Deane Porter and Deane, who are the twin sons of Director of Athletics, Dr. J. T. B. Porter, have developed into two of the finest American athletes that have ever starred for Bowdoin. They both earned their place on the varsity track last spring and have continued to excel throughout the winter. Their contributions to the team have been invaluable, and they have consistently ranked among the top performers in their respective events.

The twin brothers have been engaged in athletics since childhood, and their natural ability and dedication to the sport have been evident from an early age. They have trained rigorously, focusing on developing their speed, endurance, and technique. Their efforts have paid off, as they have consistently achieved high marks in their competitions.

Their performances have not gone unnoticed, and they have received numerous accolades for their contributions to the team. Their dedication and determination to succeed have been a source of inspiration for their teammates, and they have helped to create a positive and supportive atmosphere within the team.

The Porter brothers have not only excelled in track, but they have also shown strong leadership qualities. Their contributions to the team have been instrumental in helping the team achieve success. Their presence on the team has been a catalyst for improvement, and they have consistently set a high standard for their teammates to follow.

In conclusion, Deane Porter and Deane have been a testament to the power of dedication and hard work. Their success on the track is a result of their unflagging commitment to improvement, and their contributions to the team have been instrumental in helping the team achieve success. They are true role models for all athletes, and their achievements serve as an inspiration to us all.
Olympic Carnival

Bob Miller can certainly look back on his accomplishments of the last year with a sense of satisfaction. Not only had he had a team which went through the season undefeated in dual inter-collegiate competition with such teams as Williams, Wesleyan and B.U. but he had obtained recognition for swimming as a major sport on an equal footing with football, baseball, track and basketball.

He has, moreover, brought more than one event of real importance to the Curtis Pool. The last of those was Monday's Olympic Carnival which was the third of its kind at Bowdoin and which, for sure, may prove to be both the climax of the season and the swimming department in the manner in which the meet was run as well. "The season is almost over and it has been in the past," said Coach Soper, "and the meet was better conducted love than it would have been anywhere else.

Another encouraging development brought about by the carnival was the marked improvement in the quality of swimming in this state which was demonstrated by the showing made by the All Maine girls' team against the Peace School. As Coach Pfanstiehl of the Portland Boys' Club remarked after the meet: "Meadowbrook swimmers don't need to feel second to anyone."

A New Contest

The matter of fact publication in last week's Orient, ten days before the event, of the date, time, and place of the coming freshman banquet might well have raised many an alarm to effect for it was not as long ago that such information was annually to be kept a dark secret out of consideration for the banquet新鲜

The idea of an outdoor man singing contest, which he proposes, has several evident merits: it is a general foundation in Bowdoin tradition; it would serve to bring classes together which have never officiated; in some cases except for elective of others—the time of their freshman photographs; and, like the inter-chorus song contest, it would stimulate general campus singing.

Still another, and most interesting, end is to be served by the new contest; and here is where the great innovation comes in. The snow bow, for the best original Bowdoin song sung in the best manner has only been awarded since its donation in 1912. Now Professor Tillotson is going to combine the competition for the best singing with the contest for the best song, and give a cash prize to the composer as well.

Group singing, while a pleasant custom at other colleges, ought merely not to be neglected at Bowdoin, and Professor Tillotson, having already stimulated singing as much as Bowdoin, deserves every one's support in his new project. Of course, when the actual competition comes, the Orient's editors are strong for the success of 1899; but the Orient's policy will be impartial—only the best win!

THE BOWDIN ORIENT

Established 1874

THE FRESHMAN RULES

In any bull-calling of the subject of freshman rules there are likely to be three general points of view expressed.

1. There are the conservatives—who advocate the restoration of the old Phi Chi. They point out that freshman rules are a time-honored, colorful, and amusing Bowdoin tradition which adds a certain spunkiness to campus life, bolster class spirit, and provide nearly every one with a common campus experience and certain vivid reminiscences. (Such is also the chief argument for Price Night, Hell Week, and freshman rides.)

Many of the conservatives believe that the rules are beneficial to the freshman class, serving to keep some of the wilder types in line and generally having a good effect on freshman morals. This line of argument is open to attack, however, and can be viewed as merely rationalization; there are "wild men" in every class and it is hard to demonstrate that many of them are not have been permanently calmed down through fear of Phi Chi or S.O.C.C.

2. Besides the conservatives, who are rather dissatisfied with recent methods of enforcing freshman rules, there are also the moderates, or muggwumps, who would preserve the status quo of the past two years with perhaps minor modifications. They do not want to see the freshman rules go — or at least not all of them — but they are also opposed to padding and to forced interclass conflict. They see the past two years, rather uneventful, as satisfying evidence that the evils of the old system have been eliminated.

3. A third group feels that although there may be a little objection to the content of the freshman rules, almost any method of enforcing them will have an effect of some value, either a physical injury or an injustice. Those who believe that the rules should be abridged argue that while the institution exists, no matter how mild enforcement is present, there will always be campus agitation to have the rules made more effective; and that Phi Chi, officially or unofficially, will be likely in a few years to have its resurrection.

The possibility of this argument is hard to refute, as there are close instances in the history of Phi Chi to support it; and your point of view is likely to depend on whether or not you agree with the liberals in thinking that the rules are not worth the risk.

There is also a party general feeling that while a return to Phi Chi would be wise, freshman rules without strict enforcement haven't much point. Some also consider that the institution is a sort of Phi Chi clone to forcibly impose what is thought to be "1905 Bowdoinism" and that there is certain commonness imposed in having one group of undergraduates perform another group on charges which occasionally have nothing to do with the rules — such charges as "you're a wise guy" or "you don't like your attitude." Freshmen, it has been remarked, are the most individualistic class in college; pressure towards conformity is strong enough without S.O.C.C. or Phi Chi.

Because of the reasons given above, the Orient favors the third point of view. It recommends that the elected leaders of the class of 1905, on whom the responsibility chiefly rests, take steps next autumn to see that the rules lapse.

Both of the editors this week having treated subjects more or less open to controversy, the Orient either now or later that to it will gladly accept for publication from students, faculty, alumnus, or friends of the college letters expressing genuine concern on campus matters.

SILLS URGES UNITY IN WORLD CHURCHES Speaking on the topic, "Christian Unity and the United Church Mis- sionary," Mr. Sills emphasized the importance of unity among all Christians in the face of the current political and religious challenges. He highlighted the need for cooperation and collaboration among different denominations to overcome the barriers that divide them. Mr. Sills' speech was well-received, and the audience was left with a renewed sense of purpose to work towards achieving unity among all Christians.
A tuition increase of (probably) $50 a year is now, according to campus rumor, conventional. A balanced budget is said to be the immediate purpose of the move. Considering that bowdoin is apparently swinging up more and more, and that several other New England Colleges have tuitions substantially larger than ours, a charge of $50 a year at bowdoin may not seem unreasonable in consideration, it represents part of a trend.

In 1913, the tuition was $75; it was raised to $100 in 1919, to $125 in 1920, to $150 in 1926; and to $250 in 1937. The tuition doubled; and if it is raised to $300 this year, it will have been doubled again since 1921. Should this trend continue? Is it to be encouraged, or is it the enemy of Bowdoin, or is it the enemy of education?

In answering these questions, we are apt to consider the master of a mildewed study. We are perhaps too apt to content ourselves with eulogistic questions like "what would the present student body be worth in 1921?" If bowdoin, in the long run, is to become more and more of a university, and not of a college that is perhaps comparable with bowdoin, what is the real duty of bowdoin now? What is the real problem of bowdoin, with the resources that it now has, and that it is about to have?

In those troubled times, when liberty seems so commonly to be attacked by the force of the commonest and the commonest type of education. Logically, every trend that would encourage or induce more or an offer in a sense or sense group should be opposed; and every trend that would encourage the same resources to democracy at large should be encouraged.

We should be proud of the small sacrifices Bowdoin might have to make to the larger good. If necessary, let the budget go unbalanced another year. In this way, the campus could be saved a little longer, let us do without a new stage, a covered hockey rink, or a new science building for a few more years if we have to, but oppose this trend toward higher tuitions! Make Bowdoin a leader among her sister colleges in genuine service to democracy.

PLAY PARADE

The Masque and Gown and the Glee Club deserve everyone's congratulations on their recent productions. These two groups, who are very active and highly ambitious organizations, are becoming of greater and greater importance to the college.

The announcement of plays to be presented next year is interesting itself and as showing signs of the idea that Professor Quincy has brought to bowdoin drama. The plays he has directed here in the last three years for his next few years, fall into these groups—plays interesting from a historical and cultural view because they illustrate the dramatic of the past, contemporary, and the contemporary plays which have social significance of some sort.

Thus in the past few years the Masque and Gown has staged "The Circle," "The Jew of Malta," and "The Bury Dead." And will stage next year a program of similar variety. Such variety is better, more educational, and more entertaining than the routine of drawing room comedies in which amateur theatricals can easily fail.

If the experiment in musical comedy, "Of Thee I Sing," proves successful, an interesting and highly dramatic play with music, which might be considered for another year might be "Johnny Johnson," presented at New York, New York; the same studios are likely to be difficult to adjust to Memorial Hall's inadequate stage, although from what has been done this summer, Professor Quincy seems capable of putting anything at bowdoin short of "The Eternal Road.""

THE SUN "Rises"

By R. T. Brown

How much sun should be雯一what is the right amount of sunlight for human health? The answer to this question is not clear, and there is much controversy among experts.

However, a recent study conducted by researchers at the University of California has shed light on the issue. The study found that moderate exposure to sunlight is beneficial for human health, but excessive exposure can be harmful.

The researchers used a group of volunteers who were monitored for a year. They measured their levels of vitamin D, which is produced by the body when exposed to sunlight, and their blood pressure.

The results showed that individuals who spent more time outdoors and were exposed to sunlight had higher levels of vitamin D and lower blood pressure compared to those who spent more time indoors.

However, the study also found that excessive exposure to sunlight can lead to skin cancer and other health problems.

The researchers concluded that moderate sunlight exposure is beneficial for human health, but it is important to balance the benefits with the risks.

In conclusion, while sunlight is beneficial for human health, it is important to be mindful of the amount of exposure to avoid potential risks.

Bowdoin Lacks Two Points In Bid For State Track Crown

By Capt. Porter

Polson, the track star of Bowdoin, and his team had a chance to clinch the State Track title last week, but they fell short of their goal. The team lost to the University of Maine by a margin of two points, 108 to 106.

Polson, who is one of Bowdoin's most talented athletes, had a disappointing day in the meet. He failed to win any of the events he entered, and his team fell short of the title.

Despite the loss, Polson is confident that his team will bounce back in the future. "We had a good chance to win, but we just couldn't get it done," he said.

Polson is optimistic about his team's prospects for the upcoming season. "We have a lot of talent on this team, and I think we can make a strong run for the title," he said.

In conclusion, Bowdoin's track team had a chance to win the State Track title last week, but they fell short of their goal. Despite the loss, the team is optimistic about their prospects for the future.
Intercollegiate Column

Last week an interesting article appeared on the subject of Jose Ortega y Gasset. The article was very well written and provided a good introduction to the thoughts of this famous Spanish philosopher.

The article began by discussing the influence of Ortega y Gasset on the Spanish literary and intellectual scene. It then went on to explore his ideas on the nature of reality and the role of the individual in shaping it. The author of the article was particularly impressed by Ortega y Gasset's ability to bridge the gap between philosophy and everyday life.

The article ended by urging readers to explore the works of Ortega y Gasset further. The author believed that his ideas were relevant not only to Spaniards, but to people all over the world. The article was a good example of how a well-written article can spark interest in a topic and encourage readers to learn more.

FOR FLOODED AREAS

DURING the January floods, Western Electric—Service Of Supply to the Bell System—once again set in motion its machinery for meeting disaster.

From its three factories and many distributing points, it rushed telephone materials of every kind into the flooding areas. Day and night, telephone men and women worked to maintain and improve communications.

Dramatic as this is emergency Service Of Supply, it is really no more important than Western Electric’s everyday work. For the 3,500 telephone offices of the Bell System, which have an average of two million lines of communication, are never out of touch.

Reason for Delight

The ORIENT submits to your attention that Spring is here, the time when every Ford plans with the same diligent polishing as the campus' late Rolls Royce. Let us give hearty welcome to such joyous as well as all the students, continuing every home-party-pot to the tender mericles of "Wooly" Hermin's music and the tender mericles of "Stiffy" Smith's. Man joy abound, all candles being burned at midnight, and the Casandra-like voice of Professor Herbert Brown in chapel ("If I was come...") be regretted with a whole heart and joy.

Suggestion to the Student Council

Nominate for the non-fraternity men the largest single group of undergraduates to represent on your council. However, as a group they stand high academically, are represented on Bowdoin's teams, and also in most of the campus activities.

It is not argued that the Student Council does not habitually make its nominations with great fairness, or that any outstanding non-fraternity man would be overlooked when nominations are made. However, if, for instance, the interest of an large group in the elections, perhaps it might be wise to pick the most outstanding member or supporter of that group and award a point of having him on the list. After that, the decisions rest with the students at large; they will choose those whenever they consider best qualified among the nominees for election.

PRO AND CON

May 17, 1937

The Editor-in-Chief

To the Editor of the Bowdoin Orient:

I was very much disappointed in the story which appeared in your last issue where the role of Byron Dezer was described as "a great disappointment to the student body." The statement is not only inaccurate but actually misleading. I should like to explain the situation to your readers.

I am Byron Dezer, a student at Bowdoin College, and I would like to make a few points about the situation described in the story.

Firstly, I would like to clarify that I am not a member of any fraternity. I am an independent student who has chosen to focus on my academic and personal growth without the constraints of a fraternity's traditional expectations.

Secondly, I would like to address the issue of my relationship with Byron Dezer, the character from the story. Although it is true that I have a close relationship with Byron Dezer, it is important to note that our interactions are primarily academic and professional in nature. We have worked together on various projects and have established a strong working relationship.

Lastly, I would like to emphasize that I am committed to my education and personal development at Bowdoin College. I have no plans to become a member of a fraternity and will continue to focus on my academic goals and personal growth.

I hope this clarification provides a better understanding of the situation described in the story.

Sincerely,

Take St. Paul's Description Of Charity As Theme Of His Address

CALLS HOMICIDAL GOVERNMENT CRUEL

Emphasizes Need of Return To Kingly Spirit; Hits Racial Intolerance

"The spirit of charity must be present in every man," was the keynote of Rev. William S. Sills, D.D., rector of St. Paul's School, who Thursday evening addressed the graduates of Bowdoin College.

Mr. Sills, who was the morning's morning, Wednesday in the First Parish Church of Brunswick, has been called the "First" Parson for his eloquence and many other things besides.

"St. Paul's beautiful description of charity, which has been the term of a few years, is still the same," he said. "It has been a constant theme of the church and remains so.

"The spirit of charity is not only a spiritual thing; it is also a human thing. The latter is more important than the former, and the former is more important than the latter.

"Charity is the foundation of all the friendships that we hold dear. It is the backbone of all the governments that we have. It is the lifeblood of all the nations that we know."

Would that the spirit of charity were everywhere as present as it is here today. It would make the world a better place. It would make Bowdoin College a place where every man could be happy.

THE NEED FOR UNDERSTANDING

The Saltzburg Address of President Sills last Wednesday was largely taken up with an attack on the democratic ideology which is not always emphasized as much as it might be even by democratic's worst enemies, the propagandists. The attack, which is a purely arbitrary and dogmatically expressed demand that public education should be made the servant of a particular interest group, is in the main an attempt to define the relationship between a purely arbitrary form of government and the Christian ideal of human freedom. This contradiction, as the writer points out, is still the very presence in the world of today's greatest dictatorship, is a matter of immense concern for both the student and the educator in those troublous times.

Argument for democracy today may be easily based on the advantages which it provides over any system which attempts to bring about a change in government while maintaining the right of the people to choose a form of government which is not always recognized as a democratically desirable one. Argument for democracy may thus well consider that it is a genuine function—possibly the chief function—of higher education to aid in the democratic spirit and a strong faith in democracy.

Indeed, in a certain sense, as Jacob Freidheim has shown in a brilliant article in the June Atlantic Monthly, even where education is allowed to be entirely unrestricted by government, it must still be profoundly affected by ethical ideals and functions of education. Much in the work of Van Rensselaer, the other hand, is fundamentally concerned with moulding and developing a human being in terms of an ideal. Thus an American professor should try to get his students to support the Republican Party, or a German professor should try to make his students vote for Hitler in a national election, then either professor would be a propagandist of democracy. The democratic theory or political philosophy, tries to mould the student in the ideal which he is convinced is the right one for the time being, democratic, fascist, or communist—is fulfilling the inevitable and commendable function of an educator.

The problem of American democracy, it may be fairly said, is not the problem of choosing which ideal it shall try to shape the student towards. Educators have no business to ask whether it is the Hebrew, or the Japanese, or the Christian ethic, the dictator, or the democracy, or the class concept of democracy. No such voice of our civilization has already made the decision. The real problem is: how shall we build a truly democratic and truly free and living and living in minds of modern college undergraduates.

One of the best ways of answering the problem by means of higher education is to teach students to understand fully foreign ideas and foreign social organizations. The average newspaper reader, if he comes across expressions of opinion against almost any European government, is apt to find more damnation than explanation, more rhetoric than insight, expressed. The undergraduate then comes to regard foreign governments and peoples as friends of history; he is taught to think of many ideas which are abroad today as so obviously and patently unjust that he will be morally a question of time before the good men of the world are made ready to with them. He may never realize what power some ideas, foreign though they be, have to destroy democracy and make a democracy not only one that is living and developing. He may not see the implications which lie in the fact that a nation's ideology is just as much a part of its life history as of its race that a particular nation's philosophy is controlled; that in another nation a small group of men are convinced of the righteousness of their ideas that they will not give up their lives for their ideals, that whole races are willing to hold on to the freedom of their ideas and scholarship.

INTER-COLLEGE PAPER

In accordance with its policy announced last year, the ORIENT will be glad to have any letters submitted for publication by undergraduates, alumni, or faculty. Too many people on or off campus have ideas of their own about Bowdoin which only the expression in occasional half-sessions. In the past, some letters of real interest have appeared in these columns, but all too infrequently. Letters may be sent either to the BOWDOIN ORIENT, Madison Union, or to any of the junior or senior editorial staff.

This week's mailing does not disseminate any Bowdoin news, but the President of the Student Council has sent in a letter from Clark University which is being printed this week in the hope of arousing reaction or comment, in writing, from anyone who may be interested. The idea of any inter-collegiate paper is a rather unusual one; and Robert Brittingham's comments on the initiative in New Hampshire's Saint Anselm College contain, perhaps, more truth than we would like to admit.

"HOLD THE BAY WAY . . . ."

As this season, the best of all in the Maine year, is now again with its aroma crushed under and its leaves coloring on the trees, the ORIENT extends its traditional and hearty welcome to the new members of the college—all two hundred odd of them—together with whatever alumni or encouragement it can promise to give. No reason, other than custom, brings this column to add its words to those already heard by freshmen from the president, the dean, the faculty, the fraternity, the sophomore, probably from their own parents; and little more than customary words are to be expected from the college paper. Customary or not, here they are.

Perhaps some of the best writing ever given by poet-list in Chaucer's line "Hold the bay way, and let thy guest beale"—"Talks the high road, and let your own spirits guide you." The first half of it is in the concern for the individual, according to what sort of code he has; the second half, even more, is an insouciantly individual matter.

This is a pleasure age. Every advertisement in every periodical reminds us of a constant, persistent commercial force being aimed at the public. The world seems increasingly full of speakers and writers who want to make us socialists, fascists, pacifists, New Dealers, conservatives, liberals, or 100% Americans; who want us to vote for some political party, to support some legislative scheme, to join some organization, or to buy some product. They are always with us; they broadcast over every network; their ideas appear in syndicated columns; their articles are printed in national papers. The pressure of a modern college is of a different sort. It is considerably more personal, acting as it does through medium of small, organized groups. It is the more effective because there is no getting away from it: if you don't want to hear Senator Black on the radio you can turn the dial; but the organisational life of a college is not so simply dispensed with. Phi Chi, it is true, is gone; but the sentiments which inspired its actions still exist, the influence toward conformity still tends to mold the "college type"—not really one but rather a number of different types, familiar to the campus and quietly recognizable.

There is no simple "solution"—for where the problem does exist, it is never the same, perhaps, for any two people. But whoever cultivates what he best heartily interested in, accepts only opinion and ideas he genuinely believes, and more never try to model himself after any stern standard will undoubtedly "get the most out of college."

DURBIN PLEADS FOR TOLERANCE IN GOVERNMENT

Wars Against All Peace That Try To Destroy Old Liberties

By Senator W. A. Gladstone

"The most characteristic and least likely to be tolerated in the state of public opinion in England to-day is the attempt to destroy old liberties," said the leader of the House of Commons in his speech last night. "It is not only a question of the right of individuals to express their opinions, but it is also a question of the right of the people to be governed by the government of their choice." The senator further stated that, "The government of the day is not only responsible for the safety of the state, but it is also responsible for the safety of the people. The people are entitled to be governed by a government of their own choice, and that government must be responsible to the people for the protection of their liberties."
BOWDOIN Orientation

NOW THAT the football season is well under way and the team's record is still unmarred, the time is ripe for the College to launch its annual campaign against over-confidence among the members of the student body. Such a campaign is not entirely uncalled for, although it may be a bit premature. Saturday the team battles Williams. If it wins, it will have beaten some of the finest small college teams in New England, and such comparatively insignificant teams as those of the Maine colleges might be expected to prove easy pickings.

In the past, however, it has been demonstrated time and again that previous showings mean little in a little state series game, and Maine, Bates, and Colby are certain to try their hardest to topple the defending champions. Comparatively, Bates should prove the toughest opponent judging by its showing against Arnold. Maine, as far as has been said, has been up against the toughest opposition of the three and will probably prove a more formidable opponent than previous years.

At any rate the student body must give its whole-hearted support to the team during all of the coming rounds, if Bowdoin is to be the state crown for a third successive year. Of course it may be proved that such moral support is immaterial to the players, but the middle of the continent is not the environment.

MR. LIGHTFOOT COMES TO AMERICA

A rather delightful story which has been going the rounds recently concerns the meeting of Philip Wilder Sr., of Mr. Lightfoot, the new Taft Professor, who comes to us from the latter's arrival in the United States. At that time Mr. Wilder presented the new Professor of Biblical History with a copy of this year's freshman bible; whereas Mr. Lightfoot, noticing the materials inscribed on the cover, exclaimed, "Good Lord, are you that far ahead of us in this country?"

It might be more unwise, at least from the point of view of the undergraduates, to number each class by the year of its matriculation. Every class enters college, anyway, at a definite date, although part of every class is likely to spend more than the allotted four years getting through while another part may get through without graduating all. But Americanists like to keep jumps ahead of themselves, at least on the calendar.

Perhaps this is connected in some way with our American idealism. The fond mother speaks of "Jehovah, who is in college now, class of 1948," referring to an event that will take place (she hopes) in the future—instead of in a fixed episode out of the unchanged past. Similarly, one of the textbooks used in elementary economics here a few years ago started off with an article by someone who had carefully listed what he thought would be the eight or nine basic characteristics of a perfectly free economy. That man was not exponishing the "accumulated wisdom of the ages."

Idealism or no idealism, it is a commonplace that Americans are a pushing people; and certainly they push the calendar around to suit themselves. The "October 11th" issue of Time appears in Maine on October 8th; if you are driving a 1935 model automobile during the last months of 1935, you are a year behind the times; and it would be easy to have read the November issue of the leading magazines before the last day of the October calendar. Of no people could Marvell's line be said more truly.

"Thus, though we cannot make our sun stand still, yet we will make him run.

GROWING PAINS

The class of 1941 apparently had every one fooled; although the college had decided definitely to limit registration, this year's is the biggest yet. The class was not only in numbers at Bowdoin, it was as all over the country; and perhaps another era of expanding colleges is approaching.

If the number of applicants is to increase annually, and if Bowdoin really is going to keep its number down to a certain point, whatever that point may be, it will be interesting to see on what grounds the college is going to reject superfluous applicants. A simple scheme would be to admit only those whose grade-point average is higher than the cut-off point; and this would be to attend to the academic requirements; another would be to raise the tuition bills.

But none of these would ever be satisfactory; for each would mask the possibility of selecting some desirable potential member of the college community on unreasonable grounds. The trouble with them is that they are too simple; it would not be a good thing, for example, to keep out a brilliant athlete merely because he could not pass entrance examinations that were considerably harder than those of most other good colleges.

One of two things must happen. Either the college must continue to grow, or the administration must have a committee to consider each applicant's case individually and to determine, from every point of view possible, which are the most likely candidates and which are not. The difficulties of such a method are patent; but what else is there to do?"

In Class "C" game at Bowdoin yesterday, the Bowdoin College football team easily defeated the Maine State College team by a score of 56 to 0. The Maine team was completely outplayed by the Red and Black, and Bowdoin had to play only a few games during the course of the season. The Maine team was unable to take the field and was forced to弃 offender.

The game was played on the Bowdoin College football field, and the official referee was Mr. J. W. Crowe. The game was a very close one, and the Maine team was forced to play the entire game on defense. The Maine team was able to stop Bowdoin at one point, but Bowdoin was able to score a touchdown on the next play. The Maine team was unable to score on any of its possessions.

The game was played in front of a large crowd, and the spectators were enthusiastic. The game was played in good weather, and the officials did a good job of enforcing the rules. The Maine team was unable to gain any yardage, and Bowdoin had the ball for most of the game. The game was a very convincing one for Bowdoin, and the team was able to show its superiority over the Maine team.

The Bowdoin team was led by its quarterback, Mr. J. W. Hogue, who passed the ball to his running backs and fullbacks with great accuracy. The team was able to run the ball effectively, and Bowdoin was able to gain many yards on the ground. The Maine team was unable to stop Bowdoin on the ground, and Bowdoin was able to score many touchdowns.

NEW METHODS

Sunday's chapel speaker (the way, freshmen, don't wish to.photo) urged youth not to go forth into the world to lose its ideals and become still after a blind conformist, passively accepting the limited ideas and aspirations of the market-places. Monday's chapel speaker, Professor Cecil T. Holmes, taking a slightly more critical view, called into question some of the ideas now being suggested for adoption by the American people.

While the ruthless methods of modern Fascist nations, said Professor Holmes, cannot perhaps be easily disposed of on sound grounds, it would be a naive attitude to regard these methods as an innovation of recent date in international politics, or even as a mere revival of the Real-politik of the nineteenth century. A dash of realism, suggested Professor Holmes, would be extremely desirable in our outlook on modern world problems.

In his Chicago lecture of last week, President Roosevelt impliedly appealed to all kinds of American interests—business interests—asserting that of youth—against what he called a "goad for power and supremacy which, unless it be under a sense of justice and human consideration," would destroy all such nations as Japan and Italy. To judge from the preceding campus apathy towards most foreign affairs few Bowdoin undergraduates will be ready to view at night wishing about the president's speech; should any feel deeply stirred up, however, it would be well to chance read over and consider carefully Professor Holmes' chapel talk.

It is a sad commentary on human nature, surely, that the methods of seeming private life are proper that are not approved by courts of justice and by law do not seem to have been notably successful. In an international society, at a and a community, but a fact to be faced, that the words of a very ancient historian could with little modification be applied to the modern society of nations: "you know as well as we do that, as the world goes, is only in question between equals in gesture, while the strong do what they can and the weak suffer what they must."

WANTED A NEW ROOM

What with the president's committee on the needs of the college and the appointment of architects to draw up a long range plan for the future development of Bowdoin's physical plant, the demand for new rooms has been new for several months an atmosphere of impending ex-pansion, a source of great things to come, on the campus of Bowdoin is growing, despite the best intentions of governing boards, dean, president, and director of admissions; freshmen are living off campus and overflowing their forms in chapel; the president has been talking about a senior dormitory, President Quimby asked a reservoir and very theatrical Adelphic organization given a bird bath to the library; the class of 1939 is going to put up a permanent Prior Room in front of the athletic building; the college must move with the times.

One of the first and the most important things with which the college, though the generosity of bow, is at present equipped is the alumni living reading room in Hubbard Hall. Hours spent in this quiet nook with its spacious, beautiful windows, its comfortable chairs, its atmosphere of restfulness, and its fine stock of reading matter are likely to remain among the memories of some of the best graduates who ever have even the exact site by which Bowdoin's best student in 1939. In contrast to the alumni nook, though not unlike it so far as purpose goes, is the music room in the north wing of the chapel. Although the collection of recorded music is small, the music room is always in good working order, the chairs are hard, the surroundings are utilitarian and of the stick style, and the acoustics are poor. And as necessary as good floor-lamps are to a library, lampard accessories are in a music room.

The college student of today is commonly satisfied for his exclusive interest in swing, is pictured as an authority on the competence of such and such a jazz band's trumpeter, and so forth. It is not always realized, however, what a real interest in listening and understanding is among a good proportion of the undergraduates.

One of the best contributions that could be made to the cultural life of the college would be a new music room, large, well cared for, and well equipped. It should be located in build- ing like the library or union which is already a general gathering place for the campus. With a number present at all times and with good acoustics, it would be a great advantage to the student body, and in indirect lighting there is no reason why such a room would not become one of the most popular on campus.

The use of the room might be subject to regulation by the music department to prevent any person or group having too large a share in the use of the machine. Regular concerts might be held in the evening or afternoon once or twice a week, with the programs of records to be played published in advance. Surely no one object—unless it were the endowment of a new chair—could add more to the cultural life of Bowdoin.
SPORTS SIDELIGHTS

By Joe Tracy

With another sport season winding down, a few general words on the football theme are in order. At various times during the season, overtures have been made by various persons but have failed to show anything of a startling nature over the ranks. No team can be considered unbeatable, and in this respect there should be no wonder as to why. The days of the AA teams are passing, but we have no reason to believe that they will continue to last for much longer. The time has come for all to realize that football is not a game to be played lightly, and that the days of the easy win are over.

The season has been a success in many ways, and it is to be hoped that the teams will continue to improve in the future. The games have been exciting, and the teams have shown a great deal of spirit and determination. The future of the sport looks bright, and we can only hope that it will continue to grow in popularity.

through to any great extent, and the game was played with many exchanges of points. The teams were evenly matched, and both offenses were well balanced. The Polar Bears managed to keep their lead unscathed, however, and the game ended on the final score of 12-6. It was a great game, and both teams played well. The Polar Bears were the better team, and they deserved the victory. We look forward to the next game, and we are confident that the Polar Bears will continue to win.

Our team didn't look like the world busters against Maine, State had only one score when Maine scored last. The following week we came back to忘了写完整内容，可能是因为文章被打断了。

This week, we have been asked to help organize another Maine College at Bowdoin in the Annual Register's Alumni Dinner. We were told there were some questions about the reputation of the college and the various schools that may look like it.

Our social event has been long awaited and waited for the alumni. A large number of them have been encouraged to attend the Alumni Dinner, and we are thrilled to learn that the size of the program has exceeded all expectations.

The Alumni Dinner is being held at noon, and the alumni will be seated in groups of ten. The program will include a special address by President, followed by a brief induction of theclass of 1967. This will be followed by the presentation of the 1967 Alumni Awards, which will be given to the alumni who have made outstanding contributions to the college.

The Alumni Dinner is a great opportunity for alumni to come together and share memories. We hope that everyone will be able to attend and enjoy this special event.

TOMORROW NIGHT AT 7:30
Non-fraternity men are all urged to attend tomorrow evening's conference in the Masonic Union, announced elsewhere in this issue of the Orient. While the immediate purpose of the conference is to attend to such business as the election of a Who's Who representative and a house party dance committee, a move is also on foot to encourage non-fraternity men to go out for more activities and social work to a larger part in campus life.

The non-fraternity group is larger than any one fraternity on campus, though it is a matter of not the unity of a fraternity in elections. However, there are no extracurricular activities as Bowdoin closed these men, and with a little organization and alertness there is no reason why the group as a whole should not take a large part in the non-credit work of the college.

THE WHEEL BEGINNS
As the season progresses, the round of activities mentioned in a recent editorial as exercising the imaginations of undergraduates gets more and more under way. Hour exams coincide with Hello Week add to the round of activities and upperclassmen insist unerringly, while the important Alumni Day week-end with initiations at ten colleges and another observance at the College of the City of New York, the college's regular program of public lectures, concerts, and so forth, is well under way.

Let you forget, Masque and Crew try-outs are next Monday and Tuesday nights, and on any part of one day which for this year is one of the most interesting yet: "The Milky Way" is to go on the road for a series of performances. As is the custom, Student Council's "Sang" will probably prove a three-hour circus even for the Masque's side of things.

The first meeting of the Central Club is being held at 7:00 on Monday evening at the A. D. House, where the customary collection of instruments of torture is expected to be exhibited for the benefit of the tyro. All members, undergraduates and faculty, are requested to be on hand, with the idea of making plans for an active year.

WOMEN
Harvard University, learn, is now trying out an experiment in something called "hobby"—non-credit "hobby courses" to help the undergraduate, furnish an intellectual and spiritual growth after completing their formal studies. Without knowing any further details of the plan, one assumes that Har- vard is here aiming to foster only the higher type of hobby, and not the offering course, non-credit or otherwise, in make-believe collecting, autograph-hunting, premiere trails, reading the feminine, etc.

As a matter of fact, these new courses will probably only attempt to set up reading and in some other subjects than those chosen by students as their major fields, but certainly "hobby" is a better word for the plan than "hobby." But, nevertheless, if the new courses are designed to help undergraduates "continue their intellectual and spiritual growth," what one wonders are the "formal studies?"

Which brings us back to the old question: what effect on the mind of an alumna do the courses he has studied in college have? The course of study offered at Bowdoin—apart from the sciences—is predominantly humanistic. Are the graduates of Bowdoin, as a body, perhaps, in the humanities, in their outlook on life and letters? Are they the majority of them following up the corridors of what learning which can be more or less obscured for them in four brief years?

Or is there something wrong with the curriculum, at Harvard and in the East? Perhaps, all we need do use the word "hobby" to stimulate the future growth and to supplement a curriculum which may not be minimizing the curricular and educational facilities of the world, is getting more and more important.

Alumni Notes
Five of the nine members of the Alumni Council are alumni of the class of 1935—three of them under the presidency of W. G. MacKinnon, member of the class of 1931—recently met the President the previous even-

Pitts, Snell, Legate Score, After Late Bats Rally In Opening Minutes Of Game; Bowdoin Displays Superb Blocking

After being set back on their back in the opening minutes of the game, the Bowdoin Polar Bears returned with a smashing burst of football to easily defeat the Bates Bobcats, 19-7, before an almost wash-end crowd of nearly 4,500 on Whitter Field last Saturday. Old man weather was kind to the returning alumni, and as a consequence, the Bobcats were bought by Adam Walsh's charges.

This year's new exhibit of gridiron warfare for the 1937 season. Ahead by the coal, brick, "football" weather the Bobcats, of course, were thoroughly thumped by the White backfield which gathered a total of 370 yards against 44 collected by the Leopold outfit.

FREESMAN HATING

The chief argument in favor of freesman hating is not difficult to find. Hating is entertaining sport; often highly amusing to spectators, at least, and quite often to the sportsman himself. The chief reason—the fact that hating is fun—keeps the institution going. Without it, Bowdoin would be a tradition. During Winter weekends, everyone stands around at the entrance of chapel getting a woefully dressed guard a chance at goldfish; and REMEMBER—YOU'RE SMOKING A PIFE FOR PLEASURE NATURAL, YOU WANT THE EXTRA ENSURENCE OF PRINCE ALBERT'S NO-BITE MILDNESS AND FULL, RICH TASTE.

students from other colleges, and even from the Bowdoin Book Club, have been known to come to campus just to attend the weekly meetings of the Book Club. The meeting is held in the library on Wednesday evenings at 7:30 p.m. All persons interested in literature, particularly those who wish to discuss new books and authors, are invited to attend.

The Book Club meets once a week, and the discussions are usually centered around a particular author or theme. The members of the Club are encouraged to read the books that will be discussed, and the discussions are conducted in a friendly and informal manner. The Club provides an opportunity for students and faculty to interact with each other and to share their love of literature.

FREESMEN, DO YOU KNOW RUBBER HALL?

According to our theory of college education, we believe that the library should be the center of advanced learning. However, we recognize that learning should be primarily self-study with the faculty acting as advisors and experimenters over the student, in their respective courses.

We regard the Bowdoin library, as most undergraduates, not as the intimate acquaintance it might be. Perhaps a student of the Bowdoin library might be said to resemble a college student in that which is most beneficial to the individual student.

Here lies the writer to his own experience as a freesman in this respect as an example, because it seems fairly characteristic of the experience of most Bowdoin freshmen. First he was taken on his own services called for the building in a group large enough so that he had little difficulty in stumbling practically nothing of that was said. What he did learn was easily forgotten in the immediately succeeding weeks. For his only occasion, perhaps, that of Ruball Hall was the same (of looking for hometown) in the newspapers and (3) getting a book from the English

Favored Walshmen Meet Maine At Orono Saturday

Injury to Glennon Walshmen Fall Blue Line; Smith And Elliot Ready

In the last two years, and is likely in the third, Maine have been the favorite to meet the Blue Line and the rules between the teams.

Injuries were not avoided by the visiting side, however. Schuler, who had been called up from the Blue Line and was on hand for the game, is down with a sprained ankle, will be unable to participate, and his absence may be felt by the Blue Line in their performance.

With the game set for 2:45 o'clock, the visiting side was on hand as expected, with the exception of the two mentioned.

Maine Win In Line

As the game was about to commence, Maine's strategy was to cut the Blue Line down the middle of the field and to the left side of the field. This was done successfully.

Favored by Polar Bears Alternate to state, Maine was leading the game at the half by a tie, 1-1.

Maine Win In Line

The Blue Line was leading in the first half, as they succeeded in pushing the Maine line back to the goal line. The Maine line was held by the Blue Line, and the Maine line had to rely on their strong backs to make the drive.

It is unfortunate that the Bowdoin broadcast over WCHS last Sunday should have occurred at midnight when many students were unable to hear it. However, next Monday, at 8:00, the station WLSI in Bangor, another opportunity will be afforded to hear the college represented on the air. The event this time will be a debate with a team from the University of Maine.

Although this is to be a non-decision affair, it will give many people (if only from this state) a chance to hear one of our debating teams. Tom Jones has had increasing in this respect. Certain other Maine colleges are known throughout the country for their teams, whereas our own, not to be outshone in them in any way, are comparatively unknown. What Bowdoin debating teams need now is more support and publicity.

Delighting in one of those wonderful activities, and yet bringing it to life in it by way beyond than outside participating. When these events are held here again, the number present can be counted on one's fingers. Interest in speaking in general is growing, and speakers themselves through a remarkable selection of speaking art.

More attention and support should be given to the student body as a whole and a wider and more varied schedule ought to be arranged. Although the present program is by no means a poor one, it could be extended without too much difficulty. More radio debates might be a little better practice after the manner of the debate teams would do much for the cause of debating and would be an excellent method of gaining publicity for the school and the hall, the boundaries.

MARTIAL MUSIC

Bowdoin's band will spread a goodly part of its first 1937-38 holiday concert, this Saturday at College Hall, at 4:30 to take up the festivities for the third place in the State Series at Lewiston, and, almost incidentally, competing itself with the bands of Bates, Colby and the University of Maine for the state's band championship.

We may have the best football teams in the state but nobody will be more surprised than Bowdoin if the band doesn't come out first next season. In appearance and marching ability enough close to its competitors this year, and playing could have been worse but should have been better.

In short the martial music which is evident in other directions on campus hasn't reached the band yet. Nor will it until the band gets trained leadership (and most important) a larger income of some sort, for better music and more uniforms and for a wider program. And until it gets those things the college prestige will suffer and the time put into the band will be wasted.

No doubt these things are in the way, however. Prof. Tillotson has been in band to the band this year and when that happens better things can be expected to follow. In the meantime, the college owes its thanks to Robert W. Laflin '30, who has taken over the job of directing and the should rod the band. Almost their first reward for time and effort expended has been four free football trips.

Dear Sir:

I am a member of the Junior Class of Bowdoin College, and am writing to you to express my disapproval of the critical comments that have been made in the Orient regarding the High School debate.

I understand the need to be critical of the debaters, but I do not believe that this is the proper way to express one's opinion. I believe that the debaters should be given credit for their efforts, and that their criticisms should be constructive.

To the Editor of the Bowdoin Orient:

Dear Sir:

I am a member of the Junior Class of Bowdoin College, and am writing to you to express my disapproval of the critical comments that have been made in the Orient regarding the High School debate.

I understand the need to be critical of the debaters, but I do not believe that this is the proper way to express one's opinion. I believe that the debaters should be given credit for their efforts, and that their criticisms should be constructive.

Sincerely yours,

A QUESTION PEOPLE OFTEN ASK:

Is Camel justified in spending extra millions for costlier tobaccos?

THE ANSWER IS THIS:

CAMELS ARE THE LARGEST-SELLING CIGARETTE IN AMERICA

It is homenecul fact that nothing man does to tobacco can take the place of what Nature does. Camels are made of finer tobaccos into which Nature put extra goodness.

THERE'S only one way to get the finest tobaccos. That's by putting money into them. It has been well-known fact for years that Camel pays millions more for finer tobaccos. It's the natural way to make the finest tobacco. People have confidence in the finest tobaccos. They find that Camels are naturally mild and that the full, natural flavor of the costlier tobaccos in Camel is brought to perfection in the Camel blend. If you are not smoking Camel, try them now, and see if you, too, don't feel that Camel means unfulfilled pleasures!

"WE got to have a wild cigarette," says Mr. King.
"Never go to prison!"
"I am a Camel smoker. I've found my one weakness —I don't smoke without骆驼 cigarettes."

The new, rigid restrictions of pre- and post-Christmas cut represent an extension, however slight, of scholastic par ternalism at Bowdoin. The restrictions to them on the grounds of their independence to undergraduate can, of course, be met by the reply:

"But look at the extended holidays the college is giving this year." However, it is not clear on what theoretical grounds such a tangential prohibition of cutting on certain dates is to be justified.

By the phrase "scholastic paternalism" we mean the whole machinery of production and limited rule by which the college keeps a day to day check on the whereabouts of its presumably more weak-willed sons. A completely ideal institution of higher learning, having a student body unusually mature, would disagree with such machinery, allow students to go to as few or as many classes as they liked, and put all scholastic rules squarely on their shoulders. But human institutions are rarely ideal, and the col-gress has worked out a complicated system to give the student responsibility to those who seem the least likely to abuse it, and vice versa. For example, the senior men are allowed more freedom than freshmen; and it is easier for juniors and seniors to get to don't list the freshmen and sophomores. The system is automatic:

if a man abuses his privileges to the detriment of his mark, lowered grades force him immediately off the don't list or on probation or both, and his wings are clipped.

Now, however, with the new regulations announced by the dean, the college is repeating its whole position. It refuses to admit, on certain days of the year, at least, that any one class of students is more responsible than any other; refuses to admit that a man who has saved up his cull all semester is entitled to use them any time he wants to, at his own risk. Exactly what theory is supposed to justify the academy of putting dean's list and probation list on equal footing?

The dean's bulletin about the matter quotes the following irrelevant question: "Social engagements after college don't retain a man from work the following day, do they?" Of course not; and they don't at college either. The thing that releases a man from classes (if he is released) is the fact that he has prepared a certain standard of work in the past and is entitled to use his own judgment, to some extent, about cutting. Furthermore, that standard of work is certainly not measured by the number of classes he goes to, but by the results he gets, as shown on examination. If we are to introduce life after college into the discussion, how do the alumni expect the undergraduate's sense of responsibility and self discipline to be developed by an increasingly paternalistic scholastic system?

BOWDOIN LAGS BEHIND

The inauguration of varsity basketball at Bates and Colby this year (the second year for Maine) signals Bowdoin and college in the state without a team in the most popular of sports played during the winter. Though controversy on this subject is not new at Bowdoin, the fact remains that there is a lack of pleasable objections, while there is a host of reasons in favor of varsity basketball.

Most of the agitation stems from the student body in general as well as the other three winter sports to arouse the interest of the college as a whole. The universal appeal and popularity of basketball would certainly stimulate as a united college spirit, which always lapses at the end of the football season. With the probability of a state series, student interest would be even further increased.

The uncertainty of weather conditions favorable for football has long been demonstrated in all too clearly in the past, which would seem that football cannot be successful without a covered rink. As the season wore on and much cheaper to convert the gymnasium last winter. We do not suggest the discontinuance of football; but there should be no question that the two, at least at present, basketball is the more practicable and more desirable.

Of all objections to varsity basketball perhaps the greatest is the possibility of its interference with intramural games. But a varsity team would be slim and the schedule is such that there would still be plenty of chance for informal and interfreshman competition. The few independent games that would be enjoyed are those that there is plenty of basketball material in the Bowdoin student body. In fact, if larger gate receipts were desired, games might even be played in Portland.

PRESS BOX AGAIN

A retrospective glance at the football season just completed, discloses nothing in the management of this sport that could profitably be altered.

The few disappointments which only slightly dimmed an otherwise successful season were clearly the results of factors beyond the control of coaches and directors.

ILLUS HITS HYPOCRYSIS AMONG COLLEGE MEN

"In some degree or other we are all idealists," said Professor W. F. M. Beadle, speaking to the students of the university. "We all want to live up to the ideals we have set for ourselves, and to strive for what we believe to be right. However, it is important to recognize that there are times when our actions do not match our words, and when we fail to live up to the principles we hold dear. This is what I mean by 'hypocrisy.'"

Norman W. H. Miller, assistant professor of philosophy, gave his lecture on "The Importance of Ethical Decision Making." He emphasized the need for individuals to consider the consequences of their actions and to make choices that are consistent with their moral beliefs.

New Science And Class Buildings Feature College Grounds

By Richard W. Stutman, Jr.

Although Bowdoin College is best known for its picturesque campus and historic buildings, the college is also home to several state-of-the-art science and class buildings.

The new science building, which opened in 1967, is a modern facility that provides a state-of-the-art learning environment for students and faculty. The building includes laboratory spaces, classrooms, and office spaces, as well as state-of-the-art equipment and technology.

The new class building, which opened in 1975, is a multi-purpose facility that serves as a hub for student activities, including concerts, lectures, and other events. The building includes a large auditorium, a smaller meeting room, and several smaller rooms for smaller gatherings.

These buildings are part of Bowdoin College's commitment to providing a world-class educational experience for its students. The college is constantly looking for ways to improve and expand its facilities to meet the needs of its students and faculty.

Miss Betty Mansfield Discusses Student Summer Peace Campaign

"In this new age of atomic war," said Miss Betty Mansfield, "it is more important than ever that we work towards world peace. As students, we have a responsibility to take a stand against war and to work towards a world where peace is the norm."

Miss Mansfield, who is a pacifist and a member of the World Peace Fellowship, gave a talk on the importance of working towards world peace. She emphasized the need for young people to get involved and to take a stand against war.

"We must all work together to create a world where peace is the norm," she said. "We must all take a stand against war and work towards a world where peace is the only option."
Variety

By Robert H. Thorndike

The singing of "O sole mio" has been a common feature of the end of the evening at Bowdoin for many years.

Now John Irwin, an Associate Editor of the Echo, has introduced an improvement into the procedure.

As part of his research on the human voice, he has been studying the singing of "O sole mio" and has found that the original version is actually a much longer song than the one that is sung today.

He has therefore decided to introduce a new version of the song at the end of the evening, which will consist of the full length of the original song.

Irwin stated that he was inspired by a recent study that showed that the average person spent more than two hours per day looking at their phone.

He said, "It's like a disease.

I can't seem to look away.

It's like a habit now.

I just can't stop..."

Meanwhile, the Econ's editor, Peter B. Jones, has issued a statement expressing his concern about the growing problem of phone addiction.

He said, "We are seeing an alarming trend of students spending more and more time staring at their phones, to the point where it is impacting their ability to focus on their studies.

It's really a serious problem, and we need to find a solution to address it.

We're looking into various options, including limiting phone usage during class hours, and we hope to have more information to share with you soon."
Wells Coaches New Freshman Court Quintet

Note by Jack King

As the season draws near, the prospects of Bowdoin College basketball* look brighter than ever. The athletic department proudly presented the organization of a new basketball squad under the leadership of Coach Delbert Butterfield. The team has been selected on the basis of ability and fitness, and has shown a great deal of promise in the early trials. The experience of the players is wide and varied, and the team is expected to do well this year.

The team consists of: Delbert Butterfield, captain; John Mullen, first-string center; Bill Paine, second-string center; Jack Magee, reserve center; Bill Paine, reserve forward; Bill Paine, reserve guard; and Bill Morgan, reserve guard. The team has been picked up from the junior class, and is expected to do well this year.

Regarding the tactics of the squad, it is not certain that the tactics will be used. The team will be divided into two groups, the first group consisting of the seniors and the second group consisting of the juniors. The seniors will be coached by Coach Butterfield, and the juniors will be coached by Coach Magee. The seniors will be expected to do the majority of the work, and the juniors will be expected to do the majority of the work.

CUTTING AND SWIMMING

Another evil aspect of the current hedging of Christmas vacation with arbitrary cut-off restrictions has appeared in the recent refusal to allow the last team to leave here in time for the first three days of a seven-day winter training schedule with nearly 275 college athletes at the University of Florida, Gainesville.

Probably the Dean feels that if he allowed a special cutting privilege to any one group, his letting would be considered unfair by the rest of the teams. We are convinced that such would cut the students out of any time possible, other than in absolutely bad weather, to swim against outside opposition. This is the Dean's reason for leaving them in their training.

The case of the swimming team might well have been presented more strongly if it had not been for the fact that Navy or the present had not been disallowed by the faculty committee on athletics.
Just why the committee on athletics was so toted in it is not that the whole affair a mere "athletic jamboree." Obviously, any such event since would be insufficient grounds for rejection of a meet, as well as the month of December would be granted the teams of the University of Florida, Gainesville.

FRESHMAN CAGE SQUAD DROPS FIRST TILT TO CONV HIGH 31-22

Zach Modey

OFFICIAL REPORT

by Zach Modey

The Freshmen Basketball Squad suffered a 31-22 defeat at the hands of the Conv. High. After a close and hard-fought contest, the Freshmen were unable to overcome the superior talent of their opponents.

The game started off with an intense struggle, with both teams displaying high levels of skill and determination. The Freshmen were led by Zach Modey, who scored a total of 15 points. However, the Conv. High's superior team cohesion and experience proved too much for the Freshmen, who were unable to close the gap.

The Freshmen's loss is a setback, but it is not a defeat. They will use this experience to improve and come back stronger next time. The Freshmen's next game is scheduled for next week, and they are looking forward to the challenge.

WINTER GAMBOLS IN FOURTH DAY

Halting Wine High Hurdles

By Jack Modes

The Wine High Hurdles and Dunky Maywood were victorious in their second appearance on the track this season, defeating the Football Aces and the Varsity Track Squad.

The Wine High Hurdles, led byModes, scored 116 points against the Football Aces. The Hurdles' strong showing was due to Modes' exceptional performance in the hurdles, where he set a new personal record.

Dunky Maywood, on the other hand, outscored the Varsity Track Squad by a comfortable margin of 120 points. Maywood's success was due to his exceptional speed and agility, which he displayed in the sprints.

The Wine High Hurdles and Dunky Maywood will continue their training in preparation for the upcoming track season, aiming to maintain their high level of performance.

SPORTS SIDELIGHTS

by Jim Tracy

Bowdoin's name was thrown into the ring recently by a line of well-publicized boxers who had the sporting world._ A new six-pack of bowling pins was bought for the College, and the students were eager to test their skills.

The new pins were of a high-quality material, and the students were amazed at how easily they bent and broke. However, the authorities were quick to intervene, and the pins were quickly removed from circulation.

The incident has sparked a debate among the students about the role of sports in college life. Some argue that sports should be encouraged, while others believe that they should be strictly monitored to ensure safety.

COMMUNICATION

to the Editor of the Orient:

I wasత��

I refer to your recent editorial concerning the need for better communication in the College. As a member of the Class of 1989, I fully agree with your perspective.

I would like to propose a series of initiatives that could improve communication within the College. These include:

1. Establishing a regular newsletter to keep students informed about College news and events.
2. Creating a platform for students to voice their opinions and concerns.
3. Implementing a system for faculty and staff to provide regular updates on course developments.

I believe that these steps would go a long way in improving communication within the College and fostering a more collaborative and connected community.

Thank you for your time and consideration.

I hope that this recognition will inspire all students to strive for excellence in their academic and extracurricular pursuits.

Mustard and Crass

In all of Bowdoin's fraternities (and it is our business to know each other's business), Poly's New Year's Ball was the event of the season. There was no question among the gals, that the Whittier brothers, and their friends, had chosen the best time and place to (as they say) 'cut a rug.' No one knows what the babaloo was all about, but apparently there was some kind of a new 'hit' to be caught at the Poly Ball. Anyway, the Poly Ballie was the belle of the ball, and the Poly Brothers made up the rest of the guests. And as the Poly Ballie sang: 'You're the one!'

They were the only ones who seemed to be having a good time. The other fraternities seemed to be taking the ball too seriously, and the Whittier brothers made up for it with their carefree attitude.

during the festival, the Whittier brothers were the most popular guests at the Poly Ball. They were the ones who seemed to be having the most fun, and they were the ones who seemed to be the most popular. Three weeks ago, Bowdoin was just as well behind the Times as anyone else. Part of that was due to the fact that the Times was not quite out yet. But Bowdoin was now even more apparent, and the Times, too, was more developed, and the general public was more aware of the situation then than it is now.

In the meantime, Bowdoin has been developing in a more organized and systematic manner. A number of people have been working on the problem of bringing Bowdoin into the present, and the Times has been of great help in this development. The Times has been publishing a series of articles on Bowdoin, and these have been very helpful in bringing Bowdoin to the attention of the public.

In addition to the Times, a number of other newspapers have been publishing articles on Bowdoin, and these have helped to bring Bowdoin to the attention of the public in a more general way. The Times has been publishing a series of articles on Bowdoin, and these have been very helpful in bringing Bowdoin to the attention of the public.

Through the efforts of these newspapers, Bowdoin has been brought to the attention of the public, and the Times has been a very valuable partner in this development.

BOWDOIN ORIENT

Bowdoin has become known as late as the last of Nim-celebration. Organizers and propagandists have stated with a decided

EXAMINATION Hop!

The test and the testing date, house parties have come and gone; there are twelve cramming days left before midterms. By way of a fact based on a much-discussed subject, here are two practical suggestions that the ORIENT has received concerning next year's annual problems.

1. Christmas 1932, comes on a Sunday. Instead of beginning vacation Thursday afternoon and extending it to the Friday after New Year's, why not end the college start the holidays two days earlier (on Tuesday afternoon) and begin classes the Wednesday after New Year's week? Such a calendar would not change the length of the vacation, but would equalize the shock on either end and relieve the natural Xmas-shopping rush pressure toward home.

2. The ORIENT would welcome letters discussing the advantages or inconveniences of a supposed house party instead of the Christmas dance—a change some may, will be seriously considered in the future. Parties on, probably, the Tuesday and Friday of the second week of examinations would come on days when there are no classes at a time when every one, pass or fail, ought to be in the mood.

With the dozen packed into February and/or four vacation days scheduled in before Yuletide, there would probably be reason whatever for a repetition of this year's stringent cutting restrictions. But whether such changes are made or not, the cutting rule is a departure from practice at Bowdoin's normal season of administering this. A departure, we think, in the wrong direction.

"BUY BOWDOIN"

Bowdoin has been known of late as the seat of min-celebration. Organizers and propagandists have stated with a decided diggings to that movement will "take" at Bowdoin, it will be a success anywhere.

It is not that we have never been exposed to the stimulants which an army of enthusiastic, and often sincere, reformers administer to the undergraduates of a nation for a year. We always receive our full quota of the advocates of world peace, industrial cooperation, religious activities and other programs, and we doubt they are as capable any who go to other institutions.

Still, for some inexplicable reason, when subjected to the chill atmosphere of Brunswick their arguments seem to lose effect and become impotent. Movements which may be attracting converts by the hundred in other colleges are greeted here, at best, by a handful of students and few of these are stirred to any sustained activity.

Inasmuch as this apparent inertia keeps us from participating in peace rallies, boycotts, band-o-room, and other sporadic demonstrations, we condemn it. However, in its extreme form it indicates a lack of social responsibility. Even though we are safely tucked away in the wide of Maine, one hundred and forty miles of civilization, we cannot escape the fact that things are happening in the world which will sooner or later affect us directly.

Too many undergraduates refuse even to talk about the problems of the day.

Somewhere hiding among the campus there must be a real live Communist, or at least a man who believes that the present social order is a little short of perfection. We may not agree with his thesis, but if there is such a person here it is clearly his duty to justify and try to show us the error of our ways. We suggest that if Bowdoin is ever to be colonized intellectually, the impotent must come from within.

Houseparty Classes Have Coffee, Formal Dress, and Many "Coeds"

BY CHARLES HENDRICKS, JR.

Now that our men have gone and in front of us were something new, there is nothing left of houseparty classes but formal dress and many "coeds." This year's group was composed of a large number of new-borns, and there were some fresh-faced new faces in the crowd, which should make in making those three days as enjoyable as possible. The classes were responsible for many jokes and stories, and was the social climbing over the back of the crowd. The band would occasionally be heard as the crowd would break out in song. Monday night, everything was very even when someone decided to change the feeling, no deep feeling was visible above the surface of the crowd, and it is interesting to see how the surface of the crowd can hide the situation of the moment. Tuesday night, the crowd were as visible as on Saturday, and they were visible above the surface of the crowd, and it is interesting to see how the surface of the crowd can hide the situation of the moment. Since early fall the revived White Key has been running smoothly. But, at the same time, it is felt that there is a definite gap between the society and the student body, because of a misunderstanding which, if corrected, should lead to more efficient services of White Key duties.

The function of the White Key in two-fold: (1) to be in charge of interfraternity activities and (2) to act as a hospital service to all members of the student body and faculty of the college, athletic or otherwise. The principal duty of the White Key is to relieve the athletic office of an unnecessary labor. It must be pointed out, however, that on this matter, the opinion of the White Key is in the best interest of the student body.

Unfortunately there are times when teams of totally different caliber are at the same time. In such cases, a certain amount of enjoyment must be sacrificed. As far as possible the White Key has pledged itself to maintain the balance of such "breaks" among the different fraternities.

POPCONCERTS

"One hour of classical music, programed on the familiar 'pop concert' plan is scheduled for Williams students and faculty members through the medium of radio records..." "The above is an excerpt from a story appearing in The Williams Record of January eighth. It becomes more interesting, however, if we compare it with an editorial appearing in the column last October and urging the same thing for Bowdoin as follows: "Regular concerts might be held in the afternoon or evening once or twice a week, with the programs of records to be played published in advance."

There is little doubt that a series of programs such as this being held at Williams would prove very popular with students who are continually complaining of the lack of cultural life at Bowdoin. Little difficulty, it seems, would be experienced in arranging the concerts, and expenses, if any, at all, would be negligible. However, it becomes apparent at once that the Chapel Music Room, in its present estate, with its chairs and bare walls, would be very suitable for a gathering of this sort. Any tendency toward an atmosphere of the classroom at this concert is naturally to be discouraged, and under these circumstances the Union Lounge seems to be the suitable place.

In the meantime any plans to move, improve, or renovate the present Music Room should be equipped in hope that some day Bowdoin may have musical equipment comparable to other colleges of its standards. A glance at the following list taken from a December issue of The Ethics Weekly may suggest various ways for improvement: "Equipment in the so-called Music Room includes three electric violins, three grand and five upright pianos, one grand piano with panel attachments, and a manual house organ... There are 2200 Victor records and about the same number of piano rolls. A good collection of classical scores and chamber music may be found in this room, as it is a place where the amateur music lover can enjoy some music at leisure."

A NEW COLLEGE LAW?

At the suggestion of the Governing Board a committee appointed by the president in August is making a study of the advisability of requiring that every senior shall have paid his fraternity bills before graduation. The idea of such a law has been submitted to the students, and in the event that such a law becomes effective, it would mean that it would be necessary to pay in advance the entire cost of the student's education at the college. This would also have the advantage of allowing the student to pay the full amount of the college's expenses before he graduates.

The President's Message

"The University of the Year Victory Campaign for the next academic year is in full swing, and on Tuesday, the students are canvassing the campus, soliciting subscriptions. The President's message is to encourage the students to contribute generously to the fund."

CARRILLO BOWYON DEBATERS

Need, Small Gain Bownbroll's First Home Victory Of Season

The Bowdon debating team won the first victory of the season over the College of the University of Tennessee. The Bowdon College team was led by Walter Rees, Jr., and by George F. Robinson, who was elected President of the College last year. The Bowdon team was defeated by the College of the University of Tennessee, 3-0.

The debate was held in the Recitation Hall of the University of Tennessee, and was attended by a large number of students and faculty members from both institutions. The debate was moderated by Professor J. R. Matthews, of the Department of Speech, and was judged by Professor J. R. Smith, of the Department of English.

The Bowdon team opened the debate with a strong attack on the thesis that the banning of books is a violation of the right of freedom of speech. The team argued that the right of freedom of speech is not absolute, and that there are certain books that should be banned for various reasons. The team emphasized the importance of a free and open society in which people are free to express their ideas and beliefs, and argued that banning books would undermine this freedom.

The College of the University of Tennessee team countered with a strong defense of the ban on books. The team argued that the banning of books is necessary to protect society from the spread of ideas that are dangerous or harmful. The team emphasized the importance of a strong and healthy society, and argued that banning books is necessary to protect this society from the spread of ideas that are dangerous or harmful.

The debate was a close and hard-fought one, with both teams making strong arguments. In the end, the Bowdon team prevailed, winning the debate by a score of 3-0.

Both teams were well-prepared and argued their points effectively. The debate was a great success, and was enjoyed by all who attended.

A response to the management side of our school concerning the Collegian office last week.

Conserving the College Water.
There is really no call for The Collegian to save water. The College does not have the practice of watering the lawn, and the students' drinking does not amount to much. Water is a precious commodity, but the College cannot afford to waste it.

The Brunswicker is a daily newspaper published by the students of Bowdoin College, Maine. The Brunswicker is a student-run newspaper that provides news, opinion, and culture to the Bowdoin community. It covers a wide range of topics, from campus events to national and international news.

Newspapers like the Brunswicker play a crucial role in fostering a vibrant and informed community. They serve as a platform for students to express their views, share information, and engage in meaningful discussions. Through their articles and editorials, newspapers contribute to the dialogue on important issues and help shape public opinion.

In conclusion, the Brunswicker is an essential resource for the Bowdoin community. It not only provides important news and information but also acts as a catalyst for meaningful conversations and critical thinking. As a student, I encourage everyone to support and participate in the Brunswicker's mission to keep the Bowdoin community informed and engaged.

The Sun "Rises""

By John H. Rich, Jr.

When our Judas committee from the Student Union Board went before the United States Board of Education to try their proposed panacea on the high school, the chairman of the committee was absent, so the members of the committee had to fall back to the usual routine and make up the ranks. It is apparent, nevertheless, that the committee is a very noisy and enthusiastic group. They have been trying to get the whole world to believe that there is a Passing Year, and that the students of the high school are not only planning it, but are ready to carry it out.

A COMMITTEE is soon to be chosen. We are not sure who it will be, but we are confident that it will be a most instructive group. One of the most difficult problems that this committee of the high school will face is to decide upon a new year. Very frequently groups of students have a hard time in choosing a new year, but we are confident that this committee will have no such a race this year, and that it will be a most instructive group. They will have to decide upon a new year, and we are confident that they will not have any such a race this year, and that it will be a most instructive group.

SUNDAY school is the most interesting scene of our town's educational life. Every Sunday morning, we see a group of people going to Sunday school, and we think that they are going to have a most instructive group. For that matter, we think that all the groups of people that go to Sunday school are going to have a most instructive group. The groups of people that go to Sunday school are going to have a most instructive group.

That only undergraduates can become auditors was reported one day in the local newspaper. It is said that the Undergraduate Club is the only one of the student organizations that is allowed to have auditors. This is a very interesting fact, and we are confident that it will be the most interesting fact.

In a most interesting fashion tomorrow night, our local radio station will be broadcasting a program. The program will be a most interesting one, and we are confident that it will be the most interesting one.

Second Of Art Parties

The Bowdoin Art Association plans to give two art parties this month: the first on March 10, and the second on March 24. The first party will be given in the President's Hall, and the second in the library. The parties will be open to all members of the college, and to all students who are interested in art.

SCARFED MINNESOTANS: Announcement of scholarship awards each year is almost always the signal for a mild outburst of campus growth. Although no one, of course, has an immediate desire to see all money go to the student body, financial support from the college is a possible sum of money in this type of distribution. In the past, at least in some quarters, a feeling that the task was not handled with complete justice. This feeling might occur to a few elementary facts about the method of scholarship awards were better understood.

In the first place, not all the available funds can be distributed to any one whom the scholarship committee may select. The mythical yearly grant to one-star pupil, however, has been given to all those diligent students who have not only been to college and have their own special system of work, but have been to a certain localities, graduates of certain schools, and so forth.

Secondly, there is not enough money to supply all needs. Every year, after the individual cases have been studied, the goal of all applicants is figured out, and it inevitably happens that the total scholarship funds will only supply a fraction of this need. The next step is to determine what, exactly, this fraction is, and to apply the general principle of distribution. That is, each applicant will normally receive only a part of what the committee has found that he really needs to get him through the year. However, this part of the student's income is not evaluated.

At the bottom of student dissatisfaction with the awards lies the fact that there is no one— at any rate, hardly any one— or who really knows what anybody else's financial needs are. The opinions of undergraduates in these matters are nearly always based on unimportant or only partial knowledge of the relevant facts.

The scholarship committee, on the other hand, has amassed over a period of years an immense amount of detailed and complete information about the students, which the applicant has no information, derived from a number of sources, is naturally private and not accessible to the public at all. Indeed it often happens that the committee will know more about the financial affairs of a student's family than the student does himself.

To handle each case fairly, the committee has set up an on-the-spot committee, the committee has set up an on-the-spot method of procedure, rather complicated in its workings. If any applicant is dissatisfied with the result, appeal to the President is always open to him. No system is infallible; but in view of the time, effort, and careful thought which go into the making of the scholarship award, it is an appeal to the scholarship board, it is necessary to the undergraduate body to accept the dispensations of the committee with good grace, and to realize that service to the institution is forming a part of the high school, the college, and the world. The same old situation regarding house bands at home parties is here again, and already rumors are abroad that certain houses are considering increasing the budget to the same old way in order to have the "best man on campus." The "honesty" will come at a price, but if the applicant's income is not accessible, there is no way of checking the statement that the committee's awards are not sufficient.

Relay Gives White Tankmen Victory In Closing Minutes

White Unofficially Cracks N.C. Record In 3,000 Meter Relay

By Bob Fornata

Bowdoin's 3,000-meter relay team tied a national record set by the University of North Carolina. The Bowdoin team's time of 7 minutes, 41.6 seconds was equal to the well-known North Carolina team, which raced its 3,000-meter relay on the same course over a week ago. Bowdoin's time was an improvement of 1.5 seconds on the record, which had been set by the North Carolina team. The time was a new world record, one that was held for only a week. The Bowdoin team's record was achieved by a close margin, with the first two legs of the race being run by Dave Davis and B. W. Boulter, respectively. Davis set the lead by winning the 110-meter hurdles in 14.2 seconds, while Boulter successfully defended the record in the 440-yard dash. The third leg of the relay was run by three Bowdoin men, and the final leg was run by a second three-man team. The time was recorded by a Bowdoin coach, who noted that the team's performance was one of the best in the nation. The relay was run at the Bowdoin track meet, held on the campus of the University of North Carolina, and was watched by a large crowd of spectators. The team's performance was an impressive one, and it was one that was well-deserved. The team's record was a testament to the hard work and dedication of the members of the team, who had trained throughout the season to achieve this level of excellence. The team's performance was a source of great pride for the coaches and the fans, and it was a moment that will be remembered for many years to come.

From was one of the two new boys added to the squad by Coach Abendroth. With the return of Dick Hames and Jim Crone, the track squad is expected to be one of the strongest in the league.

Cavalcade and 'March of Time' Will Be Shown Saturday Evening

By Marcel L. Phane

This is the second year that "Cavalcade" and "March of Time" will be shown in the College theater, sponsored by the Student Council. The motion pictures are planned to start at 8:30 p.m.

The Student Council has voted a $300 grant to the College Community Hospital for the purchase of a radio. The hospital has been doing a splendid job of care for patients, and it is hoped that the radio will be a great help in adding to the comfort of patients and their friends.

From the eventful story of one of the most exciting fatal auto accidents of all time, "Cavalcade" is being shown this evening. The fatal accident is the work of the late John H. R. Phane, assistant chief, Kansas City, Mo. The main character of the story was played by William H. Bowlby, who is the winner of the Kansas City Homecoming contest. The story was directed by W. B. W. and W. B. W. Jr.

"March of Time" is a series of short films that have been shown in this country for several years. The films are produced by the March of Time, Inc., and are distributed by the United Artists Corporation. The films are shown in the College theater every Saturday evening.

The Student Council has voted a grant of $50 to the College Community Hospital for the purchase of a radio. The hospital has been doing a splendid job of care for patients, and it is hoped that the radio will be a great help in adding to the comfort of patients and their friends.

Once again we find ourselves in the midst of the month of March with all its representation at Bowdoin, with a host of lectures, dramatic productions, debates, singing contests, movies, athletic events and beer examinations. Without once stepping from the campus the student is exposed to extra-curricular events that, during other parts of the school year, are few.

Such activity, combined with the fact that the student is at his low ebb physically, would seem to contradict the oft stated observation that the period from March 1 to April 1 is the most productive scholastically. Can it be that the student pays no attention to events outside the classroom? A period of high scholastic attainment is not to be lamented, but it certainly loses none of its desirability if we look at the neglect of all those additional opportunities. Obviously, many of the attractions which we see advertised on the bulletin boards are inferior in quality to others, but the task of selecting the most profitable one does not present a problem to the wide student.

Yet, even surrounded by activity, a great number of the students here continue to lose sight of the magnificent educational opportunity given for self-improvement through instruction. Of course, no student deficient in scholarship is to be encouraged to draw his attention from his scholastic work, but this group represents a small minority. Many of these lectures and debates are designed to appeal to the student on the excuse of studying and then nonchalantly play bridge or "tug" for the whole evening.

In spite of all that has ever been said on this subject and in spite of all that will be said in the future, this trend will prevail and continue. The fact still remains worthy of consideration, however, that a college education is far more than instruction and that the student will reap in proportion as he sews.

THE ONE-ACTS

Apart from the Quill, the Bowdoin student's chief opportunity to exercise his creative talents in the annual report play contest, two types of drama which crop up year after year in this contest and which are exemplified by last Monday's first and second prize winners are the melodrama and the farce.

The trouble with both the melodrama and the farce (as theatrical types) is that each relies too heavily on the element of surprise. High comedy derives its humor directly from situation and character; farce, still more, from its absurdity. A melodrama is a tissue of incongruous plot-elements and by break or even crude stage action. Similarly the difference between tragedy and melodrama is that tragedy arouses pity and fear by means of logical argument and careful motivation, whereas in melodrama the audience must be kept in suspense by some much needed device which is in a word, "tear-jerking" action. There is something too much left over for the characterization and the plot "building" which are the only things that make violent action really convincing. Sensationalism is the element that accounts for the too frequent success of both farce and melodrama alike.

"The Rabbit's Foot" was unquestionably the best of this year's plays, surpassing the others in both dialogue and general technique. The more fact that it was written is in one scene, those who enjoy his greatest familiarity with the devices of the theater; and, moreover, the element of reality in it. It is a little above ordinary melodrama. As he "Harry Potter" says the ghost of the actors, particularly of Dewar and Ware, accounted for a good many of the laughs it got. But one sometimes wishes that Bowdoin's playwrights could aim at, at least at more artistic types of drama. Nobody expects productions revealing the better works of Shakespeare and Molière; but it does seem that some clever undergraders ought to be able to write a play-winning, lively play that gained its effectiveness from neither power nor the bomb.

The fabrics in these new Benoit suits were woven by hand on the islands of Harris and Lewis. They are the genuine hand-loomed Harris Tweeds, with the richness, off shadings, and durability characteristic of this famous cloth. LARY TO INTERVIEW SENIORS NEXT WEEK

Vacational Days this year will be spent by members of the Senior class enjoying the area around Bowdoin College and attending the spring meeting of the National Senior Class Association at Bowdoin College.
One organization that is making an effort to educate people is the Student Police Service, which consists of officers in uniform. These officers are trained to handle emergencies, providing protection and assistance to the students at large. They are trained to handle a variety of situations, from minor disputes to more serious incidents. The Student Police Service is a valuable resource for the students, and they should be encouraged to use it whenever possible.

One of the main goals of the Student Police Service is to prevent crime on campus. They are trained to recognize potential threats and to take action to prevent them. They are also trained to handle emergency situations, such as medical emergencies or natural disasters. The Student Police Service is an integral part of the college community and should be supported in any way possible.

Portland Maroons Defeated By One Point In State Interclassentials

Joe Linder

Hebron Academy came through the Easton game with a 14-13 victory over the Rice Owls on Saturday afternoon. The Owls were able to knock the Maroons off balance in the second half after a close 1-0 halftime score. In the first half, the Owls were not too much of a threat, and in the second half, they managed to pull off one of the biggest upsets of the season. This game was truly an example of just how good the Owls are this season. They were able to make an impressive comeback against a tough opponent, and their persistence and determination paid off in the end. The Owls have been working hard to improve their skills and strategy, and it's clear that their efforts are paying off. Their ability to adapt and respond to the Maroons' tactics is truly impressive, and their ability to hold their own in pressure situations is something that can only come with experience and practice. Overall, this was a great game for both teams, and it's clear that both will belooking to improve and build on their performances in future games. It's clear that the Owls have a bright future ahead of them, and they'll be sure to be a force to be reckoned with in the upcoming season.
