Brunswick and elsewhere. She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Roland W. Mann, Mrs. George S. Stetson, and three sons, all Bowdoin men, Ernest B. Young, Stephen E. Young and Arthur Young. Services were held in the Congregational Church in Brunswick, Monday.

The news of her death comes as a distinct blow to Bowdoin friends wherever located. In her death we have sustained a loss of which we are most keenly conscious.

HENRY VAN DYKE

On Sunday the college enjoyed the rare pleasure of listening to Rev. Henry Van Dyke, pastor of the Brick Church of New York, and Murray Professor of English at Princeton University. In the morning he preached a sermon in the College Church on the "Seventh Sense," which we are unable to publish through lack of space. In the afternoon in the chapel his sermon on “Purpose” was briefly as follows:

“Every man must have some lofty purpose underlying and guiding his life. The man who goes through college aimlessly will find himself at the end of his four years a little older but as dumb as ever. No man ever achieved anything without first having a purpose in his heart. The violin which hangs on the wall may get out of tune naturally, but no violin can be tuned without a purpose behind the deed. So it is with our lives. The purposes of great men may be traced to the influences acting upon them during their college course. Luther and Wesley, two of the world's greatest reformers, are typical examples. The institutions of Christian associations and foreign missions began with a small organization of college boys. College is the formulative, impressionable, educational period. Rise up high enough to receive and possess a religious spirit loftier than yourself! As Emerson says: 'Hitch your wagon to a star,' attach your purpose to a faith! Do not conceal this purpose. There are two kinds of hypocrisy to me in this world: That of the man who makes himself out better than he is, and that of the man who makes himself out worse than he is. Have an honest purpose; don't be ashamed of it. But live up to it in detail. Christian religion has suffered from the preponderance of emphasis laid upon the petty distinctions, of form, manner, style, dress, and social etiquette; things not of first importance in themselves, but subservient to greater good. These are only the 'filling' of life. They are the non-essentials of life, the visible and temporal. But college traditions should not be overthrown by a man who enters college, for they are not usually vital to his welfare. The things that defile the heart,—drunkenness, gambling, evil associations—must be refrained from or renounced. The true man will not, can not, dares not, touch them!"

In the evening, Mr. Van Dyke conducted a questionnaire which was of equal interest. The attendance on all three occasions reflects great credit on the college.

A PLAN FOR A LIGHT OVER THE LIBRARY DOOR

From time to time the matter of having a light over the library door has been considered and the Orient has annually urged that one be placed there. On a dark night it is impossible to see the steps leading to the front door, and the need of a light has been impressed on some students by a fall.

Professor Little has now carefully looked into the matter, and reports that there is too much danger of cracking the stones, especially those bearing the inscription: "Here seek converse with the wise of all the ages," to allow a hole for electric wires, to be bored through the front of the building, and it is practically impossible to bore straight down from the bow-window above the door, because of the great thickness of the stone blocks. It is possible, on the other hand, to run wires from the vestibule light along the vestibule ceiling, through the small wooden linten over the front door, and out to the center of the stone arch. But Mr. Vaughan, the architect, has expressed a wish that this be not done, as it would spoil the artistic effect of the carefully designed vestibule ceiling, and an electric bulb over the door would not be in keeping with the general style of the building. Another suggestion is to have a wrought-iron lantern swung from some part of the tower, but this is not the wish of Mr. Vaughan, who has suggested that an artistically designed post bearing a light, be placed on each side of the walk near the hall. This suggestion is in all probability the best solution of the little problem, and as much as any temporary makeshift would not only be less artistic, but would probably become the permanent solution, Professor Little has decided, before making any change, to wait until he is able to follow the plan of the architect.

A similar solution will also be applied to the problem of lighting the side entrance. The plan is to erect a post near the building, on the north end of the top step. When these lights are finally erected, the student body will be duly grateful.

FENCING

Trials—Bout with Pianelli Club of Augusta

There were fifteen bouts: Fairclough defeated Robinson; Bridge defeated Pratt; Smith and Tobey tied; Bridge defeated Fairclough; Robinson defeated Pratt; Bridge defeated Tobey; Smith defeated Robinson; Fairclough defeated Pratt; Bridge defeated Robinson; Tobey defeated Pratt; Smith defeated Fairclough; Tobey defeated Robinson; Bridge defeated Smith; Tobey defeated Fairclough; Smith defeated Pratt.

Bridge, winning all five bouts, was elected captain of the team; Smith and Tobey, each winning three, with a draw, were chosen as the other two members; Fairclough, winning

A Plea for the Simple Life

Probably every college man, at some period in his course, pauses to think and thinking asks: "After all what's the use?" The strenuousness that characterizes the spirit of the times in the world today, has penetrated just as thoroughly into the academic life. How much differently is attendance at college regarded now than it was fifty years ago, or when our fathers were under-graduates. At that time college was distinctly educational. The course was carefully prescribed. The student studied Latin, Greek, Mathematics and Philosophy. He had enough leisure time to give him opportunity for reading and to develop his tastes for literature. As it is at present, however, the demands of the college seem to be quite the reverse. The emphasis is laid upon the "outside interests" rather than the scholastic.

There really is but little leisure connected with a college course now. Numerous outside interests are demanding the time and labor of the under-graduate. A glance at a Bugle shows us in a moment where the time of a student is spent. For instance, one man will be on the Bugle, the Orient, the football and track teams, dramatic club, member of sectional and special clubs, a class officer, besides being connected with a fraternity. Another will be a 'varsity manager, president of the Christian Association, a member of no less than five clubs, all holding regular meetings, a proctor, and a class officer. These are by no means exceptional examples, nor do they represent extreme cases, but were simply two names chosen at random.

Throughout college literature there has been considerable editorial comment of late on this same subject, and we notice that a number of papers have advanced the cry of "one man one office" as a solution. The idea presents certain possibilities. It is, however, a fact that no matter how few activities there were at college, it would still be true that only a percentage of the student body would take part in them.

The point we would present is this: Bowdoin is but a small college as yet, and the essential activities of the college are centered in the hands of a few. It is bound to be so. The majority of the under-graduate body lie back and permit those who are already overburdened to carry on the work of the others. Now, are we not carrying on quite enough at present?

The Orient, almost every week, regularly receives requests to suggest the formation of some new activity. We have in our editorial drawer at present such suggestions as to form a debating club, checkers club, basketball team, boxing club, banjo club! The idea of all this is good, but everyone is so busy now!

The men who support the Dramatic Club, must also support the Glee Club and Mandolin Club. Same men are on the Quill, Bugle and Orient. Athletes must enter three or four branches of sport. While the Orient believes that all our activities fill a real demand, we certainly have plenty of them now, and the cry should not be towards the formation of new ones but to the support of those at present. There seems to be an under-graduate tendency to start something new, rather than support what we have. Many of the interests in college are struggling for existence, because fellows are looking in so many directions rather than concentrating their attention in one or two. It is good for us to consider occasionally the "simpler life" that college used to mean, and not be too hasty in crying for some fresh excitement! At that time the attention was directed strictly towards the individual, the college man studied and read to develop himself alone. Now one is expected to labor for the many. The college world, after all, but reflects the modern world, but it is well to remember at times the old-fashioned ideals. No!

two, was elected substitute and also judge. Robinson won one bout. Otis, '08, was judge at trials.

Last night the team met the Pianelli Club's trio at Augusta. Practice has been going on all the winter in Sargent Gymnasium under the competent instruction of Mr. White, one of the Pianelli Club's most skilful fencers. It is certain that the college team gave a good account of itself.

After the match a dance was tendered the visiting team. Full particulars will be given in the next issue.

NOTICE

Scholarships for Graduate Students at Harvard University for Next Year

The corporation has established, recently, twenty-five additional University Scholarships of $150 each, to be assigned annually by preference to Seniors of high standing in Harvard and in other colleges for study in the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences during the next academic year, regard being had in the assignment to the geographical distribution of the beneficiaries. The attention of alumni teachers in colleges, and particularly to those having pupils of high promise but narrow means who desire to study in the Harvard Graduate School, is called to these scholarships. Applications for 1908-9 should be received not later than March 15 next. All inquiries may be addressed to George W. Robinson, Secretary of the Graduate School of Arts and Sciences, 10 University Hall, Cambridge, and further information may also be obtained from Prof. Foster.

ANNUAL RALLY

April 17 is Set for the Date

Plans for the annual College Rally, which will occur Friday evening, April 17, are rapidly maturing. The committee in charge met at the Zeta Psi House Tuesday evening. Arthur L. Robinson, '08, was elected chairman and Nathan S. Weston, treasurer of the committee. In order to further the spirit of harmony and good fellowship which already exists between the students of the academic and the medical departments, it was voted that President Files of the Athletic Council appoint two medical students to serve on the committee. The committee hope to secure as speakers Bowdoin Alumni prominent in their various walks of life.

The expenses of the rally, which include the items of railroad fares for the speakers, refreshments, printing, and a suitable souvenir, are necessarily met by subscription. Every one readily signs the subscription paper, but it is a difficult, tedious and irksome task to collect from many fellows. This reason, together with the fact that there was a deficit of forty dollars last year, prompted the committee to adopt the plan of giving to every man who pays his subscription a ticket admitting bearer and friends to the rally. These tickets will be placed in the hands of the various members of the committee early next week. Some new innovations will be introduced that will contribute to the success of the gathering. Something neat will be sprung in the way of souvenirs! The idea of tickets is wholly to insure the financial management, and every man will stand ready with his half!

N. E. I. A. A.

Last Saturday the managers of the track teams from the several New England colleges met at the Hotel Lenox, Boston, principally to decide where the annual New England Intercollagiate meet should be held. It was voted to hold the meet on the Tech Field at Brookline, as was done two years ago. This arrangement will considerably reduce the expenses of the most easterly teams, and if Bowdoin shows a strong team in the Maine meet, which is held this year on Whittier Field, a large delegation of undergraduates should plan to accompany the team to Brookline.

The dates set for the meet are Friday, May 22, for the trials, and Saturday, May 23, for the finals. This will be one week after the Maine meet, and one week before the American intercollegiate games, which will probably be held this year, as last, in the Harvard Stadium.

The Massachusetts Institute of Technology will finance and manage the meet, secure officials, guarantee the association $100 regardless of receipts, and divide the receipts with the association.

The following officers were elected: President, H. W. Cowce of Dartmouth; vice-president, D. D. McKay of Amherst; secretary, W. H. Hoch of Williams; and treasurer, D. C. McMurtie of M. I. T.

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION MEETING

The talk, February 13, was on the general subject which has been pursued in the Y. M. C. A. meetings, "The Problems of College Life." Alfred E. Burton, the dean of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, took for his special subject, "Honor in College." He took for his stand that while the college authorities had granted more and more rights and privileges the college man had not changed his code of honor to agree. The speaker said that in former years, when the rules of a college were as strict as those of a modern boarding school, the actions of a student in trying to evade these rules might in some way be justified, but at the present time when a student is treated as a man and is given about the same freedom as he will have in the world, his actions should be governed by the same rules of conduct as govern every-day life. The speaker was listened to by a large audience.

There were no recitations in Greek II. on last Friday or Monday.

The baseball schedule has been approved by the faculty and now only has to be approved by the Athletic Council.
The college notes with pleasure the return and speedy recovery of Blinn Russell from an operation for appendicitis.
Term bills were sent out with ranks at the beginning of the term. Students are urged to have them paid as soon as possible.
Cross country runs have again been started, and the squad will leave the gym Monday, Wednesday, Friday and Saturday at four o’clock.
Richards, ’11, and Morton, ’10, were the officials at the basketball game between Westbrook Seminary and Brunswick High, last Friday night.
A telegram has been received by President Hyde from the Bowdoin Alumni Association warning Bowdoin men against a man pretending to sell "The University Magazine." He is a fraud and has worked his game in many of the colleges.

Practice for the Freshman Relay Team is being conducted almost daily. A race is to be run with the Bates Freshmen some time in March, at the Bates Indoor Meet.

The Hebron Academy basketball team meets Morse High at Bath this evening. The Hebron players will be entertained at the various fraternity houses over Sunday.

The hockey game, scheduled with Maine last Saturday, was postponed on account of the storm Friday. Many who came to the Assembly returned to their homes disappointed.

The Men’s Club of Brunswick was entertained by President Hyde at Hotel Eagle last Friday evening. The discussion upon parcels post was opened with a paper by Franklin C. Webb.

On Friday and Saturday of last week the campus presented the appearance of an immense duck pond; since then, however, the term of "skating rink" might have been aptly applied to it.

A. C. Chadbourne, ’07, passed through here Tuesday from a visit home, visiting friends on the campus, preparatory to leaving for London in the service of the International Banking Corporation.

The thaw and rain of last Saturday rendered the cellar at North Appleton rather wet; so much so, in fact, that men were kept busy all night pumping the water out, to keep it from reaching the steam pipes.

The final trials for the Bradbury debate were held Tuesday afternoon. Hyde, ’08, was chosen for the affirmative and Robinson, ’08, for the negative. Brewster and Marsh are alternates. The debate will take place March 10.

At a meeting of the Dramatic Club Tuesday it was decided not to have a vacation trip. Rehearsals will begin again Monday night. Arrangements are nearly completed for a performance to be given in Portland on Friday, March 13.

It is interesting to note that the two architects of the new Episcopal Cathedral, which is to be built in Washington, are to be the largest in America, are Dr. Bodley, an eminent English architect, and Henry Vaughan of Boston, who designed Hubbard Hall.

A small theatre is being built on the lot facing Maine street, formerly occupied by the building which was bought and remodeled by the Delta Upsilon Fraternity. The nature of the shows will probably be limited to a nickel afternoon and evening "moving picture" performance.

By vote of the faculty the students conditioned in French I. and German I., are required to continue in French II. and German II., respectively, but are to prepare for their work in French II. and German II. under the direction of a tutor approved by the instructor. The students concerned are requested to consult Professor Brown at once.

Brunswick High was defeated in basketball by Westbrook in a 14-11 game Friday night in Armory Hall. On Tuesday of the same week a Bowdoin team composed of Carter, ’09; Nulty, ’10; Haley, ’11; Howe, ’11; Pierce, ’11; with MacFarland, ’11; and Gould, ’11, defeated Brunswick High in a twelve minute game 24-12. The same pick-up Bowdoin team with Swan, ’11, as manager, was beaten by Hebron Academy, 26-16, Friday evening, in the latter’s gymnasium.
The Phi Chi Fraternity has changed its boarding place. Mrs. Davis, formerly matron at the Beta House, is cooking for the club on Everett street.

The Bates Annual Alumni and Alumnae Reunion and Dinner was held at Young's Hotel, Friday, in Boston. About one hundred and fifty graduates attended. President Chase headed the list of speakers. Bates, within a year or two, was placed on the same Carnegie foundation for professors as Bowdoin and forty-eight other institutions in the United States have been.

It is understood that the need of a light in front of Hubbard Hall is soon to be eliminated by a couple of lamp posts on either side of the front entrance. It is found next to impossible to put an electric light there because the stone of the library would have to be pierced in the wiring, and danger of splitting the inscription stone would be encountered.

F. Hopkinson Smith, the well-known novelist and artist, gave an interesting reading from some of the best known of his books to the Portnightly Club of Bath, last week. Several of his paintings are in the Walker Art Building collection. Doubtless, if the fact that Mr. Smith was to speak in such a neighboring town, had been known to the college, a large delegation would have attended.

The new assistant in the library, who has been engaged to take the place of Lewis H. Fox, '06, is Hugh McLellan Lewis, B.C.E., a graduate of the University of Maine, '93. After graduation, for several years, he followed his profession of civil engineering, and for the last three years was in the employ of Cocheco Manufacturing Company at Dover, N. H., whence he came to Bowdoin.

E. Ralph Bridge, '09, has started a dining club at Miss Fan Pennell's house on Maine street. About 15 men are getting meals there. Any member of the college is invited and urged to try the board—good, clean, wholesome food, and plenty of it—all that your money will buy. Bridge, with the previous experience of several stewardships, is competent to undertake an enterprise of this kind, and will doubtless make it an entire success.

A meeting of the baseball managers of the preparatory schools of Maine which belong to the Bowdoin Intercolchastic Baseball League, Cony High, Gardiner, Edward Little, Lewiston High and Brunswick, was held with Manager Tefft Wednesday in Banister Hall. Through the absence of one of the managers no schedule could be made out, but it will be made out later by mail. At this conference Portland High was voted in as a member of the Association.

THE YORK COUNTY CLUB

A meeting of the York County Club was held with Kimball, '10, at the Delta Upsilon House, Monday evening. Prof. Moody addressed the club. He took for his topic the coast of York County and its historical associations. There is scarcely any doubt that the ancient Norsemen landed somewhere in that vicinity as they came down the Maine coast. The shore is so rough and rocky in the eastern part of the State that the smooth, sandy shores must have presented good landing places to the Norse mariners. The English made very early settlements in that vicinity, a few of which are still in existence. Prof. Moody referred to his once finding an unusual flower on Stage Island, which was practically bare of vegetation. After careful research, he found that the flower was grown only in English gardens and even in England it was rather uncommon. The natural inference is that some English settlers, a long time ago, made their residence for a time on the island, and the flower was a scion of the original garden. An interesting explanation of the name of the island was given by Professor Moody.

"Stage Island," it has been called for years—with no special significance in the name, but Professor Moody suggested that perhaps the Englishmen who came there, did so for fishing purposes and erected sheds or stages on which to spread out the fish to dry, hence the name.

Many other historical facts of interest were spoken of, and the manner in which a study of local history affords some knowledge of national affairs, which produced certain results locally. A very pleasant evening was enjoyed by all and after refreshments were served and a few topics of business discussed, the meeting was adjourned. The next meeting will be held with Hobbs, '10, at the Beta Theta Pi House, the date to be announced later.

To Bowdoin Men

A PERSONAL WORD FROM THE PRESIDENT

The college men who obtain the best temporary or permanent positions in July are usually the ones who start looking for them in January. Before you get entangled with any expensive or inefficient employment agency or before you start on a more or less aimless individual search for the position you desire, it will be worth your while to learn about our Co-operative Membership. We are an organization of college men for college men. We can save you time, travel, trouble and money by furnishing you with accurate information while in college and by securing you a desirable position or business opportunity when you leave the college. There are no involved contracts, no costly commissions, no red tape, no strings attached to our service. We think we solve one old problem in a new and better way. Will you let us prove it to you? Just write for particulars, stating your needs.

ARTHUR EVERETT SMALL, President

The National Clearing House
For Services and Information

General Offices: WASHINGTON, D.C.

(Many college men use us as a legitimate and satisfactory means of obtaining complete and authoritative information on public affairs, sociology, political economy, literature, history, and a wide range of other thesis subjects. Why not you?)
THE GLEE CLUB TRIPS

The Musical Clubs left on the 11.30 train, on Thursday of last week, to give their first concerts of the season. On the evening of the same day they gave a concert, under the auspices of the Senior Class in the High School at Oldtown. Although this was their first concert, it was most successful, a large, enthusiastic crowd attending. Some of the fellows were entertained at the fraternities at Maine, some were entertained in private families, and the remainder were put up at hotels. After all three concerts dances were given.

In Bangor, Friday evening, an audience in the neighborhood of a thousand people filled the house to overflowing. The members were encored time and again. The Alpha Phi Club of Bangor High School presented the concert, entertaining those of the men who were not entertained by Bowdoin Alumni. In Augusta, Saturday evening, where the last concert was given, principally under the auspices of John C. Minott, of the Class of '06, the most enthusiastic crowd was in attendance. The press everywhere commends the excellence of the clubs, with the statement that an even better program than that of former years was presented this year. Financially, the trip was equally successful, the management realizing from the trip more than enough money to clear expenses.

On Thursday of this week the clubs gave a concert on a second trip, this time to Farmington. A dance was held afterwards.

Next week the management plans to take the clubs to Norway and Bethel. On April 2nd, the dual concert with Dartmouth in Portland is to take place, with a concert in Boston on the following day. Possibly a trip to Rockland and Camden can be arranged previous to the latter trip.

TRACK

Triangular Meet Proposed for Tufts, Bates and Bowdoin

A busy season for track athletes is promised this spring. In the first place a series of indoor handicap meets are to be held in the gymnasium, Saturdays, up to the time of the Indoor Meet on March 20. The idea is that the man in each event scoring the largest number of points for the whole series with his handicap should receive a cup or some such prize.

In outdoor track athletics there is the Maine Meet on May 16, which will be held here on Whittier Field this year and the New England Meet coming on the following Friday and Saturday, May 22 and 23, on the M. I. T. Field at Brookline, Mass. Besides these usual happenings, arrangements are being made to have a triangular meet in Lewiston, on May 9, between Bowdoin, Bates and Tufts. This plan has already been approved at Bates and we certainly hope that it will be properly sanctioned here and at Tufts. It is most decidedly a good thing for Bowdoin to enter active track relations with a college outside the state and is quite in keeping with the broadening tendency which is so strong here now. The plan of holding this triangular meet was advanced as a substitute of the dual meet along financial grounds, as not involving so heavy a cost that it would be difficult to hold meets in successive years.

The Bowdoin Interscholastic Meet will be held on May 23, at Brunswick.

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

Mr. Anand Hiwale, '09, gave a very interesting talk on "School and College Life in India" at the meeting of the Christian Association on Thursday evening of last week. He said in brief:—

The people of India are bright and intelligent, yet only about ten per cent. of the male population and one per cent. of the female can read and write. The women are kept absolutely apart from society and are not allowed association with men in general. The people are inclined to be indolent, but are never dull. The Hindoo, though more sympathetic and intellectual, are equally unaggressive, for Persians, French, Dutch and lastly, English, have conquered and pillaged their country.

For an education, boys are given to the priests, who take them into their households, after looking them over to form an estimate of their character. They are kept in menial positions for four years when they are taught poetry, which is the universal medium of literature of the country. After ten or fifteen years they are graduated with secret vows not to disclose anything that they have learned to their fellow men! Macaulay, who came to India during the first half of the nineteenth century, recognized its educationally impoverished condition, and caused the English to take an active interest in the state of things through his voice in Parliament. In the meantime, missionaries began to come in to teach and minister. Yet the people, through their insistent and fatal pride said: "God will not keep the downtrodden and ignorant always in their suffering condition; He will help us. We do not need your false doctrines and strange customs." Since the Japanese war with Russia they have harbored even greater hopes of being themselves free, some day.

Women are debarred from an education, also, because the men fear they will demand their rights, if an education which will disclose to them their state of subjection and oppression be given them. They repudiate Christianity, too, because their religion was founded 2,000 years before Christ.

The upper classes are ever eager to crowd the poorer out of a chance to study in the schools. Girls are married at nine or ten years of age, and so, like their young husbands, find family duties further interference to the obtaining of an education. They are expected to marry at this age. Few young men are willing to leave their own country and study abroad. There are now about forty thousand graduates from schools and colleges yearly in India. Yet the fact that there are two schools, Hindoo and Christian, causes a great check to the symmetrical development of the country.

Mr. Hiwale illustrated the use of the native hat and tie, and explained the native gods and their attributes. He also sang several songs in the native tongue. He stated that his school in India was to be called the "Bowdoin School" because of the great power behind it. A good audience attended this meeting.

FENCING

Bowdoin, 5; Pianelli, 4

Bowdoin took part in and won her first fencing match at Augusta, last Thursday, with the Pianelli Club. The bout took place in Woodman Hall and a large audience assembled to witness it.

The result was as follows:

- Tobey vs. Lee, won by Tobey.
- Jones vs. Smith, won by Jones.
- Bridge vs. Coburn, draw.
- Jones vs. Tobey, won by Jones.
- Smith vs. Coburn, won by Smith.
- Bridge vs. Lee, won by Bridge.
- Coburn vs. Tobey, won by Coburn.
- Smith vs. Lee, won by Smith.
- Jones vs. Bridge, won by Jones.

A tie score, owing to draw between Bridge and Coburn. Score 4-4.

Second between Bridge and Coburn. Bridge won.

Final score, 5-4, in favor of Bowdoin.

Sawtelle, referee.

Billidou, time-keeper.

Whitney of Waterville and Fairclough, judges.

The bout was followed by a dance until midnight.

Arrangements are pending for two more bouts with this team, one here and the other at Augusta. There has also been some talk of a bout with Bangor but nothing definite has been done about it.

INTELSCHOLASTIC DEBATING LEAGUE

The first contest of the Bowdoin Interscholastic Debating League, which occurs Friday evening, February 29, at City Hall, Portland, will be between Portland High School and Cony High of Augusta.

The question for debate reads: Resolved, That, granting the willingness of Cuba, the peaceable annexation of Cuba to the United States would be for the best interests of the United States.

Portland will be represented by Messrs. Snow, Wright, Wish, with Chapman as alternate; Cony by Messrs. Nichols, Savage, Jones, with Fitzgerald as alternate.

Friday evening, March 6, Lewiston and Edward Little High Schools debate at Lewiston. The same question will be discussed. The two winning teams will meet in Memorial Hall some time in May.

The Bowdoin Interscholastic Debating League, which was organized last year, is now in its second year of work under the guidance of the Bowdoin Debating Council. That the league has aroused interest among the secondary schools of Maine is shown by the fact that seven more schools have applied for admission to the league and many others have sought advice.
SUNDAY CHAPEL

At the Sunday Chapel President Hyde introduced Rev. Mr. Edward S. Tead, secretary of the Congregational Educational Society, as “An officer of one of those religious organizations which foster struggling institutions and students throughout the country,—institutions of the same nature as that which helped to found and support Bowdoin when in the then Province of Maine.”

Mr. Tead said in part:—

“There is a want of men in every portion of the globe to fill particular positions. To find the right men there must be a sitting and weedling out. It is for the responsible, and important positions that men are needed. To supply this need new men, ‘coming’ men, are being continuously developed. Yet every man can fill a position in such a way that no other man can exactly replace him. God does not make a ceaseless repetition of character; for the charm of individuality would be diminished. The youth may outstrip his elders, so that no man can tell but that he may be the coming man. God saw the world in all its sin and at the right time gave it the greatest thing he possessed—a Man!”

A quartette composed of Brown, ’09; Kendrie, ’10; McGlone, ’10; and Richards, ’11, furnished music.

Sympathy

The Orient unites with the whole college in expressing the most sincere sympathy for Harrison C. Chapman, 1910, in the sad bereavement that he has suffered in the loss of his mother.

In Appreciation

To Professor and Mrs. George E. Files the college is indebted for many donations. The contribution by Professor Files of funds to assist in the establishing of a good German Library in the college is but one instance of these kindnesses. Those students who heard Rev. Henry Van Dyke of Princeton cannot help feeling how great their state of indebtedness is. The attendance at church, chapel, and the questionnaire in the Y. M. C. A. rooms in the evening may be considered a mark of their appreciation of this privilege, as well as a knowledge of Mr. Van Dyke's widespread reputation. For such a privilege the Orient expresses the gratitude of all the college.

We Must Think of Track

At last track athletics have been allowed a special gymnasium squad just as has been allowed in past years to the baseball and football men. Track is the branch in which athletes can do the most for themselves by consistent training during the winter months, because many of the events can be conducted just as well indoors as out—while baseball and football men have to do their winter work under conditions much different from those of the diamond or gridiron. It is therefore a peculiar circumstance that the track squad has been the last to be formed, but now that it has been started, there is no doubt that it will be continued from year to year. And its good results we hope will be evident next spring.

Now that this squad will give the men an opportunity to work, the management has introduced a feature which should lend enough interest to the work to keep a large squad of track candidates in training. On next Saturday, and on the following two Saturdays—that is, up to the time of the Indoor Meet, when gymnasium work stops—there will be held handicap meets. Contests in putting the 12-pound shot with a handicap limit of 12 feet, in high jumping with handi- caps up to 5 inches, and in pole-vaulting with handicaps up to 2 feet will be held in the gymnasium, while on the outdoor track there will be a 45-yard high hurdle race with a handicap limit of 3 yards. First, second, and third places will count 5, 3 and 1 points, respectively, and the man winning the most points in each event will be awarded a cup. There will also be held a handicap cross country run with a handicap limit of 2 minutes. This race will take place on Wednesday, March 25, and the winner of this will also receive a cup.

The gymnasium squad has already met with the hearty support of those who are in it, and the plan for the handicap meets certainly deserves a strong response. This interest and planning augurs well for our chances in track athletics next spring—but our success, if we are to have it, in the triangular meet with Bates and Tufts, in the Maine meet, and in the New England meet, is, in every case, to be a hard fought one. The Maine meet this year is to be held on Whittier Field. Bowdoin has lost the meet for two consecutive years, and the time has come when Bowdoin must win it again, whether it is hard fought or not. Bowdoin has never lost a track meet on her home ground and every man who isn’t a baseball man, who is interested in Bowdoin’s athletic record, and who is willing and able to do all he can for Bowdoin’s honor should faithfully report every day from now to May 16. There are but sixty-three days left for regular training—on six days of every week—and it is time for Bowdoin to get ready to prove that we are the best men in the first track meet held before the Whittier Field motto—“Fair play and may the best man win.”

The Orient is accustomed to write “pay up” editorials for all undergraduate activities, and it is only fair that we occasionally speak for ourselves. The Post Office Department has just issued an order which is most important. It reads: “Unless subscriptions are expressly renewed after the term for which they are paid, weeklies within one year, they shall not be counted in the legitimate list of subscribers, and copies mailed on account thereof shall not be accepted at the second class postage rate.” Subscriptions must in the future be paid up promptly or subscribers cannot receive their papers. It is hardly necessary to repeat the idea that subscriptions should be paid as an essential part of college loyalty. We hope you understand that, and we trust that the Orient is really worth something to you. We are not asking for charity, we are giving you something for your money, but do not forget the cash!

New Postal Rules

Conditions: There seems to be a growing inclination among the students to let conditions, especially entrance conditions, remain hanging over them much longer than is necessary. In this way many, who might otherwise represent the college in its organizations, are shut out from taking part in athletics or belonging to the Musical and Dramatic Clubs. The trouble seems to be principally one of inertia, the fellows hate to make the extra effort that it takes to prepare for an examination. There is no need for this laziness and in reality the longer such an examination is put off, the harder it becomes to pass. If more would take this to heart the college might make a better showing both in its catalogue and in its athletics.

“The College Widow” was staged by local talent in Lewiston Tuesday. Munde Adams will appear in a new role there in the near future.

A reception was tendered Miss Brock of Somerville, Mass., and Mr. Jump, last week, by Mrs. Hartley C. Baxter of Brunswick. The affair proved very pleasant to the many people who attended.

A minstrel show, with a dance and refreshments afterwards, was given in the Grange Hall of Harpswell on Thursday evening of last week. Some of the students attended and enjoyed a very pleasant evening.

On Thursday of last week Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Robinson held a charming “At Home” at their house. About two hundred guests attended from Brunswick and neighboring places. A number of students were present.

The Junior Class in gym. received broadswords this week. Class squash leaders and pianists are to be elected immediately. Practice for the Indoor Meet will begin next week. The drills will be practiced with the piano.

Most of the students took advantage of the Washington’s Birthday recess to go home. Contrary to custom chapel services were held. The attendance consisted of three Seniors, two Juniors, six Sophomores, and fifteen Freshmen.

Some of the Esquimaux dogs brought by Com. Robert E. Peary, ’77, from the Arctic regions, and which he had placed for keeping on an island in Casco Bay, have escaped and are preying upon the deer and other game of the State. The writer is acquainted with two persons who have recently seen several of the dogs. Fish and Game Commissioner Carleton has notified Com. Peary that the dogs will be shot unless captured.

It is noteworthy that although an unusually large number of applications for entrances into the college by men from other institutions have been received at the beginning of this Second Semester, none of the applicants have been admitted.

The following notice was recently posted in the Brunswick Street R. R. cars: “On Saturdays only two cars will run every hour between Lewiston and Lisbon Falls,—the Orient wishes to know how many cars usually run every hour on Saturdays?”

The last basketball game of this season on its schedule was played by the Brunswick High Team with Morse, Tuesday evening in the Armory. A dance was held afterward. The annual relay practice of the Brunswick boys in the Bowdoin gym. will begin at once.

A new water system has been put in the basement of South Appleton Hall. A large number of the ceilings in this building, which is said to have settled slightly on its foundation last Christmas, have had to be temporarily nailed up until they can be repaired next summer.

Dr. Henry van Dyke went through Brunswick, last Friday, on his way from Bangor, where he has been speaking during Convocation Week at the Theological Seminary. He also gave an address, Wednesday at the University of Maine. Next week Bowdoin College Preacher will speak on March 15.

An artesian well is being bored by the M. C. R. R. in the Brunswick yard, to supply water for the tank which was erected there last year. Two men are employed in this work night and day. The drill, Saturday night of last week, had penetrated into a strata of very hard granite at a depth of 470 feet.

It is rumored that “The Great Divide,” Henry Miller’s most popular play, will appear at no distant date in Lewiston. The Boston Grand Opera Stock Company staged “Ill Trovatore,” “The Bohemian Girl,” “Faust,” “Romeo and Juliet,” etc., in Portland on the 26, 27, 28; and will probably come to Lewiston next week.

Gilles, ’07, has a splendid line of spring and summer suit samples gotten out by the Sepenser Tracy Clothing Co. of New York, which makes the suits to order. The suits, though of an extra fine quality, are of moderate prices. All students are urged to see these samples at 21 No. W. Hall, or of Mr. Kane, the local tailor of Brunswick, who takes the orders.

Friends of Mr. Paul S. Sperry, pastor of the Swedenborgian Church of Bath, a graduate of Washington University and member of the Theta Delta Chi Fraternity, will be interested to learn that he has accepted the pastorate of a very large parish in Brockton, Mass., at a salary of $2,500. He is accompanied by the best wishes of all Bowdoin men who have had the good fortune to know him.

Judge Ben B. Lindsey, well known as Juvenile Court Judge, is to come to Brunswick in the spring and the students will have the opportunity of hearing this man. He is to speak in Memorial Hall on April 21. The date has been changed from that originally announced of April 2, which would have come during the spring vacation, when the students would have been unable to hear him. The Orient appreciates the thoughtfulness of the club in changing the date of this event, as Mr. Lindsey will certainly be a man worth hearing.
At Boston recently the same Tufts relay team which defeated Bowdoin at the B. A. A. games where each man ran 390 yards, defeated the M. I. T. relay team, each man here running half a mile. The result was the surprise of the evening, Tech having a team of regular distance men, and not using any of their B. A. A. team which, however, was entered in the games and broke the hall record for a relay team, each man running 352 yards.

The Anasagunticook Snowshoe Club, organized two years ago by Mr. Jump, among the young people of the town and the students, took its first trip of this season, Saturday afternoon, starting on the 2:30 car toward Pejepscot and returning toward evening, after a three hours' tramp. Snowshoeing, skeeving, and tobogganing will probably be the prevailing sports for the remainder of the season. The club plans to walk to the Rossmere Saturday afternoon, take supper there and return in the evening.

On Thursday the 20th, most of Brunswick, and many students went to the Town Hall to hear Beatrice Herford. She proved very entertaining in all of her monologues, which were: "At the Residency," "The Shampoo Woman," "The Professional Boarder," "Talking Over a Trip to Europe," and "The Telephone Girl." Beatrice Herford was here under the auspices of the Saturday Club of Brunswick, to which the students are every year indebted for several excellent entertainments and lectures.

On Monday the Brunswick Town Meeting will be held in the Town Hall. Among the matters which are to be considered are the location of a high school building, the addition of a commercial course to the high school curriculum, the changing of the name of Potter Street to its original name, "Longfellow's Lane," the placing of a compressed air fire alarm whistle on the Town Hall tower, the management of the Brunswick Electric Light Company, and obstruction of Maine Street by the Maine Central Railroad.

As an undergraduate publication, we are too conscious that typographical errors do creep into our columns. While there is nothing that disturbs our equanimity more than a mistake, occasionally something happens quite beyond our control, as witness the case in the editorial published last week. The glaring "No!" that closed the editorial was not intended, we feel forced to explain. The closing sentence on the proof had ended with an exclamation point, the proof reader decided to change it and wrote on the margin "No!", meaning "cut it out," but there was a mix-up somewhere and it appeared in the wholly unintended and contradictory form, "No!"

The following men, instead of regular gymnasium work, are taking track work in the gymnasium at 2:30 every day except Saturday at 3:30. Attendance with the track squad is put on the same basis as attendance at regular gymnasium work, each man being given credit for his attendance on those days when his regular gymnasium work would come, while on the other days his attendance is voluntary. From 1908, Davis; from 1909, Atwood, Burton, Pennell, Simmonds, Stone; from 1910, Ballard, Colbath, Deming, Edwards, R. Morss, W. P. Newman, Slocum, Warren; from 1911, Allen, L. Davis, Dresser, Kaulbach, MacFarland, Parkman, Purinton, and H. L. Robinson.

KAPPA SIGMA CONCLAVE

The annual conclave of Kappa Sigma was held at Cambridge, Mass., Saturday. The banquet was at the Bellevue Hotel in Boston. A large number of Kappa Sigma's were present from all over the country. The Bowdoin Chapter was represented by Devina, '08; Files, '09; and Otis, '10.

BOWDOIN ALUMNI BANQUET

The 28th annual meeting of the Bowdoin Alumni of Portland and vicinity will be Saturday evening, February 20, at the Congress Square Hotel. Carroll W. Morrill of the Class of 1877 will be the orator, Harry E. Andrews of the Class of 1884, the poet. Kenneth M. Sills of the Class of 1901 will be the toastmaster for the banquet. The business meeting will be held at seven o'clock p.m. and the proposed amendment to the constitution to enlarge the membership of the association will be acted upon. At the close of the business meeting dinner will be served. A double quartette from the Bowdoin Glee Club will be present at the dinner.

Alumni Notes

CLASS OF 1869

The State Collegian, the student publication of the Pennsylvania State College, in a recent number, gives an interesting resume of the development of the School of Mines under the efficient administration of the present dean, Dr. M. E. Wadsworth. The number of students has increased from 26 in 1901 to 159 in 1907 and its relative position in point of size among similar schools in this country from the nineteenth to the seventh place. The two years' short course offers by means of its electives as great a variety of options as does the four years' course. A new departure has been made in the matter of practical education by allowing men to elect mining, or metallurgical, or geological work with some company during the summer vacations. The student who does this is required to write a thesis, giving an account of his work and to pass a written or oral examination upon it. Substitution of electives are then allowed so that a student of good mental ability and strong physique can graduate in three years with some practical knowledge of his profession.

CLASS OF 1875

Rev. Dr. Cressey has served as pastor of the Unitarian Church at Brixton, London, since last September. The following extracts are taken from one of a series of Pulpit Sketches appearing in the Free Press of that city:

"Dr. Cressey is a gentleman of fine presence and possessed of a number of qualifications that can hardly fail to make him a powerful accession to the pulpit ability of South London. There is less of the American mode of pronunciation than we expected to find, and there is a calm dispassionateness in the doctor's extemporary delivery that lends great weight to every sentence he utters. * * *

We can only say that to the thoughtful man, anxious to sit at the feet of a stimulating intellectual teacher, there is no centre of religious activity in Brixton or neighborhood where a higher message issues than proceeds from the lips of the new minister of the Unitarian Church in Effra Road."

CLASS OF 1886
Percy Allan Knight, son of Hon. Enoch Knight, now of Los Angeles, California, was born at Norfolk, Va., 14 May, 1864. He received his preparation for college at the Portland High School. During his college course he was an editor of the Bugle and won the Brown Prize for excellence in extemporaneous composition. After graduation he was employed for a time by D. Lathrop & Co., publishers, of Boston, but in 1888 entered upon his life work as a journalist. In that year he accepted a position upon the editorial staff of the Cleveland Plain-Dealer, with which he was connected in various capacities till his death, acting for a long period as associate editor. He was a remarkably well-informed mind and his early ambition to enter West Point, which physical disability prevented, turned his attention to army and navy affairs on which he was considered an authority. His culture and breadth of mind and his vigor and purity of style gave his editorials a literary merit that attracted no little notice. After an illness of several months, he died of kidney disease at a hospital in Cleveland 6 February, 1908.

HONORARY 1887.
Crosby S. Noyes of Washington, D. C., a native of Maine, who was loved and respected wherever known and whose memory will long be cherished at Bowdoin as the founder of the Noyes Scholarships and the Political Economy prize, died after a brief illness at Pasadena, Cal., 21 February, 1908.

CLASS OF 1902
A. Stroud Rodick, '02, has recently been elected president of the First National Bank of Bar Harbor.

CLASS OF 1907
A. C. Chadbourne passed through here, visiting, for a short time, friends on the campus, on his way to New York to start for London, England, in the employ of the International Banking Corporation.

In Memoriam

The Kappa Chapter of Psi Upsilon deeply mourns the death of Charles Henry Howard of the Class of 1859. By his death the Chapter loses a beloved brother and the college a loyal Alumnus.

He was active, during his life time, in many branches of life. He served with distinction during the Civil War. For three years he held the office of Inspector of Indian Agencies and later he devoted himself, at different times, to the task of editing two of the foremost agricultural magazines in the West.

The Kappa Chapter itself feels the loss of such a brother and extends its heart-felt sympathy to the bereaved family and friends.

To Bowdoin Men

A PERSONAL WORD FROM THE PRESIDENT

The college men who obtain the best temporary or permanent positions in July are usually the ones who start looking for them in January. Before you get entangled with any expensive or inefficient employment agency or before you start on a more or less aimless individual search for the position you desire, it will be worth your while to learn about our Co-operative Membership. We are an organization of college men for college men. We can save you time, travel, trouble and money by furnishing you with accurate information while in college and by securing you a desirable position or business opportunity when out of college. There are no involved contracts, no costly commissions, no red tape, no strings attached to our service. We think we solve an old problem in a new and better way. Will you let us prove it to you? Just write for particulars, stating your needs.

PORTLAND ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

Annual Meeting in Portland on Saturday, Feb. 29

The annual meeting and banquet of the Portland Alumni Association, which was held at the Congress Square Hotel, Saturday evening, February 29, was one of the most successful affairs in the history of the association. At the business session the following officers were elected:

President: Hon. Augustus F. Moulton.
Vice-President: Franklin C. Payson, Esq.
Secretary and Treasurer: Percival P. Baxter.
Nominating Committee: Judge Clarence Hale, Hon. Walter B. Clark, Dr. Charles H. Hunt.

During the banquet selections were rendered by the following members of the Mandolin and Glee Clubs: Howard F. Kane, '09; Carl E. Stone, '09; Dudley Hovey, '09; Harold E. Weeks, '10; Alfred W. Stone, '10; Harold W. Davie, '10; Max P. Cushing, '09.

Prior to the speeches letters were read from Governor Cobb, from Chief Justice Fuller, president of the Washington Alumni, from the Alumni Associations of New York and Boston, of Kennebec and of Oxford Counties.

Professor Sills, acting as toastmaster, introduced Professor Chapman, who gave an interesting and loyal address on "The College." Joseph B. Reed, in responding to the toast, "The State," emphasized the fact that Bowdoin does not want one penny of pecuniary aid from the State, but on the contrary, Bowdoin is yearly aiding the State by sending out men who will become factors of good in their respective communities. Judge Clarence Hale briefly reviewed the records of the early trustees of the college in replying to "The Governing Board." Dr. Frederick H. Gerrish called attention to the fact that it was through the "Medical School" that Bowdoin received her largest bequest, the Garcelon Merritt fund, and urged the furtherment of the already existing spirit of good fellowship between students of the two departments. Dudley Hovey, '09, responded to the toast, "The Undergraduates."

ATHLETIC COUNCIL MEETING

The Athletic Council held its regular meeting on Tuesday evening at Dr. Whittier's office. The regular routine business was transacted. The reports of the various associations were received and accepted. The baseball schedule was formally approved, in the same form as was published in the ORIENT a few weeks ago. The Council approved the substitution of a Triangular Meet with Bates, Tufts and Bowdoin at Lewiston on May 9, in place of the dual meet with Tufts for the same date. John Irwin was confirmed as baseball coach and Ross McClave as football coach. Robert Hale, '10, and Robert D. Morss, '10, were nominated by the Council as candidates for the position of assistant manager of the tennis team. The Council further repeated its sentiment of opposition to any scrub teams playing games of any kind, and condemned the recent action of certain men playing basketball, though under a different name. Prof. C. C. Hutchins, treasurer, presided. Dr. Whittier, C. E. Files, 1908, A. L. Robinson, 1908, Harrison Atwood, 1909, and H. J. Colbath, '10, were present.
The Orient reprints from the recent issue of the Quill the following poem, which from its purpose and sentiment we believe should appear in these columns as well:

DEATH
The leaves are dead? 'Tis joy to feel
Their rustle 'neath my weary feet.
The golden rays thro' sunset glades
Waft dreams of countries more complete,—
Leaves are not dead to me.
The moon is dead? My chamber wall
Is hallowed by its mystic light.
The mellow gleam of old romance
Shines in to speed the hours of night,—
The moon's not dead to me.

My friend is dead? His soul went out,
But left its impress on my own;
Now Life's more clear, the Change less drear,
I'll reap where his clean hands have sown,—
He is not dead to me.

C. W. Snow, '07.

SUNDAY CHAPEL
In chapel, Sunday, President Hyde spoke briefly as follows:

"How many of you know how to pray? How many of you recognize the silent force of good will which underlies all nature, all law, all justice and order, and put your mind into a state which is truly conscious of this good will and able to receive the fullness of its blessing? That is the first question to be asked of a man, 'Does he recognize the presence of this good will, and recognizing it, does he make himself worthy to receive it by daily prayer?'

The last thing a captain does before entering upon a long and difficult voyage, is to lay his ship to in a quiet harbor, and repair any defect of that delicate instrument of navigation, the compass, so that he can travel to the ends of the earth with all the force of the stars behind him.

This college is the tranquil harbor, before the wild fury of that sin-beset sea, that sea of threatening, hidden shoals of temptation, storms of passion and strife, the world! No one of you wants to make a mere sunshine sailor. You are going out into a storm-tossed world, and you must carry with you the compass of prayer, the guidance of the eternal stars!

IN MEMORIAM
The Kappa Chapter of Psi Upsilon deeply mourns the death of Percy Allen Knight of the Class of 1886. By his death the chapter loses a beloved brother, and the college, a loyal alumnus.

Mr. Knight was a journalist whose power and breadth of vision caused much favorable comment through the Middle West. His interest and attention were early engrossed by Army and Navy affairs, on which matters he was considered an authority.

The Kappa Chapter feels the loss of such a brother and extends its heart-felt sympathy to the bereaved family and friends.

“Scrub Teams”

The habit of a number of fellows going away and engaging in athletic contests with outside teams seems to be increasing. This practice the ORIENT strongly condemns. No matter how much care is taken to play under some “other name,” those not acquainted always consider such a team to be regularly representing the college. So long as athletics are organized, only duly organized teams should ever engage in contests. There is almost sure to be misunderstanding and the name of the college is very likely to suffer. We note that the Athletic Council has spoken against this practice and in this we believe the true sentiment of college and alumni concurs. The particular cases that have recently occurred may have been through ignorance of the rules in regard to such practice. We sincerely trust that there will be no need for further comment on this subject.

Student Council

During the fall the ORIENT commented upon the need at Bowdoin of some central undergraduate institution which could adequately represent student sentiment and could pass upon those matters of college custom which constantly appear throughout the year. At present there is no distinct body which can satisfactorily speak for the college as a whole. The old college jury is virtually defunct; it was hoped last year that the Interfraternity Council might fill such a need, but this, too, has proved inadequate, probably as not truly representative.

The ORIENT is not desiring to recall the old idea of “student government.” We really do not believe that student government is either possible or advantageous. The students do not desire to govern themselves nor is there any logical reason why they should be expected to do so. The faculty is given the authority and the faculty cannot delegate their responsibility. But there are many relations in which the students should have more expression of opinion, where the students themselves should maintain more oversight over their own organizations, and where there is necessity for matters of real college custom to be discussed.

To fill just such a need as this, it has been suggested that a Student Council be organized, composed of a suitable number of Seniors. We felt the need of some body similar to this only last fall, when at the opening of college it was desired that the annual rush be deferred for one day, and there was no real central authority to call upon to take action. We are glad to see that the matter is being considered again and most sincerely hope that the undergraduate body will take active steps to perfect such an organization.

The ORIENT does not believe in a committee to act under faculty supervision, but we do believe in a committee of students to pass upon student happenings. We would suggest a committee of nine or twelve, preferably twelve, to be elected by the whole college and not representative of parts or sections. The committee would be large enough to represent all fraternities, but should not be composed on fraternity lines, as we have seen the weakness of this idea in jury and in Inter-fraternity Council. The organization should be undergraduate distinctly.

Almost all the colleges have Senior societies or committees similar to that which is desired here. In some cases the organizations are as clubs, being self-perpetuating, and in others wholly elective. In both ideas there are advantages. It is not possible to state beforehand what the entire scope and possibility of such a committee may embrace. It will be strong or weak, just as the students desire it or ignore it. It should not be “faculty,” but there is no doubt that the opinion of men truly representing college sentiment would have weight with the faculty in cases of doubtful understanding. Without being egotistical, it still is true that at present there is no true undergraduate method of expressing opinion save in the Orient alone. This idea means the forming of that which would be Bowdoin. It might do much—in relation of man to man, class and class, in customs and traditions, and in doing actual work towards bringing men to college. Or it might do little. At any rate, let us see what it can do! The Orient hopes discussion will be continued, and would recommend that the class presidents call meetings to consider the matter further, and that final action by means of a mass meeting be taken before it is too late in the year.

BUGLE PRIZES

March first was the date set as the one before which all material was to be submitted in the competition for the Bugle Prizes. Since, however, no reminder of the date was posted it has been decided to extend the time to March 14, and since no prose write-ups have been submitted it has been decided not to offer a prize for write-ups but to give five dollars for the best "limerick" on any member of the faculty.

The other prize of two dollars will be offered as before for the best grind—other than a limerick—on any member of the faculty.

There is still a good opportunity for anyone to get these prizes which require but little work, and it is hoped that a considerable number of contributions will be received before Saturday, the 14th. All material must be handed to H. H. Burton, D. K. E. House.

DEBATING

The annual Bradbury Prize Debate will take place on Tuesday evening, March 17. The subject for debate is: "Aside from the question of amending the Constitution the Federal Government should exercise further control over public corporations doing interstate business."

The speakers are Harrison Atwood, '09; George P. Hyde, '08; Daniel J. Ready, '10; and Ralph O. Brewster, '10, alternate, for the affirmative. William L. Harris, '09; Arthur L. Robinson, '08; Jasper J. Stahl, '09; and Harold N. Marsh, '09, alternate, for the negative.

The resolution approved by President George T. Files will preside. The judges will be Professor Wilmot B. Mitchell, Professor William T. Foster, Mr. A. Keith Spofford of Bates College, Mr. Leonard A. Pierce, '05, of Harvard Law School, and a fifth member yet to be selected. The judges will choose three men to represent Bowdoin College in the annual debate with Syracuse University, which will be held in Memorial Hall on the evening of April 24. The subject of the Syracuse debate is the same as that of the Bradbury Prize Debate.

Other debates in English VII, this semester are as follows: March 10, informal discussion, "Semester examinations should be abolished." Discussion opened and closed on the affirmative by F. T. Smith, '08; and the negative by J. C. Clark, '08.

March 24. Debate, "All corporations engaged in interstate commerce should be required to take out a Federal charter on terms which are not authorized by law prescribe?" Affirmative, R. E. Fisher, '10, and G. A. Buck, '09; negative, D. M. McDade, '09, and C. N. Abbott, '08.

April 7, formal discussion, "Secretary Taft rather than Governor Hughes should be nominated for President by the Republican party." The discussion opened and closed on the affirmative by H. H. Burton, '09, on the negative by R. O. Brewster, '09.

April 28. Debate, "In the larger New England cities, all the powers of the city government should be vested in a commission of not more than nine men, elected by the voters at large, without any other representative body." Affirmative, F. L. Pennell, '08; and R. M. Pennell, '09; Negative, F. V. Delavina, '08, and J. M. Boyce, '08.

On Friday, February 28, under the Interscholastic Debating League of Bowdoin, Portland High defeated Augusta by a narrow margin. This evening in Lewiston, Lewiston and Edward Little High schools will debate upon the same question of Cuban annexation. Portland High will meet the winning team some time in May, in a debate to be held in Memorial Hall.

CLASS ELECTIONS

At the meeting of the Senior Class on Monday, J. A. Davis of Westbrook was elected historian and W. W. Fairclough of Richmond was chosen squad leader.

The Sophomore Class held a meeting in Memorial Hall on Tuesday at one o'clock. Gupill was chosen squad leader, Philip Morss, pianist, and Cobath, track captain. It was voted not to have a Sophomore Hop this year.

In the absence of President Phipps, the Freshman Class Meeting, held last Friday noon, was presided over by Vice-President Swan. William F. Merrill was elected leader of the class squad, and R. P. Hine, class pianist. Appropriations were voted for the squad and for the Bingle insert. A committee was appointed for the collection of the assessment. W. N. Emerson was elected manager of the Class Relay Team, which is to run against Bates.

GLEE CLUB TRIPS

The Musical Clubs left on the 1:30 train February 27th, to give the annual concert in Farmington. They were greeted with a crowded house, every seat being sold in advance. Every number on the program was well rendered and there were many encores. The Bowdoin Clubs always receive a hearty welcome at Farmington. It is a Bowdoin town in every sense of the word and one that can furnish appreciative audiences. Several of the students accompanied the Clubs on this trip. The concert scheduled for Monday evening at Yarmouth has been postponed until March 9th.

FIRST HANDICAP MEET

Last Saturday was the end of the first week's track practice. In accordance with the plan outlined in the ORIENT last week, a handicap meet was held in the gym in the afternoon. A large squad of men have already reported to Captain Atwood and some promising material has been found. Below is a list of the events and the entries together with the winners. No phenomenal work was done, but the result of the try-out was all that could be expected.

To Bowdoin Men

A PERSONAL WORD FROM THE PRESIDENT

The college men who obtain the best temporary or permanent positions in July are usually the ones who start looking for them in January. Before you get entangled with any expensive or inefficient employment agency or before you start on a more or less aimless individual search for the position you desire, it will be worth your while to learn about our Co-operative Membership. We are an organization of college men for college men. We can save you time, travel, trouble and money by furnishing you with accurate information while in college and by securing you a desirable position or business opportunity when out of college. There are no involved contracts, no costly commissions, no reel tape, no strings attached to our service.

We think we solve an old problem in a new and better way. Will you let us prove it to you? Just write for particulars, stating your needs.

KENNEBEC ALUMNI ASSOCIATION

Tenth Annual Banquet at Hallowell House

The 10th annual meeting of the Kennebec Bowdoin Alumni Association was held last evening at the Hallowell House, and from seven o'clock until past midnight, when "Auld Lang Syne" was sung, the name and spirit of old Bowdoin were in the air. About thirty graduates of the college were present and the occasion was a thoroughly enjoyable one for all. The banquet was one of Landlord Stone's best, and was followed by two hours of speaking. Prof. Henry L. Chapman, for nearly forty years on the faculty of Bowdoin, was present to bring the message of the college, and was given a great greeting. Earlier this winter he has attended the meetings of the Alumni in Boston, New York, Washington and Portland, carrying to the sons of Bowdoin the good word of the splendid work which the college is doing, and of the prosperity it is now enjoying. He said that the addition of $250,000 to the endowment fund is absolutely assured. Other speakers called upon by Dr. W. S. Thompson, '75, who presided as toastmaster, were: C. B. Burleigh, '87; M. S. Holway, '82; J. C. Minot, '96; A. M. Goddard, '82; John R. Gould, '85; F. J. C. Little, '89; Farnsworth G. Marshall, '93; and Robert A. Cony, Jr., '07.

Officers were elected for the coming year as follows:

President, Hon. O. D. Baker, '68; vice-presidents, Hon. H. S. Webster, '67, and C. B. Burleigh, '87; secretary and treasurer, J. C. Minot, '96; executive committee, Dr. O. S. C. Davies, '79; Dr. W. S. Thompson, '75; F. J. C. Little, '89. There was an unusually large number of young Alumni present, no fewer than four members of last June's graduating class being in the gathering. The very pretty banquet menus had on the front page a halftone showing the famous twin spires of King chapel above the trees, and on the last page was a list of the sixty Bowdoin graduates living in this county.

THE FEBRUARY QUILL

The February Quill opens with the '68 Prize Oration, "The Dominion of the Sea." The essay is of unusual literary excellence. It is a pleasure to read an article that upholds the best traditions of undergraduate work. The style is always mature, and in places has much rhythmical beauty. The author has read deeply and well. There are literary echoes from the classics, the Bible, Wordsworth, Tennyson, and Shakespeare; and the best thing about them is that they are not dragged in by the forelock, but seem to come voluntarily to serve one who knows them well. So far as the substance of the essay is concerned, a carping critic might object to the lowering of thought and style in the last third of the essay where the Big Stick is waved and a big American navy advocated. It is a pity also that the very apt quotation from "Locksley Hall" with which the essay concludes appears, through careless proof reading, as prose. But these are very minor defects. The essay as a whole would rank well, we believe, with literary work done in any other of our smaller American colleges; and we have never read an undergraduate essay which opens so effectively.

The short lyric, "Death," in memory of one whose bright looks and sunny disposition are still warmly cherished by the whole college, is the heartfelt tribute of a friend. Thought and form are fittingly united; and the short verses, simple though they are, linger in the memory.

"Captain Lijah's Visit" is a local sketch in which the Yankee dialect is well handled. For a first contribution it is distinctly creditable.

The six lines on "Charity" are correctly written, and express a thought which the undergraduate very rarely sins by forgetting.

The "Credulity of New England" is an essay not up to the Quill standard. Although the idea is good one and although it is amplified by attendant quotation, the essay is too short to develop the thought carefully, and is distinguished neither by style nor substance.

The short lines on "Childhood" are an interesting experiment. Whether or not the last two lines of each stanza are consciously lengthened, the effect is good as summing up the general impression made upon the childish mind, whereas the details of the picture come in short, broken lines. Poetry reminiscent of childhood is always delightful; and the verses here seem genuine and sympathetic.

"Under the Big Rock" is a story told in dialect by an Indian guide. Never having carried on an extensive conversation with such a character, we are unable to say how successful a reproduction this is. We can say, however, that the conversation is admirably handled; and we commend this sketch to writers of fiction whose only method of introducing characters is: "He said," and "She said."

The lines on the Bowdoin Seal are smooth, graceful and suggestive; although in these days of bacteriology, the word "germs" should perhaps be relegated to the laboratory rather than used to express the aspirations of youth to virtue. But the thought conveyed by these verses is one for which we may be grateful.

The pages of "Silhouettes" are most properly used to comment upon the good fortune of the college in her recently acquired possession of the Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Graduate Scholarship. The editorial is admirably written and will, we trust, be read with attention.

The February Quill as a whole, then, is a well-rounded number creditable to the board and to the college. In closing this review we should like to call attention to one or two general considerations. For some time the weakest department of the Quill has been its fiction. Literary essays have a most important place; but the Quill should also encourage short story writing; to us it has also seemed a pity that the "Gray Goose Tracks" have been given up. A column devoted to humorous but critical comment on college matters, written in a tongue which we could understand, would do much service. Neither the Quill nor the Orient is as independent in some respects as might be wished. In a live college community like ours there is always something to criticize; and it is a pity if there is no place for the expression for sane, humorous, undergraduate comment on matters of college policy and administration except in the Bugle. Verbum sap!

Last Friday evening Alpha Rho Chapter of Kappa Sigma held its second formal dance since the opening of its new chapter house. The dance was held in Pythian Hall, which was decorated with red, white and green streamers, the fraternity colors. At the head of the hall was placed the fraternity's shield set with colored electric lights. Dancing began at nine o'clock and lasted till long after midnight.

The patronesses were Mrs. Frances B. Phipps of Chelsea, Mass., Mrs. William Dewitt Hyde, Mrs. Franklin C. Robinson, and Mrs. George T. Files. Kendrie's Orchestra furnished the music, and Given of Brunswick was caterer. The committee in charge of the dance consisted of Delavina and Lowell from 1908; Files and Moulton from 1909; Ballard, '10, and Phipps, '11.

PROVISIONAL COMMENCEMENT APPOINTMENTS

OUR NEXT COLLEGE PREACHER

The Bowdoin College preacher this coming Sunday will be the Rev. Edward Cummings of Boston, minister of the South Unitarian Church. Dr. Cummings was graduated from Harvard College in '83, from the Divinity School in '85, and then went abroad to study as the holder of a fellowship in social science. He studied sociology in England, France, Italy and Germany, and resided one winter in the Whitechapel district of London among the poor. On his return to this country he became a member of the Harvard faculty, teaching in the department of sociology, and was promoted from time to time until 1909, when he was called from his professorship to be the successor of Dr. Edward Everett Hale in the pulpit which he now occupies. This church is one of the leading churches of the Unitarian denomination in the country, and Dr. Hale is still its pastor emeritus. Dr. Cummings is an editor of the Quarterly Journal of Economics, president of the Massachusetts Civic League, and prominent as director in numerous philanthropic and charitable organizations for the poor, the blind, the criminal, meanwhile continuing his interest in social settlement work, an interest which was stimulated by his residence in the famous Toynbee Hall Settlement in '89. He is much sought after as lecturer and popular speaker, is a preacher of conspicuous power, and has a vital, modern, practical message that particularly impresses audiences of men. We have secured his presence at Bowdoin only after reiterated invitations and are most fortunate in finally securing his acceptance.

HANDICAP MEET

The second in the series of weekly handicap meets was held at the gymnasium last Saturday afternoon.
With a very few exceptions the entries in each event were the same as those of a week ago. Several handicaps were changed in each event. This served to make the contests much more hotly contested. The finals will be run off next Saturday, and the winners will be awarded the steins now on exhibition in the show-case in the gymnasium.

YORK COUNTY CLUB

The York County Club held its last meeting with Hobbs at the Beta Theta Pi House, Monday evening.
After a short business meeting Professor Mitchell spoke to the club on the Bowdoin of twenty years ago. "There can be no doubt," said Professor Mitchell, "that the college has made material advancement in the last twenty years.

Professor Mitchell related the experiences of a Freshman during his first week at college and talked at some length on the various diversions of the first year. Many traditions at present regarded as older than the college buildings are in fact only four or five years old. The system of fagging is an innovation. There was razooing then. Unmanageable Freshmen were either ducked, smoked out of their rooms or made to climb over the door. The rooms were heated by stoves, the coal being dumped before the door and the owner carrying it up stairs himself. The man who could not perform this last labor was considered disgraced. The attic floor furnished abundant kindling wood and no one hesitated to avail himself of this source of supply as it was charged in the item of general repairs.
Instead of having janitors, as at present, they had "endwomen.

The faculty had twelve members at that time.
Today there are twenty.

The courses which could be elected were very few,
all Freshmen being required to take Latin, Mathematics and Greek. Discipline in the class-room was much more lax than of late years; class-cutting was common and for many years this was a source of great worry on the part of the faculty. Finally they laid down stringent rules and these were never broken.

In regard to the morals of the college, Prof.
Mitchell said that during his four years' course, he never saw a man overcome by intoxication, that very few men smoked. The ministry called more men from Bowdoin than is the case at present. Prof.
Mitchell closed with a few anecdotes, after which refreshments were served.

This is the last meeting of the club this year but the club looks forward to next year with fair prospects and more men, as one of the objects of the association is to increase the York county representation here at Bowdoin.

COLLEGE TEA

The third and last of the series of college teas takes place this afternoon from four to six o'clock, in the Alumni Room of Hubbard Hall. It will be for the students, their friends and the people of Brunswick. The committee in charge of the affair consists of: Mrs. Robinson, chairman; Mrs. Whitte-er, Mrs. Allen Johnson, Mrs. Foster and Mrs. Hastings. All the students are most cordially invited to attend.

SUNDAY CHAPEL

At chapel, last Sunday afternoon, President Hyde spoke impressively on the contrast between a "wish" and a "will." He defined a will as a wish that has been concentrated and tempered until it is able to withstand the hard knocks of this practical and cruel world. To the saying so often heard, that "a man should choose the profession he likes and wishes for," President Hyde added the advice that he stop and consider all the things which must accompany this choice, including the inconsistencies, and enanglements with other matters of the world, which must be actively incurred to bring him success.
Then, if he decides that he can, and will, make the sacrifice, let him go ahead with the work, for his will, added to his inclinations, will crown his efforts with success.

Kendrie, 'ro, rendered a beautiful solo. A quart tette: Brown, '09; McGlone, '10; Richards, '11, and Kendrie, 'ro, sang a selection.

The Orient would especially call to the attention of the undergraduate body the series of talks upon the art collections that Professor Johnson is now kindly giving to the students every week. A knowledge of our own art treasures is an essential of education. If for no other reason, it is a necessity for any man who ever expects to show friends about the campus! The fellows should show their appreciation of this opportunity: The lectures will be given every Tuesday afternoon at two-thirty, the course continuing for a number of weeks.

An Obligation

There is such a continual cry for a new gymnasium and for an unlimited number of other improvements, that we feel obliged to put in a word, edgewise as it were, for the other side of the question. We forget that, through the generosity of Alumni and friends of the college, we are receiving in actual dollars and cents, several times the amount that we are paying for our college education. The recent donation of the Carnegie Fund now enables the college to secure and retain a faculty equal to that of any college of its size in the country. We fail to appreciate how we are enabled, through the size of the college and the personal interest of these men, to meet and know them intimately in fraternity, club and home.

In the field of material assistance, the college is giving us yearly the income of $125,000 in scholarships and prizes, alone. It is furnishing work, and obtaining positions for more than a hundred of its undergraduates. President Hyde annually recommends for important and lucrative positions, graduates who have done faithful work during their course. Ought we not to consider, not so much what we think Bowdoin should do for us, as what she is already doing?

1906 MAN ELECTED PRESIDENT OF HARVARD REPUBLICAN CLUB

Under the headline, "Hughes Man Elected President of the Republican Club," it was announced in last Saturday's Transcript that Walter A. Powers, Bowdoin, '06, now a second year law student at Harvard, had been elected President of the Harvard Republican Club. All the other officers of the club are Taft men, and the election of Powers is taken to mean that the club will not declare in favor of Taft at least until after the National Convention, when the club will of course support whoever is nominated.

MUSICAL CLUBS

The Glee, Mandolin and Guitar Clubs left on the 1.30 train, Friday, for the third trip of the season. On Friday evening they gave a concert in Norway, and in spite of the storm the house was well filled. The concert was much appreciated and there were many requests for a return engagement next season. It has been five years since the Bowdoin Clubs last visited Norway.

On Saturday evening the clubs gave a concert in Mechanic Falls. The audience, although small, did not lack enthusiasm. Their hearty applause showed that they were pleased with the program. About half of the men returned to Brunswick Saturday night, the others remaining for the dance. The trip was an enjoyable one and a success in every way.

Monday night the clubs gave an equally successful concert in Yarmouth to a good audience.

The steins to be given as prizes in the Handicap Meets are on exhibition in the gym. and are attracting considerable attention.
From the following six men will be picked the Freshman relay team: Purington, Kaulbach, Wiggum, Allen, L. Davis, and S. W. Pierce.
R. W. Smith, '06, was called home Saturday on account of his father's illness. He was in Norway with the Music Clubs at the time.
Adjourns were rather plentiful last Friday, being granted in French II., German II., Spanish II., Mathematics II., English V., and Greek II.
The reception and dance which were to have been given the Dramatic Club tomorrow at the Sherwood in Portland by Miss Sargent, will not take place.
On account of the illness of Kaulbach, '11, Piersen, '11, has been reinstated in his part in the Dramatic Club for this evening's performance in Portland.
The first informal discussion in English VII. was held in Hubbard Hall Tuesday evening. The subject was: "Should Semester examinations be abolished?"
Watson, '11, and Dennis, '11, walked to Yarmouthville Sunday, to get "limbered up" for their proposed walk to Boston the first part of the spring vacation.
Many of the students attended the play, "Tommy's Wife," which was given by the Senior Class of Brunswick High School, last Friday evening in the Town Hall.
In a meeting of the Junior Class in the gym, last Thursday at 4.30, R. H. Files, '09, was chosen squad leader; Cushing is again class pianist, and Atwood again class track captain.

Tuesday evening the Mendelssohn Club of Bath and the Brunswick Chorus held a joint rehearsal in Music Hall of Bath, under the baton of Ernest A. Crawford of Brunswick.

Harold Marsh, '09, was operated on for appendicitis at Dr. Cousins' Hospital in Portland on Thursday of last week. The operation was very successful and there is every prospect for a speedy and equally successful recovery.

The Morse High basketball team defeated the Sigma Lambda Nu team of the Lewiston High School Friday evening at the Y. M. C. A., 45 to 11, in a game of which the only features were the passing of the Bath team and the playing of Young at center.

In a lecture in Greek VIII., last Saturday, Professor Woodruff illustrated the play, Oedipus Tyrannus, with lantern slides taken from the first Greek play ever given in this country—that in which Governor Guild of Massachusetts and other famous men took part, at Harvard College.

Tomorrow evening Bath followers of the game will have a chance to see the greatest basketball game ever played in the Y. M. C. A., for it is then that the Portland High team which defeated Bath earlier in the season, will come over to play a return game and M. H. S. intends to win.

Tuesday at 2.30 Professor Henry Johnson gave the first of his talks on the Walker Art Building and its contents. There were about twenty students present. All who are unacquainted with Bowdoin's art treasures should make it a point to attend the remaining talks in the series which will come every Tuesday afternoon at the same hour.

It is reported that a special train will be run to Lewiston on the occasion of the performance of "The Jesters," by Maude Adams, the first of next month. The train will leave Bath at 6.30 and return after the performance, by this arrangement there will be no doubt among the patrons along the Lewiston-Bath division but that they will see the whole performance.

As one of the events of the Indoor Meet, the Bowdoin Fencing Team will meet a trio from the Augusta Pianelli Club. This time the Augusta team will put a stronger team against Bowdoin than before. The Saturday practice in the gym, continues as before and the trials for captain and members of the team will take place shortly before the event.

The second debate in the Bowdoin Interscholastic Debating League occurred in City Hall, Lewiston, March 6, between Lewiston High and Edward Little. The question for debate was: Resolved, "That granting the willingness of Cuba, the annexation of Cuba by the United States would be for the best interests of the United States." The judges decided in favor of Edward Little. The next and final debate in the series will be between Portland High and Edward Little at Portland. The former has already won on the same question from Augusta High School. This final debate will decide the interscholastic championship.

Considerable preparation is being made for the Indoor Meet of March 22. Relay and squad practice are being faithfully done. The Freshmen are showing up well for Relay Team which is to run Bates, March 17, in City Hall, at Lewiston, and again at the Indoor Meet. The men who are out are: H. K. Hine, Purington, Drecar, Wiggin, Allen, Kauf-bach, Fife, Stanley Pierce and L. Davis. P. I. Pierce, who was out for the team, through a fall has incapacitated himself for practice. Junior squad practice began at 8 P.M., and Sophomore at 9 P.M., Monday. Junior relay practice began Tuesday after-noon at four.

"JACK" LONDON'S NEW BOOK, THE IRON HEEL

The students who heard Mr. London lecture in Memorial Hall before the college three years ago, will read with interest his new book, "The Iron Heel," which has just been published. We print below a review of it by MacMillan & Co. of New York, the publishers:

LONDON'S STORY OF THE REVOLUTION

Never before has Jack London attempted so big and daring a subject as he has dealt with in his latest story, "The Iron Heel." Indeed, it is hardly too much to say that a bigger subject for a novel than the remaking of the whole present social system could scarcely be imagined. Whether this is to prove the great story of Socialism, the book that will unite and crystallize all the various elements of the movement, remains to be seen. Prophesies are always dangerous. But it is safe to say that it is a book to be read widely and to be reckoned with. To see this it is not necessary to agree with London in all his beliefs; none but avowed Socialists of the radical type will do that. But the power and sweep of the story, the grip of the drama that it unfolds are bound to make their appeal, while the unquestionable sincerity of the author will move even the most casual reader to thoughtfulness.

The scheme of the story is as ingenious as it is simple and convincing. The narrative is supposed to be contained in a manuscript written by the wife of Ernest Everhard, one of the leaders of the Social Revolution. It differs from "Looking Backward," and other books of that character, in that the events narrated begin practically in the present, and the history never loses touch with present conditions. In fact, it is the very reverse of the usual Utopian story, for while the final conquest of socialist ideals is clearly indicated, the story deals directly with the present system in an intensified form, and stops before ever the remedy has been applied. Granted the premises on which London's interpretation of conditions is founded, it must be conceded that he has held his imagination in check by constant reference to the facts; and this is what makes the picture so irresistibly convincing. This history of the reign of the capitalistic oligarchy does not make a pretty story, but it has the intense interest of those dramas of real life which are so much more impressive than any fiction.

Not that "The Iron Heel" is at all a mere socialist tract. It is emphatically a story of character and adventure. Ernest Everhard is one of the most genuine personages London has ever created. It may be there are some autobiographical touches in the character; at least Everhard's life reminds us of the author's in being packed full of movement and adventure. But a further and more interesting parallel is found in the fact that in this book London, who, like his hero, has been accused of being a decidedly cynical realist, reveals himself as a temendous enthusiast, an idealist whose belief in the possibilities of humanity is boundless. No one can resist the feeling that he is intensely in earnest, and this earnestness, coupled with his great literary and dramatic gift, makes "The Iron Heel" one of the most remarkable books of the day.

The MacMillan Company of 66 Fifth Avenue, New York, are the publishers. The price of the book is $1.50.

Alumni Notes

CLASS OF 1850

Trueman Summerfield Perry, son of Rev. Dan and Polly (Caldwell) Perry, was born 20 December, 1826, at Oxford, Maine. He received his early education in the public schools of several towns in which his father, a clergyman of the Methodist Episcopal Church, resided; and was prepared for college at Bridgton Academy. His course was cut short in his Junior year by failure of his eyesight, but he subsequently received his degree out of course. Compelled by the weakness of the optic nerve to abstain from reading for nearly fifteen years, he devised a simple writing machine similar to that employed by the historian, Prescott, and with the assistance of his wife, as a copyist, wrote many articles and poems that were published in the periodicals of the day. On recovery of the use of his eyes, he received an appointment as clerk in the document rooms of the United States Senate and resided in Washington until 1866. He then took up his residence at Bridgton, Me., and was licensed as a preacher by the Union Conference of Congregational Churches in 1871. He ministered to the churches in Sweden and Denmark, Me., until June, 1874, when he became pastor of the church at Cumberland Center, Me. A successful pastorate of twelve years here, was followed by one of seven years at Limerick, Me. In October, 1893, he removed to Orange Park, Florida, where for four years he was pastor of the Congregational Church and instructor in the Normal and Industrial School located there. Returning to Maine in 1897, he took up pastoral labors the following year in Waterford,
Me., where he continued in the active work of the ministry till he entered upon his eightieth year. The closing period of his life, attended by much weakness, was spent at Harrison, Maine, where he died 4 February, 1908.

Rev. Mr. Perry married first, 12 March, 1854, Elizabeth Green Hale, who died 21 December, 1889; and second, in 1892, Julia Rideout, who survives him.

Mr. Perry was not only a devoted minister of the gospel in his own land, but a friend of the oppressed and persecuted in all lands. His poem, entitled "How Long, Oh Lord, How Long," referring to the Armenian massacres and published in the Independent in 1896, represents the spirit and sympathies of the many, as well as his skill as a writer.

CLASS OF 1875

Herbert Gerry Briggs, the son of John Alphonso and Harriet (Farrar) Briggs, was born 8 February, 1853, at Auburn, Maine. He was prepared for college at Hebron Academy and entered Bowdoin in 1870, his residence then being at Freeport. His college course was twice interrupted and he received the degree of A.B. out of course in 1886. As an undergraduate he was prominent in baseball and was an editor of the Orient. He studied law at Portland, Me., in the office of Hon. William H. Clifford; at Pittsburgh, Penn., with Marcus A. Woodward; was admitted to the Cumberland County Circuit Court in 1883. He practiced his profession at Portland until 1894, giving especial attention to patent law. He then removed to Boston, where he continued in practice till his death, devoting himself chiefly to probate and real estate law. He was admitted to practice in the Massachusetts courts in March, 1895, and four years later was appointed an examiner of titles to the court of land registration. His residence was at Chelsea, Mass., when he died 14 February, 1908. At Portland Mr. Briggs was prominent in political life as a Republican, served on the school board, in the city council, and on the board of aldermen. He was also postmaster of the city for a period under President Harrison. Mr. Briggs married 1 September, 1886, Clara Ernestine Hanson of Buxton, Me., sister of Frederick E. Hanson (Bowdoin 1870), who survives him with two children, Clara Perry and Frederic Ernest Briggs.

THE TWENTY-SECOND ANNUAL EXHIBITION AND THIRTEENTH ANNUAL INDOOR MEET

The annual Indoor Meet, to be held this evening in the Town Hall, promises to be one of the most successful in years. Besides the usual number of attractive entries, interest will be aroused by the fencing bout between another Pianelli Second Team of Augusta, Coburn, captain, Church and Jones, and the same Bowdoin team as formerly, Bridge, '09, captain, Tobey, first year Medina, and F. T. Smith, '08, with Fairclough, '08, as substitute. Trials to determine the Bowdoin team were held last Friday, a special try-out being given the men afterward by White, the regular coach, and Sawtelle, one of Pianelli's best men. Fred Lee of the Pianelli and Fairclough of Bowdoin will be judges, with Wardwell of Augusta for referee.

A second star attraction is the exhibition boxing bout between Clifford, '10, and McKusick, '11. Both men are good boxers and even an exhibition bout will be interesting.

DRAMATIC CLUB
Last Friday evening the Bowdoin College Dramatic Club presented "Half-Back Sandy," at Kotzschmar Hall, Portland, and the performance was a complete success in every way. The cast was picked and drilled under the careful direction of Miss Emily Curtis of Brunswick. The play was given for the benefit of the Portland Charitable Dispensary. Through the kindness of Loring, Short & Harmon, Manager Timberlake and Assistant Manager Morss arranged a Bowdoin window, which was artistically decorated with banners and flags. Also, in this window was the club show-board, upon which were a picture of the club and pictures of the individual members of the cast. The furniture used in the show was mission and was supplied by T. F. Foss & Sons of Portland. The ferns and palms were supplied by Harmon, the florist.
As a "curtain raiser" a little comedy entitled "The Littlest Girl" was presented. The cast was as follows:

Davenport, Rich, '09.
Little Girl, Lester's Opera Co.
Van Bibber, Donnell, '08.

This little comedy was greatly appreciated. After its presentation, the curtain rose for the performance of the evening. The cast of characters was as follows:

CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION
Although the Christian Association at the Thursday evening meeting of March 5 was unfortunate in not having General Chamberlain of the class of '52, who was ill at the time, as a speaker, it was fortunately able to hear an address on "The Purpose and Work of the National and State Y.M.C.A." by Jefferson C. Smith, General Y.M.C.A. Secretary for Maine, and formerly local Secretary for Bar Harbor. His address was briefly as follows:

"There is considerable confusion as to what the Christian Association is. It is the greatest brotherhood as representative of the church in specializing in young men. It has about 500,000 members,—seven times the standing army of the United States of America, banded for Christian service. There are 92,000 men in Bible Study, and one college man out of every four in the Bible classes. And they are not "molly coddles," but the strongest kind of men who are leaders in this work. The day and night schools of the cities can reach the slums and the poor who have only the "off" hours for study and recreation. There are 2,000,000 people who regularly attend the course of lectures given by the Y. M. C. A. in connection with this work. The association is educating from forty to fifty thousand men.

In physical work, the association gym's are proving an invaluable help to poor men who have little or no opportunity to get the recreation which they must have. The men who have to work in crowded, ill-ventilated factories, storehouses, "sweat-shops," and offices, are the people who are being benenited in this way. The association also has regular athletic teams, which do splendid work in contests with rival teams,—there are 4,000 men who regularly represent these.

In the country, where men are more difficult to reach, and to hold together, classes in Bible Study are being conducted very successfully. There are two hundred men in Bible study in Aroostook County alone. Boys, who demand continual activity, and chafe at all restraint, are the hardest to enlist in united work of this kind; but an instance of what the association is doing among them may be seen from an incident happening at the time of the recent fire in Portland. Four hundred boys were assembled in a farewell meeting in one of the Portland churches, when an alarm of fire was rung in, and the engines and the usual excited throng began to hurry by, yet only five or six out of those four hundred boys left the room to go to the most fascinating of youthful attractions, the fire. If Niagara could be harnessed up, mechanical power for the whole world could be obtained, yet the 800,000 boys in the United States of America harnessed to some high purpose and definite work would supply an equally great power.

The army work is another great branch of the association's activity. It is the hardest thing in the world to keep a man out of mischief when he has nothing to do but to keep still and in one place, especially in cases where toughs of the city come in contact with the clean-minded, wholesome youth from the farm. Clean rooms, tidy quarters, healthful and cleanly associations under the charge of Y. M. C. A. boys, are the means of construction, this, and the beauty of it is that the cities are officially recognizing the importance of this work by giving funds to the workers, and asking advice about the fitness of the different army men for promotion. Because the army men were found suspicious of signing their names to pledges, in Portland a "Vagabond Club" was formed, composed of ninety-two men, has been successfully organized.

The colored man, one of the country's greatest problems, is also being reached by the Y. M. C. A., although only 10,000 out of 2,000,000 are at present directly influenced by it. This problem can only be definitely solved by the negro, himself.

For the railroad men and employees of great mines and corporations, cities and corporations are establishing buildings with fine reading rooms, lodgings and conveniences, and are offering comfort to these employees at the lowest possible price. One of these buildings is to be put up at Deering this spring by the M. C. R. R. They are put in charge of Y. M. C. A. officers. At the Pennsylvania mines magnificent service is being done for the miners, and the boy employees in this way. In New York all the churches have combined under the leadership of association men and are giving the 1,500,000 immigrants who yearly enter the country help as much help as possible, and, where they can be intimately reached, a fair start in their new life, most of them being utterly ignorant of the new conditions. The Italians make good railroad men, and for work among its employees, one line has appropriated to the Y. M. C. A., $931,000 for social work. The government has built four big club houses, and has four more of this kind at work under Y. M. C. A. officers for employees in the construction of the new canal. This fact shows how the Y. M. C. A. is recognized.

The feature of association work from now on, however, will probably be in inducing young men to regular church attendance. In general the work will always be for the upbuilding, mentally, morally, and physically of men.

The Y. M. C. A. work of this State is in charge of twenty efficient business men, while secretaries are employed to go about and to bring into active cooperation all the different branches. There are two fine Bowdoin men who are leaders in the State work here: David Porter, '06, who is engaged as lecturing on the Y. M. C. A. among preparatory schools at present, and Clarence M. Robinson, '06, employed in association work at Waterville.

The annual Bradbury Prize Debate occurred in Memorial Hall, Tuesday evening, March 17.

Professor George T. Files, president, and Professor William T. Foster, Mr. A. Keith Spofford, A.B., of Bates College, and Mr. Leonard A. Pierce, A.B., '05, of the Harvard Law School, acted as judges.

The question for debate was: Resolved, that aside from the question of amending the Constitution, the Federal government should exercise further control over quasi-public corporations doing interstate business.

The following speakers, in order of address, represented the affirmative: Brewster, '09; Hyde, '08, and Readcy, '10. The negative team was composed of Harris, '09; A. L. Robinson, '08, and Stahl, '09.

The judges awarded the decision to the negative, and selected the following men to debate Syracuse University on Friday evening, April

Summer Baseball

Particularly interesting to all college men is the discussion that has been general of late in regard to college men playing summer baseball. The question has received particular attention owing to the fact that at Williams and at Wesleyan within the last few weeks the college body has taken opportunity to express their sentiment by means of vote in mass meeting. In both cases the vote was largely in favor of permitting the practice, although under their rules both colleges forbid it at present. In the past Bowdoin, as Maine, Bates, Colby and Brown, has been in favor of permitting men to play summer ball, provided they do not engage under major league agreement. On the other hand several colleges have consistently expressed strong disapproval of this practice, as Harvard, and Dartmouth who recently disqualified seven of her "varsity" players. There is something to be said in favor of summer baseball within recent years in that, as now practically all important baseball leagues are under national agreement and protection, the rules made a number of years ago for Bowdoin players really are much more restrictive than when they were designed, when there were numbers of "out-law" leagues. Those who favor summer baseball argue that it gives the poor student a chance to help pay college expenses, and that it is better to frankly permit the custom rather than to have men using assumed names, while others say that amateur baseball should be on the same basis as are other sports, that is, that no professional should be allowed to represent a college. There is much to be said on both sides, and it would be interesting to see what is the general Bowdoin sentiment on this question.

The Debating Council is in receipt of a letter from Cornell asking for another debate this year. The council has instructed Manager Harris to communicate with Cornell regarding terms.
MASS-MEETING ON MONDAY

A mass-meeting will be held on Monday evening at seven o’clock in Memorial Hall, to submit to the undergraduates the question of having a student council and to decide how this council shall be organized, if it is decided to form one. There will also be considered matters of interest to every one in regard to our relations with preparatory school men.

PRAY ENGLISH PRIZE

The subject for the Pray English Prize of Fifty Dollars, given annually by Dr. Thomas J. W. Pray, ’44, to the best scholar in English Literature and Original English Composition, has been announced. The essays, which are to be of about 2,500 words in length, are to be written on the violation of the three dramatic unities, the characters of Portia and Shylock, and the poetical qualities of Shakespeare’s Merchant of Venice.

The essays are to be written before Commencement, when a committee, consisting of Alumni, will pass judgment upon them.

MEETING OF THE PROCTORS

At a recent meeting of the Board of Proctors, it was voted unanimously that each of the eight men responsible for the damage to Appleton Hall on March 12th, be required to pay to the Treasurer of Bowdoin College, in person, one-eighth of the charges for repairs before twelve o’clock, noon, Thursday, March 19th, on penalty of suspension from college for failure to comply with this requirement.

The Board of Proctors wishes to state further, that the wilful damaging of Bowdoin College property is so repugnant to the sense of honor and loyalty of the student body as a whole that future cases, should they arise, may be dealt with more severely.

NOTICE

All men who have competed for the Orient board this year are requested to submit to the Editor-in-Chief an accurate account of their work done in competition, in order that each man’s record may be verified. Each man is notified to submit a report, and if possible files of Orient, in which will be marked all matter of any kind that each contestant has had printed. This is that all may have a fair show in elections. This must be submitted before Monday noon sure.

SUNDAY CHAPEL

On Sunday the college enjoyed the rare pleasure of hearing Rev. Edward Cummings of the South Unitarian Church of Boston as Bowdoin College preacher. In the afternoon his address in the chapel was briefly as follows:

"We all know the fairy story of the 'House that Jack Built,"' but how many of us comprehend the house that Will Power is building? He is building this house of bricks, and of invisible bricks which are the hopes, aspirations, intentions, and acts of our lives. All of us are making brick houses under the direction of Will Power. The walls of these houses are character, and are subject to constant change and improvement. In fact, it is a sign of decay if we are perfectly satisfied with our brick house. No matter how rich we may be we must build it ourselves, and this is the reason why some poor people have the most beautiful and permanent dwellings, and some rich people the most dilapidated structures. It is not a question of worldly wealth or poverty that tells how well we are building, it is to what extent we are developing our larger selves, our acquired personalities. No matter how fine the materials for this construction of physical, mental, moral and spiritual upbuilding, these houses of character will never reach perfection. There will always be opportunity for improvement. Be true to today's vision, and tomorrow you will be granted more and clearer light!

A quartette consisting of Brown, Kendrie, Richards and MacGlone rendered a selection, and at the close of the talk Mrs. S. A. Thompson of the Congregational Church choir sang a very beautiful solo.

Although there was quite a heavy shower in the evening the Questionaire in the Y. M. C. A. room was well attended.

THE PINE NEEDLE BLIGHT

Professor Lee has received a limited number of blanks containing a list of general questions about this disease of the pine, which are to be filled out by students from observations made in their part of the State. The object of giving out these blanks is to determine the localities which are infected as, from time to time, inquiries are received from people desiring to know what can be done to check the destruction and spreading. These slips will be given by Professor Lee to the members of his classes in Biology first, and the remaining copies to other students. The nature of the disease of the Bowdoin pines has not been definitely decided as yet, but is probably a species of parasitic fungus which attacks the first year needles and later the second year crop, causing the tree to present a brown appearance and finally to die.

Mr. Haven Metcalfe, Pathologist in charge of the United States Laboratory of Forest Pathology, and the State man who is a specialist in determining this Pine Needle Blight, have personally visited Brunswick to examine the Bowdoin trees, but have not, as yet, made their final decision as to the nature of the disease.

PENOBSCOT COUNTY CLUB

A meeting of the Penobscot Club was held with Crowley, '08, at the Alpha Delta Phi House last Friday evening. The club has been reorganized very successfully. After a very pleasant evening and refreshments, the following officers were elected for the remainder of the year: Crowley, '08, president; Crowell, '10, vice-president; Crosby, '10, secretary, and Hurley, '09, treasurer: the executive committee: Crowley, '08, chairman, Clark, '08, Brewster, '09, Collath, '10, and Harry Robinson, '11, who is sick at home in Bangor. The other members of the club who were present are: White, '11; A. C. Gibson, '11; A. T. Gibson, '11, and Donnelly, '11. Several other men in college are eligible to election to the club. They are Bridge, '09; Alfred Stone, '10; Emerson, '11; Hawes, '11, and Melville Gould, '11.

Although the club has postponed organization until a time in the year when other activities are occupying the time and attention of most of the students, there is every evidence of its having a pleasant and successful year.

THIRD HANDICAP MEET

The finals in the series of handicap meets were held at the gymnasium last Saturday. The spring-like weather brought out a good crowd of spectators.

The steins were awarded to the men who had won the greatest number of points in an event for the three consecutive Saturdays.

The list of entries and the handicaps were the same as those published in last week's Orient.

The winners of last Saturday's events were:

45-Yard Hurdles.—1st, Fiske; 2nd, Pennell; 3rd, Smith.

Pole Vault.—1st, F. Davis; 2nd, Burton; 3rd, Wiggin.

High Jump.—1st, Atwood; tied for 2nd place, Pennell, Bridgman.

As in the previous meets, no handicaps were published, nor were the times or distances given out. The meets have been received with great favor by the men who have expressed themselves fully satisfied with the handicaps and the officials.
The following men received steins:
45-Yard Hurdles.—Fiske.
Pole Vault.—F. Davis.
Shot Put.—Newman.
High Jump.—Atwood.
The officials were: Clerk of course, Kenneth Teft; starter, Burt Morrell; judge at finish, Harold Toby.

Professor Robinson is exceedingly busy at the present time. Besides his regular work he is act-

On Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 Professor Henry Johnson continued his series of lectures on the Art Building and contents, with a talk on the Bowdoin Gallery, in which most of the paintings and drawings were presented by the Hon. James Bowdoin, for whom the college is named. A good attendance of students was manifested.

Last Saturday evening Professor Sills gave a "Classical" Dinner in honor of Julius Caesar, to the members of the Faculty Dining Club on the Ides of March. In addition to the usual members of this bachelors' club, Mr. Hastings, a former member, was present. Professor Woodruff and Dr. Cummings were the other invited guests. Each member of the club responded to a toast in Latin. A very pleasant evening was passed. Mr. Jump, who was the only member absent, had been engaged to preach at Mount Holyoke College in South Hadley, Massachusetts, on the following day.

A meeting of the Board of Proctors was held with Professor Foster at 7:30 Saturday night. An assessment for the glass broken with snowballs last week, was voted to be made upon the men who enjoy this kind of sport, or an alternative of an immediate dismissal from college if the assessment was not paid by Thursday last. Acts of this kind shun the fair name of the college, and are radically unfair, for the men who do the mischief are not always apprehended, and the innocent have to pay a percentage of it on their term bills. It is not upholding college tradition, for acts of this kind of wholesale destruction of common property occur seldom more than two or three times in a decade. The matter should be looked at in the light of fairness, and not of a good joke,—though the appeal to the pocketbook will doubtless have greater weight.

To Bowdoin Men

A PERSONAL WORD FROM THE PRESIDENT

The college men who obtain the best temporary or permanent positions in July are usually the ones who start looking for them in January. Before you get entangled with any expensive or inefficient employment agency or before you start on a vague or less than a useless individual search for the position you desire, it will be worth your while to learn about our Co-operative Membership. We are an organization of college men for college men. We can save you time, travel, trouble and money by furnishing you with accurate information while in college and by securing you a desirable position or business opportunity when out of college. There are no involved contracts, no costly commissions, no red tape, no strings attached to our service. We think we solve an old problem in a new and better way.

WILL YOU LET US PROVE IT TO YOU? Just write for particulars, stating your needs.

CLASS OF 1853

CLASS OF 1860

The interesting and timely paper entitled, "Attempting too Much in Medical Education," read by Dr. Frederic H. Gerrish at the meeting of the American Academy of Medicine at Pittsburgh, January 2, 1908, and printed in the Bulletin of the following month, has also been issued as a separate pamphlet.
INDOOR MEET
Successful Event Held at Town Hall, Last Friday—Junior Class Wins the Meet, and Had the Winning Squad

Last Friday evening the Twenty-second Annual Exhibition and Thirteenth Annual Indoor Meet was held in the Town Hall. To say the least the meet was a success—as was evidenced by the large crowd present and the smooth manner in which the events were run off.

There were several features of special interest. The first was the relay race between the Bates Freshmen and the Bowdoin Freshmen. The rivalry was intense, as only last week at the Bates Indoor Meet the Bates Freshmen succeeded in defeating the 1911 team representing Bowdoin. But as in last year’s race, the Bowdoin Freshmen succeeded in pulling out victories. Another feature was the fencing match between the ‘varsity fencing team and the team representing the Pianelli Fencing Club of Augusta. Nine bouts were fought, Bowdoin for the second time during the year scoring a victory over the Pianelli trio. The Bowdoin team consisted of Bridge, ’09, Capt.; Smith, ’08; and Tobey, Med. ’10. Coburn, Capt., Church, and Jones represented Pianelli. Bridge excelled for Bowdoin, while Church of Pianelli won all his bouts. The third feature was the breaking of the hall record in the high jump by Edwards, ’10, who, after tying Brigham, ’08, at 5 feet 6 inches, cleared the bar at 5 feet 6¼ inches. Pennell, ’09, also made a good showing in the jump. There was some surprise in the drills, 1909 and 1908 taking first and second places respectively, 1910 and 1911 taking third and last places. This is the third time a Junior squad has ever won the drill, it having been won by 1896 and 1898.

Both the Class Championship Cup and the Drill Cup went to 1909, which they hold for one year. The final score was 1909—28; 1908—22; 1910—18; 1911—4.

The following is a summary of the events:

Class Drills—Won by 1909; 1908, 2nd; 1910, 3rd.

Final heat, won by Sanborn, '08; Edwards, '10, 2nd; Leavitt, '08, 3rd. Time, 3 3-5 seconds.

High Jump—Tie between Brigham, '08, and Edwards, '10, for 1st and 2nd places; Pennell, '09, 3rd. Height, 5 feet 6 inches. Edwards afterwards cleared 5 feet 6-2 inches.

Putting 12 Pound Shot—Rowell, '10, 1st; Newman, '10, 2nd; Burton, '09, 3rd. Distance, 42 feet 6 inches.

Pole Vault—Burton, '09, 1st; Davis, '11, 2nd; Wiggins, '11, 3rd. Height, 9 feet 2 inches.

RELAY RACES

1908—Files, Leavitt, Purington, Donnell, Hyde, Timberlake, Sanborn, Smith.

Won by 1908, 23 3-5 seconds.

1909—Scares, Smith, Atwood, Stone, Carter, Pennell, Burton, Simmons.

1911—Wiggins, Purington, Pierce, Treer, Kaulbach, Sullivan, Allen, Davis.

Won by 1908. Time 23 4-5 seconds.

The Bowdoin Freshmen defeated the Bates Freshmen. Time, 24 seconds. The Bates Freshmen—Kearney, Lovely, Wittekind, Preston, Leavitt, Sargent, Clason, Matthews, Peaks.

Morse High of Bath defeated Brunswick High, time 25 seconds; and Lewiston High defeated Edward Little High of Auburn, time, 24 3-5 seconds.

THE MARCH QUILL

Two interesting features of this number at once attract attention: the contributions are all from undergraduates, and chiefly from the lower classes. This may not be "the record" instance, but the reviewer does not recall any other issue of which the same could be said.

A third feature of greater importance discloses itself on slight examination, and that is the real and varied interest, as well as excellence, of the pieces. We are taken to India by a Hindu, and to the Madeira Islands by one who has been there; while stories of the sea and of rustic life are told with "the eye upon the object."

"India" is too vast a theme to be more than lightly touched in six brief Quill pages. What we here find concerning its geographical, religious and political characteristics, as viewed from the inside, and what we know of the writer's lectures upon his native country, suggest the hope that he may publish, in the Quill and elsewhere, more detailed accounts of Indian conditions and life. The view here taken of the Aryan ancestry of the western peoples, it should be said, is no longer held by present-day ethnologists, although the kinship of western languages with the Sanscrit is undisputed. If the paper were anonymous, and if the occasional "our" were changed to "the" or "their," nothing in the language or style would indicate that the writer was not a born New Englander.

In "The Healing of the Sea"—a study of grief and despondency combined with a stirring description of a coast storm—the thought is clear and true, and the expression is correct, terse and animated. If the meteorology seems a little inconsistent, and John Staples's physical endurance something more than human, the reader is still impressed with the promising merit of the piece. Toward the end, "ought he try"—unless a typographical error—seems to be used according to the mistaken analogy of dure and need, which omit to with the infinitive.

"Funchal, Madeira," has the interest attaching to first-hand descriptions in which the writer confines himself to what he has seen and experienced. In that out-of-the-way corner of the world, the writer's evident appreciation of color and picturesque ness finds welcome material which he turns to good account. So fully does he convince us of his accuracy in observation, that we accept his surprising picture of men, women and children gathering grapes in the vineyards in February, in the latitude of Savannah, Georgia. With one or two lapses in correctness, the style is clear and pleasing.

"The Widow Winslow's Rebellion" meets some important requirements of the short story. The spirited scene at the store, in the beginning, is the best part of the narrative, but the whole is lively and entertaining, and ends satisfactorily. Its truth to nature is also marked, except in the device chosen for putting the reader in possession of the necessary preliminaries to the main action. To do this in a perfectly natural way is a problem that has taxed the ingenuity of dramatists and fictionists from the time of Euripides; and in this instance the difficulty is not happily solved in the conversation between the widow and the dog Rex.

The principal contribution in verse, the metrical rendering of an extended passage from the Aeneid, opens possibilities of discussion far beyond the present limits, as Arnold's well known essay "On Translating Homer" shows. To translate poetry into poetry, in the full sense of the words, is a thorny undertaking, which some have declared impossible. To satisfy at the same time the original language and the modern reader, to make an accurate and adequate translation that reads like an original English poem, may be held a heavier task than to compose in English a poem equal in merit to the foreign original. And yet, partly on account of the difficulty, it would be hard to find any more fruitful training for the verse writer than to master the meaning and spirit of a great foreign poem—Latin or Greek especially—and then to do his best toward reproducing it in truly native idiom. In the present case, we have an earnest and encouraging effort of this kind, in which the writer shows a good appreciation of the poetic quality of the original and considerable skill in the management of blank verse. The thirty-nine Latin lines are rendered by only fifty-two of the shorter English metre, while Cranch's blank verse translation of this passage takes fifty-three. And Cranch's version, though naturally superior in spirit and finish, is not in all respects superior; the present rendering is on the whole commendably closer, and some phrases are more neatly turned. The temptation to expansion has been well resisted, except in two or three places; e.g. quo ruis? need not be made into a whole English line, and sic orae effato is too heavily given as "Having said these things." Huc concede is mistakenly rendered "Desist."

In "Thought" the metres and rhymes are correct, and the main idea is excellent. The only adverse criticism is that in some lines the exigencies of rhyme and metre are allowed to bring in superfluous language—the besetting sin of all verse writers. The piece would be improved by cutting down the seven stanzas to six, or perhaps to five.

The brief allegory entitled "The Ideal" presents a fine thought in worthy form. Here the fifth and sixth lines should be condensed into one.

The first four stanzas of "To an Old Galley" are full of vigor, which, had it been maintained in the other three, would have given us a piece of uncommon force. The verse mechanism is good throughout.

Looking through back numbers of the Quill, one is struck with the prevailing serious, even religious, tone of the verse. While the highest form of poetry is deeply serious and should be chiefly cultivated, there is plenty of room for lighter themes, in which young writers often do admirably well. It would seem that this periodical ought to be an outlet for graceful wit and humor, which in many institutions require a special publication. Bowdoin unquestionably has her share of these desirable qualities, whose expression hitherto has been confined to the rather sad and solemn pages of the Bugle.

The Editor's well put warning against provincialism in college life, is a good illustration of the kind of influence that Quill editors should exercise in the college community to a greater extent than has been the case in past years.

Wm. A. Houghton.

MASS-MEETING

An enthusiastic mass meeting was held in Memorial Hall Monday evening. Files, '08, presided. The names of Hale, '10, and R. D. Morss, '10, were presented as candidates for assistant manager of the tennis team. Morss was elected.

Professor Robinson then addressed the students on the subject of a student council. After referring to the defunct jury which was formed about twenty years ago by Professor Smith, now of Yale, he outlined the faculty's idea of a new students council. He suggested that it be composed of twelve men from the Senior Class, who would represent the whole college as nearly as possible. The council would meet and confer with the faculty, through the new Administrative Committee, to form plans for the general interests of the college. The faculty have been considering the matter for some time and since,

L'Envoi

A year has passed and it is all over now. Though the time seems but short enough, twelve months have passed and with this issue the present editorial board relinquishes its duties in favor of new men. Like all our predecessors we assumed our task with brilliant hopes and high ambitions. We may have come far from attaining these, but there remains now opportunity for only criticism or apology—and to criticize now is useless, and at least we will not apologize. In our introductory editorial a year ago, we said we had no hopes of running the paper on any revolutionary lines, but to follow the examples of a long line of predecessors. At that time we said our Orient policy would be for the college, more emphasis along scientific lines, in athletics a wider outlook, and closer fellowship throughout the student body. It is for you to judge if we have in any way accomplished what we aimed to do. We have tried our best to be a newspaper first and last. We have not aimed to be radical, nor have avoided being direct and positive. That we have had many shortcomings we realize only too keenly ourselves. We may not have pleased everyone throughout the whole college year, but we do hope that it may be recognized that we have endeavored to consistently represent the college, and to express college sentiment as we have seen it. That the past year has been an important and in general a most successful one for Bowdoin, all the college realizes, and we all believe that Bowdoin is but at the beginning of more brilliant and more prosperous years. As an editorial board we feel confident that we are resigning the paper into good hands. The Editor resigns a connection commenced four years ago this month, in March, 1904. To what readers the Orient may have, the present Editorial Board, retiring from the centre of the stage, bids a last farewell.

New Board

The Orient takes pleasure in announcing the following organization of the Editorial Board for next year. Editor-in-Chief, Kenneth R. Tefft; Assistant Editor-in-Chief, William E. Atwood; Business Manager, Guy E. Estes; Assistant Business Manager, M. G. L. Bailey. The following new men were elected to the board: Philip B. Morss, 1910; and Henry G. Ingersoll, 1910. The competition from the Freshmen is to be continued for five more issues, at which time two men are to be chosen from four who were selected.

Football Schedule

The football schedule appeared last week, but owing to lack of space we were unable to comment upon it in our last issue. The schedule contains the same number of games as in recent years. The Fort McKinley and Harvard games are in the usual places, but instead of the hard game with Exeter that has usually come during the first week of the term and immediately after the Harvard game on Wednesday, New Hampshire State is to be substituted. This is an excellent idea and will relieve what in other years has been an unduly hard week at the very opening of the season. Brown will be met on the grid iron this year for the first time in a number of years, at Providence in place of the Amherst game of last fall. Holy Cross will be played in Portland. It is excellent that Bowdoin will have a contest in this city, as much is gained for the college by playing here. The Tufts game occurs in Medford, and the Maine games in the same order as last year, although on reverse fields. The schedule is distinctly a good one, and is not unduly hard. Bowdoin meets representative colleges of New England, and we are most pleased to see it continues the broader policy that has been manifest within recent years, and that the college has been consistently advocating.

according to the rules adopted when the old jury was formed, the relations could be annulled by a vote of either students or faculty, the faculty took this occasion of making a formal announcement that they had withdrawn from the old system. Consequently, the jury is a thing of the past in fact as well as in name. The students are free to take any action they may choose toward forming a representative body and there is no doubt that such a council would prove to be beneficial to Bowdoin.

Upon the motion of Gould, ’08, the chairman was authorized to appoint a committee to submit some plan to the students at a mass meeting in the near future. Professor Foster expressed his hearty concurrence with the movement and stated that similar councils had proven a success at Amherst, Brown and Harvard. He then spoke as representative of the Committee on Relations with Preparatory Schools. He referred to the general advance- ment at Bowdoin in the past few years and of the large entering class last fall. With the recent increase in the endowment fund two instructors have already been added and two more will be added next year. This means a larger curriculum. Professor Foster stated that the matter of increasing the enrollment rested almost wholly with the undergraduate body. The efforts which they can put forth armed with a history of the college, and the high standing of Bowdoin among American colleges will mean another record breaking entering class next fall and in the course of a few years, a student body of four hundred. An increase in the student body means greater advantages to all and a better college.

After adjournment the students were supplied with blanks on which they are to write the names of prospective students giving the scholarship, preferences, etc. These are to be sent to the college office and catalogues and bulletins will be sent out to their addresses. There will probably be another mass meeting immediately after the recess.

SPRING BASEBALL TRIP

Team Leaves on March 31—Brown First Game

Since the discontinuance of regular baseball cage work the candidates for the team have been practising regularly every day at 3:30. The severe weather has prevented the team from having any out of door practice, but to off-set this an extra period of batting practice has been indulged in by the men who are working in the cage. On Thursday Coach Irwin put an appearance and under his experienced eye the candidates were put through a stiff afternoon’s work. The first game which the team will play will be against Brown at Providence. From Providence the team will journey down to South Orange, where they will encounter Seton Hall College. On the next day, returning to New York the team will meet New York University and from here they will go to Princeton where they will play their fourth and final game against that institution. The trip is the longest thus far attempted by a Bowdoin team. The Alumni all along the line are welcoming the fact that Bowdoin will clash bats during this trip with some prominent institutions and they feel that a continuance of this broad athletic policy is bound to be of infinite benefit to the college. The men who will probably make the trip are: Captain Stanwood, Files, Harris, Lawlis, Mantle, Clifford, Bower, McDade, Caldwell, Scannon, Hayes, Manager Tefft and Coach Irwin. A number of fellows will accompany the team.

SUNDAY CHAPEL

President Hyde conducted chapel Sunday. Taking for his text: “The wicked is spreading himself like a green bay tree,” he said:

“There is great confusion in the world regarding the solution of the great problems of a man’s life. You do good and the result is evil, you do evil and the result is good. It thus appears that there is too much responsibility incurred voluntarily or otherwise by some men and too little by others. Where should the line fall? It is evident that no event is the result of a single cause, but of ten sand causes. Your proportion in the result but one small part. Hence the explanation, though your contribution is faultless, of the ssiility of an outcome to the contrary. We arc, however, responsible only for this one part. Everything in this world is like a relay race; no one thing directly decides the outcome. The law of responsibility is: That we make absolutely genuine, to the extent of our power and comprehension our one finite degree toward infinite result, and to run with cheerful heart, if necessary, a losing race; and if prosperity crowns our endeavors not to let it lessen our respect for genuine worth. Biologists tell us that habitat determines the survival or extinction of a plant, but among ten thousand plants it is the fittest that survives. It is the general tendency of the good man to have part in works of a prosperous nature, and for the unprincipled man to share in works, the outcome of which is both unprosperous and disgraceful.

A quartette: Brown, '09, Kendrie, '10, McGlone, '10, and Richards, '11, sang a selection; and Kendrie rendered a solo with his customary grace at the close of the talk.

NEW BOOK BY PROFESSOR JOHNSON

Professor Allen Johnson has made an important contribution to American biography in his "Stephen A. Douglas," which is published by MacMillan & Co., of New York. The book in itself is a study of American politics. Professor Johnson has been collecting material for the past five or six years. He spent much time last summer as a guest of Mr. Douglas' son, who is Justice of the North Carolina Supreme Court. There he came into possession of unpublished letters and papers which had been in the hands of Mr. Douglas' family. With the aid of these unpublished notes, Professor Johnson has supplied the lack of an authentic account of the great political leader and of the days of the Civil War.

The approaching anniversary of the famous Lincoln-Douglas joint debate of 1858 lends a special timeliness to the publication of this book.

It would be certainly advisable at just this time of year if the members of 1911 kept in mind the warning of last fall to keep off the grass. The practical significance of this is applicable to all classes.

John Irwin is expected to arrive today to take charge of the baseball men, and will accompany the team on the spring trip. Owing to the very serious illness of his wife he has been delayed in coming to Brunswick before this.

The artesian well drilled by the M. C. R. R. of Brunswick to supply water for the new tank, proved a complete failure. At a depth of 300 feet the drill dropped three feet into a cavity in a lime stone stratum, but no water was encountered. After drilling 500 feet through gravel and silt, the job was given up as hopeless.

It may be of news to some of the students to know that the large magnet in the Chemistry Lecture Room was one of the first three ever made in this country. It was made by Joseph Henry, by hand in 1832, with two others, one for Princeton and one for Yale University. He charged the college only the expense incurred for materials, which, in an itemized list, Professor Robinson has at the present day. The magnet is of such strength that, with a slight current passing through it, two men can be supported on a pendent platform.

TRACK

Active training has commenced for track work in the spring. A large squad has been training regularly from the gymnasium all through the week. An informal meeting of the track candidates was held after the mass meeting on Monday night at which it was urged that all men get to work early. It is also hoped that the fellows will make special effort to keep in trim during the spring vacation and as many as possible plan to return early. Work will be commenced at the track as soon as the new term begins. It is far too early to make any estimates on our ability or give any prospects, but no track man was ever developed in two weeks, and fellows must begin to work early. Coach Morrill will be in regular attendance at the field and a number of special men are to come down and coach separate events. James Lee, of the B. A. A., John Roberts, of the Cambridgeport Gymnasium, and Frank Sheehan, of Boston, are all expected to be at college. These men will devote special attention to distance work.

"FOOTBALL: BATTLE OR SPORT"

An interesting article entitled "Football: Battle or Sport," by David Starr Jordan, President of Stanford University, appeared in the March number of the "Pacific Monthly." The article brings forward the defects in the old game of football, the attempts to remedy these defects in the new game, and the way these defects might be remedied by the institution of the game of Rugby. In developing his article, Doctor Jordan frequently quotes President Eliot of Harvard and Walter Camp of Yale.

It is probably known that an attempt has been made among the colleges of the Pacific Coast to substitute Rugby for the present
American game. Leland Stanford, Jr., University, and the University of California, have taken up the crusade and, to all appearances, seem to be making a success of the experiment. Whether the movement will spread throughout the other Western colleges is doubtful, because of the firm foundation of the American game. Doctor Jordan himself says: "Boys are, however, the most conservative people on earth, and those of the West are not quite happy unless they play the same games as are played in the East. This is the only real objection to the restoration of Rugby which the California universities have encountered."

In favor of Rugby, Doctor Jordan states briefly: "In Rugby every man plays his own game; each of the 'backs' is his own quarter-back. For these reasons the game is open throughout. The ball can be followed by the spectators; rough play, if present, can be seen by every one. Better still, it is a true sport, not an array of battle."

A volume of short stories, from the pen of Professor Arlo Bates, entitled "The Intoxicated Ghost and Other Stories" is promised by Houghton, Mifflin & Co., for early publication. Of it one writes as follows:

Lovers of short stories will find in this volume a most unusual collection. Mr. Bates knows how to write a readable and engrossing tale, and he knows, too, how to leave the reader something to think about. Each of his stories has something striking psychological idea or haunting situation at the root of its plot, and the force of conception loses nothing in the smooth and masterly execution. The first story, for example, deals with the effective efforts of the ghost of an ancestor of bibulous tendencies in smoothing out the tangled love affairs of two interesting young people. Other stories have such thrilling situations as those involved in the dual personality of a beautiful girl, or the experiments of a club man in occultism and East Indian magic.
