HATCH PREPARATORY SCHOOL

Founded 1926

Established as a summer school in 1926 by the present headmaster, Hatch Preparatory School was extended to a year-round school in 1928. Many small schools have appeared and disappeared on the educational scene. A number have grown into something very fine but something very different. Hatch Preparatory has long been recognized by educators as a leader in the small-school field. It has held fast to its small-school convictions, has never been tempted by numbers.

Results

Limitation of enrollment has been an important factor in maintaining the School's scholastic record. The enrollment is determined by the number of courses that must be scheduled in meeting the needs of each student. It is not unusual for a student to save a year in school.

Nation-Wide Clientele

The alumni (over 900) represent 34 of the 48 states. The majority of applicants are sponsored by the heads of larger schools who are the first to recognize that many boys thrive under the system of small classes and close direction. A flexible program, adjusted to the interests and aims of the individual and directed by a faculty of one teacher for every four boys, facilitates distinctive college preparation.

BOWDOIN’S TWO FUNDS
During these fall weeks, the staff of the Sesquicentennial Fund has been busy organizing to complete the canvass of Alumni. At Commencement, about thirty-six percent of us had registered our participation in this once-in-a-lifetime effort of the College to secure needed capital sums. Contributions since June have brought the percentage figure to about forty and the total of alumni gifts has reached $633,000 of the $1,100,000 sought. Again the hundreds of volunteer solicitors are endeavoring to contact the sixty percent of us who have not yet contributed. Their job is not easy. We are a floating group; address changes are many and frequent. And when contacted not all of us help as much as we might by acting promptly when asked to give. Let’s recognize the contribution which these Bowdoin solicitors are making in time and effort. Thank them for calling and encourage them with prompt participation in the Sesquicentennial Fund. Each of us can find a yardstick for our giving in the table on page six. Somebody placed us back when — and we can most appropriately try to contribute, or pledge, the amount of that stake. Even if we are unable to contribute the entire indicated sum, it is something to shoot at.

And let us not forget our annual Alumni Fund gift. Unlike the Sesquicentennial Fund, the Alumni Fund is not once-in-a-lifetime; it is a yearly affair. Unlike the Sesquicentennial Fund, the Alumni Fund is not an appeal for capital sums; it is an effort to help the College meet its current needs and to provide those extra features of Bowdoin life which we alumni insist upon. And, unlike the Sesquicentennial Fund, the Alumni Fund is not the appeal of the College; it is our own undertaking, among ourselves, to assemble a yearly gift to Bowdoin. Your chosen Directors confer with the Governing Boards and agree upon certain current college needs. They include amounts for such items of particular alumni interest as scholarships for entering freshmen, subscriptions to the ALUMNUS and the field work in Admissions and set an objective for the year. Ere long we shall hear from the Alumni Fund Chairman and later, from our respective Class Agents in their organized program to gather together our annual gift to Bowdoin. As we give generously to the Sesquicentennial Fund, let us not overlook the annual Alumni Fund which continues to keep Bowdoin strong and which President Sills still believes is “Bowdoin’s greatest single asset.”

THE COVER
At the time of the Sesquicentennial observance in 1914, Kosti Ruhomaa was one of a lively team sent here to do a pictorial article for Life Magazine. They were thorough in their coverage and we all hoped that some welcome publicity would be forthcoming. But the magazine editors rated the Bowdoin story as less important than other current stories and the article never was published. The College did, however, purchase about 100 of the pictures taken. This dramatic shot of the inscription on the Presidents’ Gateway is one of those pictures. As part of the recent campus alterations, the Class of 1907 gift was moved bodily from its place near Winthrop Hall to a new location on Bath Street, where it now frames the main entrance to the campus. Grading and planting around the gateway are not yet finished. A picture of our new front door must be taken later, but your editors agreed that we could appropriately use Mr. Ruhomaa’s picture now.
ADAM WALSH'S 1948 football team brought us a share of the State title, produced a winning four-and-three-record and played in some of the most thrilling games seen here in some years. But this ill-starred squad produced more frustrations than any team an undergraduate can remember.

For this was to be the year. Backs like Bob McAvoy, Dick Rosse, Dave Burke and Julie Siroy recalled the legendary tales of Benny Karsokas and Andy Haldane. The 209-pound line with its behemoths Butler and Tausig and its 60-minute mammoths Fife and Sibson inspired the retelling of the Niles Perkins and Frank Sabateski sagas of old.

No team could have lived up to what was expected of this one. We were supposed to cut short the Wesleyan streak at fourteen straight wins and roll unscarred into the State Series. Maine was supposed to be good, but we would beat her. This is what everyone had hoped. We were potent, but so was Wesleyan, so was Amherst and so was Maine.

The team did produce and did so admirably. Paced by the highscoring McAvoy and by Rosse and Burke who were among the nation's twenty ranking small college runners and passers respectively, the Big White more than doubled opposition scoring with 128 points. The season scoring average was Bowdoin 18, Opponent 9. But despite a fever-pitch level of team and college spirit, we missed out in three of the four close decisions. The team, individually and collectively, was the greatest seen here in many seasons. That its record in cold won-and-lost figures was not as good is the fault of no one. Win or lose, the Polar Bears were never finished until the hands of the clock, like the hands of fate, had completed their inevitable cycle.

Tufts

A cocky Tufts team, beaten after the first two Bowdoin touchdowns early in the opening period, was decimated before a frightful Bowdoin onslaught in the season's opener, played at Whittier Field. McAvoy's reliable plunging carried him home... three times — from the five, the twelve and from the three. Dick Beckler’s touchdown and Jim Draper’s field goal and conversion brought the White a 28-to-7 decision.

_Wesleyan_

A tremendous crowd of students who had flocked from Brunswick to Middletown, Conn. saw their team bid fair to scuttle the Cardinal gravy train but lose 13 to 0. Not until late in the third quarter did the all-conquering Wesmen stretch their half-time advantage with a second aerial score. But Wesleyan had extreme difficulty in stopping the visitor’s attack despite her hard-charging line, the best seen all season.

_Amherst_

A wild scoring duel in the Pines saw the left-handed passing wizardry of Lew Hammond baffle the Bowdoin defense while two touchdowns by Siroy and one by Rosse maintained a constant threat to upset Amherst’s winning streak. Rosse’s long kick-off returns and scrimmage gains added a touch of the spectacular to this game, but injuries to McAvoy and Capt. Charlie Lovejoy made the Bowdoin attack sputter as the Lord Jeffs won 27 to 19.

_Williams_

A large delegation of Bowdoin fathers and frenzied students watched the Bowdoin air and ground attacks mesh with mechanical perfection in the 34-to-0 rout of Williams here in the final pre-series contest. McAvoy, Marty Lee, Rosse, Bob Graff and Al Veale rolled to successive touchdowns while Jim Draper’s place-kick finesse gave the White four more points.

_Colby_

Overcoming early misfortunes at Waterville, the Walshmen humbled a weak Colby eleven to win decisively, 28 to 0 as everyone joined in the fun. Two Burke passes, one to Lee and one to Paul Zdanowicz, counted for a brace of touchdowns. Siroy and Tom Leone scored the others as Draper converted each time.

_Bates_

Rosse and McAvoy were the one-two needed to fight a surprising Bates team, but it was Draper’s toe which gave the Big White the State Series clincher, 13 to 12. Rosse’s brokenfield dash of 29 yards paid off the first six points in the second quarter while McAvoy plunged from the one in the same period. But Bates roared back for 12 points in the third before the game assumed the see-saw dueling of the typical State Series contest.

Maine

In the final game it was the extra point which beat Bowdoin. Before a huge homecoming crowd which exceeded 10,000, Henry Dombkowski of Maine converted after his team's only touchdown as the Black Bears broke a 6 to 6 tie and went on, though decisively outplayed, to upset the favorite White 7-6. Bob McAvoy spelled finis to a first period drive of 56 yards as the Whittier Field crowd roared its acclaim. But the big Maine line rushed the extra point attempt by Jim Draper, who had made good on nine of ten attempts before this, the biggest of all. Interceptions and a fumble denied the Walshmen four scoring opportunities within the visitor's twenty-yard line. Victory was not written as the season closed with a three-way tie for the State crown. The new electric scoreboard, gift of Adriel U. Bird '16 and Harvey D. Gibson '02, was used for the first time.

The team may not have fulfilled the mighty dream concocted for it by its undoubting and untiring followers. But if we can throw aside the scoreboard and recall the smooth, deceptive meshing of all the elements in a crushing attack and look to the undying defensive drive of this team, we will rank it with the best that the College has seen. No one can deny Adam Walsh's just praise that this was "the fightingest team" of the Golden Era which he has brought back to Bowdoin. Your team has represented your College well. It has brought nothing but credit to Bowdoin.

The small varsity squad curtailed the usual junior varsity schedule. The J.V.'s played but one game, winning from Hebron. The freshman team, handicapped, as always, by lack of time for practice, gave a good account of themselves by winning from Coburn, Hebron and Ricker and losing only to Nels Corey's powerful team from M.C.I. Several of the line and backfield players will be welcome additions to next fall's varsity squad.
At a meeting of the football lettermen on November 16, James H. Sibson ’50 and David F. Burke ’50 were elected co-captains of the varsity team for the 1949 season. Both are juniors and veterans; both have been named on “all-teams” for the past two years. Sibson comes from Framingham, Massachusetts and is a member of the basketball team. Burke hails from Wollaston, Massachusetts. He also plays basketball and baseball. Sanford R. Sistaire ’50 of Pittsfield, Massachusetts will manage the 1949 team. David W. Garland, son of Edward P. Garland ’16 will be the assistant manager.

Eleven of the 1948 lettermen have played their last game for Bowdoin. When the squad assembles next fall three valuable backs will be missing, Veale, Thorburn and Beckler. The toll in the line is heavier. Ends Lee, Finnagan, Zdanowicz and Begley, guards Lovejoy and Robinson, Tausig at tackle and Draper at center leave gaping holes to be filled.

The Bowdoin Plan

James B. Hall ’47 Gives First Hand Account of a Significant Contribution to World Affairs

It has been said that war is not all evil, that, though war may destroy, coerce and repress, out of these very marks of degeneration arises a new desire, a will, and thus a way to erect a newer and purer state of human relationships.

Like every other college in the United States, Bowdoin has just lately emerged from the greatest destructive war in the history of the world. Between the years 1941 and 1945 this small college paid a heavy price in the loss of lives. Bowdoin men were sent to every part of the globe to fight against peoples they did not know or understand. They were often confused about the customs and convictions of these other peoples, but they had a war to win and they gave generously to meet the war’s demands.

When the undergraduates returned to Bowdoin they knew they were not returning to normalcy. There was a gap in their ranks caused by the absence of men who would never return to Bowdoin again. These young college veterans knew that this gap could never be filled. They also knew that they must do everything in their power to prevent the recurrence of a world war. Overnight Bowdoin became world minded. Out of the destruction, the mistrust, the uncertainty of war sprang a plan, almost spontaneously. The men on the small ivy campus had come up with something they hoped would in some way help to solve world problems. Their proposal is now widely known as the Bowdoin Plan.

Inspiration for the Bowdoin Plan may be attributed largely to one man, Joseph C. Wheeler ’48. Joe had always been interested in world affairs as an undergraduate. After returning to Bowdoin from the war he decided to do something to help people of different nations understand one another. Wheeler became president of the Political Forum and an avid member of the World Federalists. In March of 1947, acting as president of the Scholarship Committee for the Chi Psi Fraternity, he presented a plan to the College calling for a year’s free tuition to six foreign students in the event that as many fraternities would provide the room and board. Wheeler termed this “a nearly painless method of contributing toward international understanding.” The fraternities immediately accepted the proposal and President Sills gave it his endorsement. Thus, the Bowdoin Plan came into being.

The Bowdoin Plan calls for the provision of room and board by the fraternities and the waiver of tuition by the College. The foreign student has only to account for his personal expenses. A deserving student, who ordinarily could not afford to come to college in the United States, may study here with a minimum of expense.

Great care is taken in the selection of the foreign students who come to Bowdoin. Here’s the way it works. Joseph Pignolet, one of the French students under the Bowdoin Plan, read a notice on the bulletin board at the University of Lyon last November, advertising the possibility of study in the United States. He hastily filled out an application and then came the long process of elimination. The application was sent to the Committee. on Selection at Paris and, after being approved there, was sent on to the Educational Institute at New York City. At the Institute it was noted that the applicant desired to study English at a New England college. Bowdoin had registered its desire to have a man of Joe’s calibre as its guest for a year, so Joe was accepted.

At the end of last May Joe received word that he was to study in the United States. His application had been approved on the basis of “high scholarship, outstanding personality, and seriousness of purpose.” He was provided with a non-quota passport and in September he boarded a Dutch liner for the United States and Bowdoin.

Joe is now a guest of the Sigma Nu Fraternity. He, like other foreign students under the Bowdoin Plan, was fortunate enough to survive the “weeding out process”. Joe is extremely happy to be able to study at Bowdoin. He is, however, a bit surprised that there are no fences around the campus as there are in European countries. To quote Joe, “It’s great!”.

At present there are ten other men like Joseph Pignolet studying at Bowdoin and swapping a little of their culture for a little of ours. These men are Mingun Bak of Korea, Jose de Tejada of Spain, Kien-Tien Fong of China, Heinnick Gleissner of Upper Austria, Michael Halse of England, Steven Schaap of the Netherlands, Philippe Jaudel of France, Gerd Spitzbart of Germany, Frederick Maroth of Hungary and Ole Thomas of Denmark.

Each of these men is contributing something to Bowdoin. Many of them enter into the various college extra-curricular activities. Discussions about political systems, religion and the histories of their respective countries serve to enlighten all participants. Even an occasional “bull session” over a football game or American slang contributes to a mutual feeling of good will. And perhaps, the important thing is that these men, when they return home, will carry a little bit of Bowdoin back with them. When they become leaders in their own countries they will understand the United States a lot better for having been here. It is not being overly-optimistic to say that this plan, now of nation-wide significance, will spread to more and more colleges and universities in the future. The dreams of the authors of the Bowdoin Plan are being realized.

Sesquicentennial Fund Progress

A PHONE at Fund headquarters, the one with the mezzo-soprano pitch, let go recently and the voice on the wire said simply:

“I want to transfer 120 shares of common stock to the account of Bowdoin College and then I want to turn around and sell that stock so that the College can have the cash. I have been informed by my tax consultant that this would be a profitable way for me to fulfill my pledge to the Sesquicentennial Fund. Can you give me the authority?”

It was not until he was asked, that the speaker revealed his identity - Joe* White - and he was calling from his office on the West Coast.

Assured that the authority would be forthcoming by wire, Joe then hung up.

A few minutes later, after the wire had been dispatched, the phone let go once more.

“This is Joe White again. I’ve just been talking to the tax people and they inform me I can afford to make that

Who Paid Your College Bills?

Are you — like many Bowdoin men — looking for a yard stick, with which you can measure the minimum amount that you can logically give to the Sesquicentennial Fund?

The following table indicates the degree by which the generosity of others helped defray our expenses each year we were students at Bowdoin. When we needed help, Bowdoin helped us. Now that Bowdoin needs help, let’s maich at least her help to us. Perhaps some of us can’t do as much as that, some can do much more; but in any event, here’s the yard stick. We hope that you will use it and measure your contribution to the Sesquicentennial Fund against it.

Just find your generation in the left hand column, move your finger to the next to last column, and then multiply that figure by the number of years you were at Bowdoin. The answer will be your yard-stick in dollars.

THE BOWDOIN COLLEGE SESQUICENTENNIAL FUND
Brunswick, Maine
140 shares instead of 120. So it looks like Bowdoin will get $3,500 from me instead of the $3,000 I had pledged. And you can put me down for another $3,000 next year."

After a few pleasantries, California and Maine were disconnected.

Not all Bowdoin Alumni call from California to conduct their business with the Fund Office, but many of them are beginning to raise their sights. Recently a professor pushed his contribution from $600 to $1,000 because he had studied his tax situation.

More and more Bowdoin men are discovering that it costs them very little this year to give to the College. The fact of the matter is the higher your income, the less it costs to give. For example, a married couple with a taxed income of $4,000 actually pays only 83 cents for every dollar given to Bowdoin. Uncle Sam contributes the other 17 cents. At the other end of the scale, the situation is completely reversed. With an income of $400,000, the donor pays 19 cents and Uncle Sam 81 cents on each dollar given to the College. The thing to remember is that you must make the contribution in 1948. Pledges don’t count on your tax return.

But don’t let these figures throw you off, for regardless of your income, there is an opportunity for you to give painlessly to Bowdoin from this year’s income. Most salaried workers are going to find that the Government owes them money at the end of this year. The new tax scale did not effect payroll checks until the first of May. But the new scale was retroactive to January 1, so that the Government withheld an excess in tax money during the first four months of 1948. That excess will be refunded to you approximately six weeks after you have filed your tax return for 1948. And then is another time to give to Bowdoin. Turn your check over to the College. You won’t miss the money because you’ve already spent it.

Contributing to Bowdoin through tax savings is the theme of the Sesquicentennial Fund’s current campaign among Alumni. The Fund seeks $200,000 from Alumni by January 1, 1949 and an additional $300,000 from Alumni by June 1, 1949. This $500,000 plus another $500,000 from other sources, would enable the Fund to reach its second million by Commencement.

The other sources currently being solicited are Bowdoin parents, friends of the College, and corporations. Here again Bowdoin men can be of service. Bowdoin parents paid what was asked of them when their sons were in College, but few of them realized how little they were paying for that education.

Bowdoin men affiliated with corporations, in Maine or out, can also be of service. The Fund has prepared special material to show corporations their responsibility in support of education and why and how they may give to Bowdoin. If you are in a position to place that material in the proper hands, write for it at once and it will be forwarded to you. Or if you need information on corporation tax savings, the Fund will supply you with that information, too.

There is still much to be done before Bowdoin’s new buildings and endowment become realities, but if every alumnus does the bit asked of him, the College will go a long way toward the goal that its trustees and overseers have set for it.

Face Lifting

Bowdoin men returning for Alumni Day on November 6 found that Alma Mater has had her face lifted.

As part of the overall plan for the extension of facilities at the College, the section of Harpswell Street running through the College property has been completely wiped out and replaced by a beautiful winding drive from the Kappa Sigma house through a fringe of the Bowdoin Pines to the President’s house at the corner of Federal and Bath Streets. At the same time the Presidents’ Gate, once located on Harpswell Street near Winthrop Hall, now rests neatly on Bath Street beside Adams Hall. Furthermore, the road through the campus which winds behind the Chapel and formerly ended at Harpswell, now continues past the eastern end of Adams Hall and emerges on Bath Street.

Thanks to the unanimous vote of Brunswick people in town meeting, the Delta, long a mere cousin of the main campus, is now definitely a part of the campus and thus available for the construction of proposed new buildings.

Not been decided, but it probably will be a classroom building or a chemistry building.

The moving of the Presidents’ Gate, the gift of the Class of 1907 and erected in 1932 in honor of President William DeWitt Hyde, was an event to be...
Bowdoin At Home

SMALL New England colleges very often are described as being located in sleepy New England towns. Regardless of what Brunswick may have desired this summer, Bowdoin didn’t give her much chance to rest. First she set up a sign on the Portland Road to advise visitors that they were welcome on the campus, then she prepared three social events for the benefit of summer residents, their guests and the general public.

The first of these was Bob Coffin ’15 Day, held on July 9 and described in the August issue of the ALUMNUS. For the record, some 700 persons visited the campus to honor Bowdoin’s poet laureate. They viewed his drawings and paintings in the Walker Art Building, they heard him read his ballads in Memorial Hall and they had a chance to meet him personally at a reception in the Moulton Union given by President and Mrs. Sills.

The second event, called Midsummer Open House benefited from the first, and approximately 1,000 persons jammed the First Parish Church to hear Franklin P. Adams (FPA of the Conning Tower and Information Please) give the Annie Talbot Cole Lecture. Afterwards nearly everyone moved into the President’s garden for a reception. The largest assembly on record of the Bowdoin family and their friends were greeted by the distinguished guest of honor and his charming wife until a late hour. Favored by the choicest of Maine summer weather, Bowdoin’s second “at home” was a day to remember.

The third and final event, held on the afternoon of September 18 following the September graduation, honored Commander Donald B. MacMillan ’08, fresh home from his 27th trip to the Arctic. Commander and Mrs. MacMillan, because of colds picked up on their return to civilization, were unable to report fully on their trip, but the 600 persons who heard them in Memorial Hall were well rewarded. Then came a reception for the MacMills, this time in Hubbard Hall, where an exhibit of Bowdoin’s Arctic trophies had been arranged.

The old college so dear to thousands of alumi is becoming known to hosts of new Bowdoin friends. Our second one hundred fifty years begins auspiciously.

Between times, Brunswick’s peace and quiet were broken by the sounds of falling trees, bulldozers, steam shovels and trucks. The new extension of Harpswell Street, skirting a fringe of the Bowdoin pines, was being constructed.

Strange things happened in Brunswick this summer, but all of them came under the heading of progress.

Looking

The only available sources of water for the dormitories were four wells located near Massachusetts, Winthrop, Appleton and Maine Halls. During the fall of 1878 water from only the Maine Hall well was drinkable and that was none too good.

The last of the panels on the north side of the Chapel was filled by the painting of the Baptism of Christ.

It would appear from the Orient that there was great interest in Prof. Packard’s lectures on Evidences of Christianity; in Paley’s work on that subject which the senior class were studying; and in the Praying Circle organized in 1815, and still carrying on, with thirty members meeting twice a week.

The only athletic events of the fall of 1878 were the Freshman-Sophomore rope pull and football rush; both won by the Sophomores. The Orient comments on the fact that baseball playing in the fall must be given up because the college year now begins so late that the weather is too cold for playing. Walking matches, were, however, “quite the rage now.”

The Orient said that hazing, which at this time was only “good-natured fun, a shadow” of what it had been, nevertheless harmed the College. “Exaggerated reports” were causing “fifteen or twenty men who really belong here to go to other colleges every year.”

The Orient characterized the condemnation of college politics in college exchanges as “all bosh. There is nothing in politics as such, either national or college, which is disgraceful.” The Orient advised those who distrust politics to go to “some good woman’s school, - identify themselves with a first class-sewing circle, and if possible join the Grangers.”

The Orient condemned the idea of the maintenance of colleges and higher institutions of learning by the state. The editors also hoped that the growing practice of admitting students from regular fitting schools without an entrance examination would never extend to Bowdoin. “We think it must tend to lower the standard of the College. We doubt if anyone is ever rejected who does not deserve it.” (The system which the Orient opposed was adopted about thirty years later).

The Orient strenuously argued for abolishing compulsory church attendance, criticized the rule which assessed twice as many demerits for absences from church as from a recitation, and stated that, with optional church attendance, “the larger part of the students would continue to attend.” Realistically, the Orient conceded that its views would not be adopted. (The Orient was right. It was over thirty years before compulsory church attendance was abandoned. Attendance then dwindled fast.)

On the last Wednesday in October two suspended students were driven to the railroad station “in Bowker’s four-in-hand” followed by a procession of forty groaning classmates. At the station the procession passed through two lines of upper classmen singing Phi Chi. Everyone shook hands with the “heroes of the occasion”, and the train left amid college cheers. “The whole affair was quite spirited,” — but because of it the length of the suspension was increased by the faculty.

No attention whatever was being paid to vocal music. The only glee club existed “in the Bugle.”

The three dormitories having been renovated, with plumbing and hot water installed, “The Temple” disappeared from the campus. Now having “a perfect system of dormitories… the College will need no more dormitory room for a long time.”

Although hazing was “becoming every year more a thing of the past,” yagger warfare was renewed when a crowd of town boys rushed six fraternity men who were carrying through “a mild sort of horseplay” with some initiates. The next night a pitched battle took place on Maine Street between “an army” of “fully two hundred yaggers”, and “a college party of twenty-five or thirty students.” One student was arrested and put in the lockup, but was immediately admitted to bail and the matter quieted down.

The opening of Lewiston and Bath to access by electric cars, and the competitive reduction of railroad fares to those two cities, were highly appreciated on the campus. “Going to Bath?” and “Going to Lewiston?” were “queries that are heard now on every side.”

The Orient urged that either a letterbox should be put up on the campus or a messenger should be employed to take mail to the post-office or depot box. “It would be a saving of many a weary midnight walk and noontide stroll.”

Although it was positively announced that “Triangle” was “in better condition this year than ever,” and would “trot at Topsham Fair”, Triangle was unable to start.

The football season began with the game with Harvard in which Bowdoin scored and held Harvard to five touchdowns (Harvard 28, Bowdoin 6). This was characterized by the Orient as “the greatest feat in Bowdoin football history,” only four other colleges having up to this time scored on the Crimson, — Princeton, Yale, Penn and Cornell. The Bowdoin students celebrated with bonfire, singing and cheering.

Bowdoin proceeded to defeat New Hampshire College 59 to 0; Maine 29 to 0; Colby 24 to 0 and 17 to 0; Tufts 18 to 11 and 6 to 5; and Exeter 12 to 5. The season had, however, two bitter disappointments. Dartmouth won 35 to 6 because all but one of the Bowdoin team were so sick they could hardly stand up because of ptomaine poisoning from bad beef at a by-station hotel.

The apex of the season was the game with Bates at Lewiston on October 29. A record crowd of over twenty-five hundred people followed the two teams up and down the field. A special train took the entire college and many Brunswick people to Lewiston, nobody being left behind, as one Bowdoin enthusiast stated publicly, except “the college janitor to ring the chapel bells when the tidings of victory reach Brunswick.” Bates did a Truman on Bowdoin. Score: Bates 6, Bowdoin 0. The special train returned to Brunswick "carrying two hundred fellows overcome with sorrow and defeat." The Orient said, "If Bowdoin's athletic supremacy over her sister Maine colleges is over, as many predict, the lesson in taking defeat manfully comes in very opportunely." (The prediction was accurate. Bowdoin athletic victories in the next few years were few and far between, and "good losing" became only too much of a habit.)

The season ended with a no score game with the Portland Athletic Club at the Deering grounds in Portland on Thanksgiving Day, November 24.

The revival of hazing, criticized as childish by many members and friends of the college, was indicated by a pajama parade on Maine Street on warning night, and a paddling and ducking session two nights later.

The students overwhelmingly voted to put Ivy Day ahead one week to May 23d, and to increase the blanket tax from fifteen to twenty dollars.

Married: Prof. Little and Miss Marguerite Tschale; Philip S. Wilder and Miss Elizabeth Clark.

College enrollment: 489 as against 506 a year earlier.

A committee of trustees, overseers, and faculty was investigating the advisability and procedure for limiting the college to 500.

In an impressive ceremony at the chapel a check for $500,000 was presented to President Sills by the executor of the will of Edward H. Blake '77 of Bangor. This was the largest single gift in the history of the College.

On The Campus

Through the generous gift of Mr. Charles J. Nichols, a graduate and overseer of Bates College, Bowdoin has come into possession of the rifle which Admiral Robert E. Peary '77 took with him to the North Pole in 1909. Mr. Nichols presented the rifle to President Sills at his office in Portland. Being without a car at the time, the President proceeded up Congress Street carrying the valued weapon in his arms. Accosted by a colleague from another Maine college, he was asked, "Is that how you have to maintain discipline at Bowdoin?" The rifle has been added to the already large collection of Arctic exploration items which the College owns.

SEPTEMBER GRADUATION

On September 18 eighty-six members of classes from 1942 to 1950 inclusive were awarded their baccalaureate degrees at special graduation exercises held in the First Parish Church. Three received the Bachelor of Science degree, the others, the Bachelor of Arts degree. Wolcott A. Hokanson jr. '50 graduated cum laude and the following candidates had cum laude appended to their degree certificates: Willis R. Barnstone '48, David W. Boulton '49, Corydon B. Dunham jr. '48, Irving E. Gordon '50, Richard C. LeBlanc '49, Archie B. Maxwell '46, John P. Monahan '49, Donald R. Paquette '46, Willard C. Richan '49, Tom M. Sawyer '46, Raymond H. Swift '48, Timothy M. Warren '45, Bryant D. Wetherell '45. The Henry W. Longfellow Graduate Scholarship was awarded to David W. Boulton '49.

Prevented by weather from being present at Commencement, Major General Maxwell D. Taylor, Superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy at West Point was the recipient of the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. In his address, General Taylor noted that Bowdoin and the Military Academy were contemporaries in American education and mentioned the late Col. John F. Presnell '36, Col. Boyd W. Bartlett '17 and Maj. Gen. Wallace C. Philon '05 as distinguished graduates of both institutions. Stating that "it takes a war to bring home the simple fact that the failings of the army of the nation are not in the fields of science or technology but rather in the field of human relations" he expressed the hope that "our cadets will always be able to speak the language of Bowdoin men or men educated in the Bowdoin tradition of a liberal general education." The President's citation of Gen. Taylor recalled "his adventurous trip, accompanied by Col. William T. Gardiner H'45, former Maine Governor, through the German lines before the armistice to negotiate with Marshall Badoglio in Rome, with complete disregard of the imminent danger involved and without thought of personal safety."

In his address to the graduates, President Sills scored the badgering of men of science by investigating committees with the unfortunate result that sorely needed research men are turning away from government service and stated that "as a people, we have not really learned what freedom of speech and freedom of education actually mean."

The luncheon in the Union for graduates and their families was followed by an afternoon reception for Comdr. Donald B. MacMillan '88 who had just returned from an 8,000-mile trip to the Arctic.

MUSIC

Much credit is due the Department of Music for developing the college band this fall. Equipped with simple but effective uniforms and well drilled in their maneuvers and their playing, this organization added a great deal to the home football games and to several academic functions on campus.

The season of college concerts began with the appearance of the Don Cossacks on October 9. Miss Nell Tangeman, New York contralto, gave a concert on October 18 and Miss Wilma Thompson, Boston soprano, on November 21. On December 4, the Glee Club together with the Clubs from Colby and Radcliffe and the Brunswick Choral Society will present the annual rendition of Handel's Messiah. The same group will present the Messiah in Portland City Hall the next afternoon. Other concerts are scheduled for February, April and May.

The Interfraternity Singing Competition will be held January 17, 18 and 19. At least four student recitals are planned and a Christmas service by the a cappella choir.

Over 100 students are rehearsing for what may be the Glee Club's most ambitious season. In addition to the Messiah performances, the club will give concerts in Farmington and North Conway, at Bradford and Wheelock Colleges and, with Pemroke College at Brunswick. Following concerts in Pittsburgh and Syracuse comes the all important appearance in Town Hall, New York on campus. The season closes with the annual Bowdoin night at Boston Symphony Pops on May 19. As in former years the Pops Night is being handled by the Bowdoin Club of Boston.

Back from their thrilling European concert tour last summer, the Meddiebempsters, Bowdoin's deservedly famous double quartet, is literally embarrassed to know how can they meet all the demands for their uniquely delightful concerts. In addition to taking part in the several Glee Club programs, these much-sought-after young singers already have agreed to appear at Colby Junior College and at four other campuses. Spots left vacant by graduation have been filled. The Meddiebempsters chief problem at present is how not to let studies interfere with their work.

DRAMATICS

The Masque and Gown Executive Committee, representing all members of the club, has announced the following program for the current college year: on November 19 and 22, a try-out of Beware the Brave by Edgar L. Vergason '39 in the Moulton Union with central or "arena"-style staging; on December 17 and 21, Ten Little Indians by Agatha Christie in Memorial Hall; on March 7, the fifteenth annual student-written one-act play contest in Memorial Hall; on May 16 and 20, Twelfth Night by Shakespeare in Memorial Hall; on June 17, The Seven Against Thebes by Aeschylus presented by the Classical Club with assistance from the Masque and Gown, in Memorial Hall (or on the terrace of the Walker Art Building).

An earlier announcement of the season in the Orient and the College Calendar promised plays by Sartre and Shaw for presentation in December, but Ten Little Indians has replaced them. It is the policy of the club and the recommendation of the Director of Dramatics that final choices of all plays except the Shakespearian one be in the hands of the Executive Committee, who are best able to represent the taste of the student body, who are thus made responsible for carrying their own program through and whose funds are being used, the College not contributing to any production expenses.

Beware the Brave is the seventh play by Vergason to be seen on the campus. When he was an undergraduate, four of his one-acts were presented in the annual contests, three of which received prizes; and one full-length play, a modern version of the story of Peter in the Bible, was shown. After his return from active service in Europe with the First Army, he wrote a farce-comedy which was presented in the spring of 1946 with the author sitting in on rehearsals. Beware the Brave is laid in Belgium during the War and is a serious drama. Containing swift variation of situation and much physical action, it is well adapted to the "arena" type of staging with the audience on all sides of the playing space. The Masque and Gown has not used this method since the early years of the War when it took several "arena" productions to Army or Navy posts. The method is now widely used by college and community theatre groups throughout the country.

The one-act play contest this year should receive impetus and show a higher standard of writing as a result of the new course in play writing under Professor Quinby. Nine men are enrolled in the course, four of whom have had plays presented in previous contests.

The use of Twelfth Night as an Ivy play will be an interesting experiment. The general enthusiasm for Henry IV Part One in Memorial Hall last June on an approximation of the Elizabethan stage has encouraged the belief that the houseparty gathering will enjoy a similar production. This will be the sixth showing of the popular comedy at Bowdoin.

When the Aeschylean play is shown next June, the Classical Club will have presented plays by every Greek or Latin dramatist whose works are extant with the single exception of Seneca. This unique contribution to classical and dramatic education is very largely due to the enthusiasm and scholarship of Professor Means who will direct The Seven Against Thebes in the translation by Herbert Weir Smythe, this spring, twenty-six years after his first Bowdoin production.

JAMES BOWDOIN DAY

At the annual James Bowdoin Day exercises, 98 undergraduates — 11 of them with straight A records — were formally recognized for excellence in scholarship. All received James Bowdoin awards and those who were being honored for the first time were given books with specially designed book plates. President Sills introduced John R. Hupper '50 who responded for the Bowdoin Scholars and Professor Howard M. Jones of Harvard who delivered the major address on The Dilemma of the Liberal College. Bishop Oliver L. Loring D.D. H'45 gave the invocation. Following the exercises the James Bowdoin Scholars and invited guests were served luncheon at the Union, where Professor Newton P. Stallknecht spoke.

CLASS OF 1952

Of the 170 members of 1952 admitted in September, Maine contributed 66; Massachusetts 52; New York 20; Connecticut and New Jersey each 6; Rhode Island 4; Pennsylvania 3; California, Michigan, New Hampshire and District of Columbia each 2; Arkansas, Maryland, Minnesota and Ohio each 1. With the six admitted in June, the class now has 176 members and is one of the smaller classes of recent years. As shown in the accompanying tabulation, 38 freshmen are sons of Bowdoin men.

Nineteen Alumni Fund Scholarships were awarded to the following freshmen: Raymond G. Biggar of Saco; William M. Blackwell of Presque Isle; Clifford A. Clark of Belmont, Massachusetts; Benjamin P. Coo of Winchester, Massachusetts; John W. Conti of Bar Harbor; James H. Dennett of Springvale; Charles M. Ericson of Hartford, Connecticut; William H. Hazen of Danvers, Massachusetts; John W. Hone jr. of Metuchen, N. J.; Merle R. Jordan of South Portland; Robert F. McGrath of Winchester, Massachusetts; Donald R. Murphy of Providence, R. I.; Hugh H. Pillsbury of Cape Cottage; William E. Seffens of Little Rock, Arkansas; Roger W. Sullivan of West Roxbury, Massachusetts; Kenneth N. Wells of Arlington, Massachusetts; Warren W. Wheeler of Concord, Massachusetts; William H. Whiting jr. of Merrimac, Massachusetts and Gilbert M. Wishart of Portland.

Non-Bowdoin fathers of freshmen are listed as alumni of no less than 45 colleges and universities. Nine are of M.I.T., five of Harvard, four of the University of Maine. Three of the new Bowdoin Fathers are alumni of Princeton and Northeastern; University of Massachusetts, Boston University, Rutgers, Dartmouth, Haverford, Cornell and Tufts each claim two; the others are scattered among such institutions as Colby, Duke, Yale, Lehigh, McGill, Notre Dame, Iowa, Georgia, Bates, Wisconsin, Brown, Holy Cross, Kansas, the University of Seoul in Korea, Bern and Karlsruhe. Many freshmen mothers are college women. They represent 35 different institutions — among them Smith, Wellesley, Wheaton, Radcliffe, Mt. Holyoke, Mills, Stanford, Beloit, Bates, Colby, Maine, Tufts, Boston University, Goucher, Simmons, Ohio State, Minnesota, Iowa, Western Reserve, Kansas and Columbia. Our incoming class would appear to have been reared very largely in collegiate atmospheres.

SAILING CLUB

The Bowdoin Sailing Club had its most successful season this fall. The New England Associate Championship Trophy, won from Wesleyan, Colby, New Hampshire and Middlebury at Tufts early in the semester, is now at Bowdoin. The winning of this trophy, together with the defeat of Williams in a later regatta, places Bowdoin at the head of the list of colleges which do not have practice facilities available.

The season ended with the Schell Trophy Regatta at M.I.T., where, as might have been expected, the team was defeated by the crack crews of the regular members. M.I.T., Yale, Harvard, Brown, B.U., Coast Guard, B.C. and Navy placed above Bowdoin in that order. Williams, the only other team represented without regular practice in boats, and Haverford were beaten.

Trips were made to Middlebury, Tufts, M.I.T. and Yale, and the freshman team also raced at Dartmouth. With the exception of Coast Guard and Brown, then, Bowdoin has shown its flag on all the New England waters this year, and always made a respectable showing.

The club's officers are Commodore Samuel A. Francis '50, Vice-Commodore Wendell P. Bradley '50, and Secretary Philip C. Bolger '49, all of whom were active in the fall's racing. Robert W. Scull '49, Lester B. Shackford jr. '49, Donald C. Seamans '51, and Clement Brown '49, were other members of the racing crews, while William N. Ratcliff and Warfield Martin, both of '52, were the freshman skippers. Professor Burton W. Taylor is the faculty advisor.

The club hopes and plans to have a small fleet of boats on the New Meadows River next spring, not only for practice and for entertaining other colleges at home races, but for intramural racing and general recreation.

America's oldest boarding school, Governor Dummer Academy, was founded in 1763 in South Byfield, Massachusetts, thirty miles north of Boston.

A session of the new Public Speaking course is shown in the picture above. Inaugurated in September, 1947, the course is required of all seniors.

Governor Dummer is now a school of 210 boys and twenty-five masters. Students come from all parts of the United States to be prepared for college.

The size of the school and the number of instructors make possible small classes, individual attention, and a friendly, homelike atmosphere. Above all, the school emphasizes hard work and high standards in the classroom, on the athletic field, and in daily living.

ALUMNI DAY

Many alumni had come to attend fraternity initiations the night before and despite the heavy fog, one of the largest homecoming crowds of record gathered for Alumni Day, November 6.

At 9:30 a.m. some thirty members of the Alumni Council convened for the regular fall meeting. Reports of the standing committees and that of the special committee to study the possibilities of an Alumni House were heard and plans set in motion for the mid-winter, on-campus meeting in February.

Many alumni attended Chapel exercises, at which Professor Herbert R. Brown delivered a particularly apt and timely talk on Bowdoin's alumni and their contribution to the strength of the College. About 630 alumni and their families were well and efficiently served lobster stew at the Alumni Luncheon in the Gym where Ashmead White '12 presided over the brief speaking program. Alumni Fund Chairman Kendrick Burns '14 presented the Alumni Fund cup to Agent Paul K. Niven of the Class of 1916 for their winning performance last year. Head Coach Adam Walsh thanked the alumni for their support and promised that the team intended to win the afternoon's game. General Wallace C. Philoan '05 gave a progress report on the Sesquicentennial Fund stating that $1,250,000 had been raised thus far. Mr. White read the regrets of President Hauck of Maine and introduced President Sills who spoke briefly of doings at the College and of his hopes that the Sesquicentennial Fund would provide better working tools and expressed his warm appreciation of the support given by the alumni.

An Alumni Day feature was provided by the competition between the several fraternities with their original portrayals of what Bowdoin would do to Maine at the game. None, of course, prophesied correctly but all revealed talents in construction. First prize was awarded to Delta Upsilon; second prize to Alpha Tau Omega and third prize to Beta Theta Pi.

More than 9500 attended the game which was won by Maine 7-6. The President and Mrs. Sills were at home after the game, several fraternity houses held teas and Bowdoin-on-the-Air held open house in their new quarters. Several hundred students, alumni and their ladies attended the Student Council Dance which concluded a full and exciting day.

ENROLLMENT

It was the hope of the Governing Boards that student enrollment this fall might be kept to a maximum of 950. Due largely to the return of upperclassmen in larger numbers than had been expected, it was not possible to reach that figure. The fall semester started with 1,012 undergraduates on campus, including 170 new freshmen, 24 transfer students and 11 foreign students admitted under the now well-known Bowdoin Plan. Massachusetts sent 10 of the transfers, Maine 9 and one each came from Connecticut, Missouri, New Hampshire, New Jersey and New York. Of the foreign students, two came from France and one each from Austria, China, Denmark, England, Germany, Hungary, Korea, Netherlands and Norway.

Admission is still a problem of administration. More and more the secondary school students evidence a desire for college; the alumni, who want a student body which shall represent a wider area, are proposing an increasing number of boys for admission. At the same time the Governing Boards are convinced that Bowdoin can best serve as a small college of liberal arts and are aiming at a student body of no more than 750 in the fall of 1950. The Admissions Office has a definite limit to the number of new students who can be admitted. The Director very much wants the continued help of alumni in finding the best boys from all areas but it will be necessary for all of us to understand the situation at Brunswick and to expect that, in our effort to find those outstanding boys, we shall doubtless experience some disappointments.

President Sills has stated publicly that there never has been a better undergraduate body than the present one; it is part of our job as Bowdoin alumni to maintain that high standard and, in our efforts to interest promising candidates for admission, to let them know that they face tough competition.

FATHERS DAY

More than 170 fathers of Bowdoin sons were on campus Saturday, October 16 for the annual Fathers Day. The forenoon was taken up by visits to classes and attending Chapel exercises presented over by President Sills. At the annual meeting of the Bowdoin Fathers Association, President Herbert S. Holmes presided and introduced Professor Stanley P. Chase '05 who welcomed the fathers and told them what the College was trying to do with their sons. Coach Adam Walsh gave an outline of the athletic program at college and suggested that the Association might establish a scholarship for a boy of their own selection. General Philoan reported for the Sesquicentennial Fund.

The members expressed their appreciation of the help given them by Miss Suzanne Young and voted a gift of $2500 to the College as a memorial to her, with the request that the gift be used to equip a room, preferably in the proposed Alumni House, when that center should materialize. The arrangements for the gift and its use were left to the Executive Committee of the Association. New officers elected were: Eugene Martens of Rosedale, N. Y. President: Charles W. Lovejoy of Winchester, Mass. Vice President: Herbert Mehlor of Brunswick, Secretary and Treasurer.

THE BOWDOIN FILM

For a long time and from many quarters have come expressions that Bowdoin should have a carefully prepared college motion picture. Cooperating with the Alumni Council, the Directors of the Alumni Fund have arranged with the Visiting Committee of the Governing Boards that money to begin making the film shall be available from the proceeds of the 1948-49 Alumni Fund.

The Sesquicentennial Fund organization is proceeding with the initial steps. Alfred H. Fenton '31, who is directing publicity for that Fund, is negotiating with an experienced maker of documentary films. It is likely that portions of films now at the College will be incorporated in the completed record but much of the reel will be newly taken in an effort to portray the activities and scenes of a college year.

In assembling the film, those in charge aim to complete one or more reels which may be used not only by alumni groups but also by the Admissions Staff in the school visitation program. It is hoped that the film may be finished by next June.

ATHLETICS

The football season and the Sailing Club accomplishments are covered elsewhere in this issue. The only other organized sport activity of the fall, except the games of the touch football leagues, was cross country. Our varsity team was weak but the freshman team showed evidence of a good varsity team next year. Now that the tension of football is over, the coaching staff plunges at once into the extremely busy winter program. There will be no less than fifteen teams competing in basketball, swimming, track, hockey, rifle, winter sports and fencing. In addition the usual intramural program will tax, not only the personnel of the Athletic Department but also the facilities and equipment of the College. No printed schedules of contests are yet available but Bowdoin men may be fairly certain of athletic activity whenever they visit the campus.
The September issue of the Bowdoin College Bulletin is entitled Honoris Causa. It contains the ascriptions used by President Sills in awarding honorary degrees from 1918 to 1948. It also contains the ascription read by Charles Taylor Hawes LL. D. in 1934 when Bowdoin conferred on President Sills the degree of Doctor of Laws. The book is printed by the Anthoensen Press of Portland.

On November 17 Mrs. Clara D. Hayes completed thirty years as secretary to President Sills. For most of those years she has also been Secretary of the College. Many appropriate recognitions of the long service were made.

BOWDOIN’S 147th YEAR

As has been the practice in recent years, the opening Chapel exercises were held in the First Parish Church. Addressing the entire student body, President Sills gave as evidence of the strength of Bowdoin’s Faculty the fact that members of the staff are being loaned to Brown, Columbia and Stanford Universities and that Professor Newton P. Stallknecht had been called to head the Department of Philosophy at the University of Indiana. He also mentioned the monumental historical work, Men, Cities and Transportation, which Professor Kirkland has just published and the several scholarly articles written by other faculty members. The President also expressed gratification that Professor Estyn Evans, from Queens University in Belfast, Ireland, here on the Tallman Foundation, had said that Bowdoin was well and favorably known abroad for its high scholarly standards.

Citing the summer session as one of the best we have held, President Sills paid tribute to the activities of the students. The Meddiebempsters, in their successful concert tour of occupation centers of Europe, proved themselves effective ambassadors of good will and did much to show the youth of Germany and Austria what America stands for. "The Bowdoin Plan of undergraduate responsibility for foreign students has won recognition and imitation in many American Colleges and Universities. Both of these enterprises were conceived and carried out by the students themselves and are proof of the solidarity of liberal education that seeks to avoid too much regimentation and to encourage sensible initiative." He also commended the active and intelligent activity of the Political Forum.

The loyalty and efficiency of those who work in the Department of Buildings and Grounds received words of warm praise and appreciation in the President's review of the summer work on campus. The completion of the new Harpswell Street roadway, which the College hopes may be known as Delta Drive, the moving of the Presidents' Gateway to its new location on Bath Street and the storing and drying of lumber sawed from the Bowdoin Pines for use in future buildings were mentioned as necessary preludes to the development program of the College. Hope exists that ground may be broken for the first of the new college buildings at Commencement next June. As an added reason for a feeling of gratitude, the President said that, due in small measure to the generosity of the Alumni in their annual Fund gift, the College once again had been able to close its books without a deficit. He gave public recognition and thanks to "the many older brothers who have been giving tirelessly of their time and effort to the Sesquicentennial Fund which now amounts to more than $1,200,000."

Touching upon the confusion and near chaos in the international situation, President Sills called for hope and optimism that eventually sane judgement would prevail and that our cherished institutions and the greater freedom of the individual man would be saved and strengthened. He urged all young men not to surrender hope or to think that they as individuals could do nothing to help. "There is no better preparation for what is to come than by doing the work of the present as well as it can be done. That means for many of us Americans the recovery of moral and spiritual standards that have been impaired, if not lost, by the quickened pace of a secularized and materialistic civilization. The acceptance of the challenge to work for better international understanding by millions of young Americans just like you will inevitably affect the whole life of our country and, in time, raise those higher up. The horizon is pretty dark but the sun is still shining."

RHODES SCHOLARSHIP

Professor Thomas Means has announced that the two Bowdoin nominees to compete for Rhodes Scholarship awards are James B. Draper '50 and Richard A. Wiley '49. Charles W. Carruthers '50 was named alternate. Draper, the son of James B. Draper '10 of Boston, is varsity center on the football team and has won letters in track and hockey. He has maintained a consistently high scholastic record at Bowdoin and received the Alpha Rho Upsilon Trophy this fall for the outstanding athlete among the undergraduates. Wiley, who received the ARU Cup last year, graduated in June with virtually a straight A record. He was a letterman in track and Editor in Chief of the Orient. He is now studying law at Harvard. Carruthers is an outstanding student, a member of Phi Beta Kappa and of the Mathematics Club.

Bowdoin's nominees must survive the selection from the nominees of all colleges in Maine and, if successful, must then compete with other similar nominees from the other New England States before final choices are made.

Alumni Clubs

BANGOR

Seventy-five members and guests attended the fall meeting of the Bowdoin Club of Penobscot County at the Tarantine Club in Bangor on Tuesday evening, November 16. President Don Emmons introduced George Vose '51 who recounted some of the highlights of the Meddiebempsters' European trip last summer and Professor Herbert R. Brown who reported on the changes and activities at the College in his customary delightful manner. William P. Neally '55 and Walter V. Wentworth '56 were the oldest alumni present. The youngest in attendance were some Bangor High School undergraduates who want to come to Bowdoin. Mr. and Mrs. Karl Philbrick and others were hosts at pre-dinner parties. The Bowdoin ladies held their own dinner at the Bangor House.

BOSTON

The Bowdoin Club of Boston is arranging a "New Look" meeting at the University Club on November 29. Those in charge are aiming at a strictly social evening at a minimum of expense.

BOWDOIN TEACHERS

Executive Committee Chairman Harrison C. Lyseth '21 greeted 35 members when the Bowdoin Teachers Club held its annual meeting at the Cumberland Club in Portland on Thursday, October 28, 1948. Several members of the college staff responded briefly and President Sills spoke at some length on affairs at the College. He expressed his gratitude that so many were now entering the teaching profession. He hoped many more would become teachers in secondary schools and particularly in public schools and that they would combat the tendency to eliminate the teaching of subjects required for admission to a good college of liberal arts. The members expressed a desire that the noontime luncheon meetings be continued. W. Howard Niblock '35, Headmaster at Maine Central Institute, was elected Chairman of the Executive Committee for the ensuing year. Representatives of the Placement Bureau, the Department of Education and of the Admissions Office were asked to cooperate with the new chairman in establishing at the Bangor Teachers Convention a B o w d o i n Room, staffed and supplied with Bowdoin literature — a room where Bowdoin teachers could meet and get information about admissions, scholarships, etc.

NEW JERSEY

Forty-one members of the New Jersey Bowdoin Club were present at the fall dinner meeting which was held at the Montclair Athletic Club on Monday, November 1. Hon. Sumner T. Pike '13 gave an extremely interesting talk on atomic energy and his work in that field as a member of the Atomic Energy Commission. New club officers elected were: President, Frank A. St. Clair '21; Vice-President, Donald A. Brown '27; Secretary-Treasurer John E. Dale, Jr. '42; Assistant Secretary, Robert L. Hooke '33; Council Member, Frank H. Ormerod '21. The secretary's address is 184 North Munn Avenue, East Orange, New Jersey.

PHILADELPHIA

On Friday evening, October 29, about 25 Bates and Bowdoin alumni and their wives held a social football rally at the Warburton Hotel in Philadelphia. Holding divergent notions as to the outcome of the game to be played on the next day, the group were united in their loyalty to Maine and Maine colleges. A pleasant evening was spent and all present agreed that more similar gatherings should be held.

PORTLAND

President William B. Nulty '10 greeted 125 members at the fall football dinner meeting of the Portland Bowdoin Club at the Falmouth Hotel on Thursday, November 4. Secretary Stanley Low '35 called members attention to the presentation of the Mes-siah which the Club was sponsoring for the benefit of the Sesquicentennial Fund and canvassed those present for pledges to sell tickets. Warning them that they were to say nothing but were only to rise and "take a bow", President Nulty introduced members of the college staff present. Athletic Director Malcolm E. Morrell '24 used but half of his allotted two minutes to say how pleasant it was to appear with the Portland group when the football team was having its share of victories and to assure the alumni that the team would not be handicapped by over confidence in the game with Maine. Assistant Coach George (Dinny) Shay consumed even less time to disclaim his recent fame as a prognosticator. Following a tumultuous welcome, Head Coach Adam Walsh reviewed the season briefly and assured his hearers that the final and critical game was with a veteran team that "would be tough to beat". Several times without good reason and too often for the good of the players, the Bowdoin team has been made the favorite by the press and other commentators. The trimester system will take its usual heavy toll before next fall and there are far too few likely prospects in the small freshman squad. The alumni must help to find and interest good schoolboy prospects if Bowdoin is to develop capable athletic teams. Coach Walsh warned that "unless the boys are taking courses up to Bowdoin standards it is a waste of time to get them headed our way." He concluded by showing pictures of the Williams and Colby games.

WILMINGTON

On Monday, October 25, fourteen members of the Philadelphia Bowdoin Club who reside in and near Wilmington met for dinner at the Hob Restaurant. Reels of last year's football games were shown and the evening spent in discussion of doings and developments at Bowdoin. The advisability of forming a separate Bowdoin Club was considered but all agreed that no action should be taken until the matter could be reviewed with officers of the Philadelphia Club. Some thought that the group could best serve the College as part of the larger club even though they should continue their local meetings. Another gathering is planned for December 13.

The thousand-odd pages of these two green volumes contain one of the most important recent additions to the history of New England and of American economic life. Representing ten years of fruitful labor on the part of Bowdoin's Munsey Professor of History, they are full of what were virgin subjects until Kirkland went after them. In the wrong hands, this subject could be in dead dull. The name of Kirkland on the cover, however, is ample assurance that, however dry the basic source material might be, it would be presented with the same verve which has made his lectures such a constant pleasure.

In fact, before going into the matter of the book’s contents, one might mention in passing that this book demonstrates that a college, in selecting its faculty, does not have to choose between a stimulating teacher on the one hand, or a sound, productive scholar on the other. It can have both in the same man, and Bowdoin has been fortunate along that line. The production of work ends with the gracious words: “Let me conclude with an expression of gratitude to the President and Boards of Bowdoin College, a small college wise enough to realize that scholarship is essential to teaching and generous enough to make it attractive. To them, their view of the chapters, as well as to canals and turnpikes, but the development of New England’s railroad net occupies most of the study. One can trace the start of the rail system which was already spreading out from Boston before 1830 — the basic and ever-profitable “dwoger” lines to Lowell, Worcester and Providence and then, along with them, the original Boston & Maine and Eastern to Portland, the Fitchburg and the Old Colony. Most of them developed a rich carrying trade for the communities clustered thickly along their routes, paying regularly the maximum ten per cent dividends permitted by their charters. But, as the years went on, millions were sunk fruitlessly in will-of-the-wisp efforts to tap the West. A few, like the future Boston & Albany and the Grand Trunk which gave Portland seventy years of lively business as the western port of Montreal, did well, but one remains amazed that canny Yankees could be parted from millions in ventures which never had a chance. The story closes in 1900, when, after constant consolidations of lesser lines, an agreement gave most of northern New England to the enlarged Boston & Maine and the southern part to the New Haven, with the Boston & Albany serving as a neutral “Mason and Dixon line” between them.

There is no room to go further in indicating the scope of the legislative press, the meshmerizing of municipalities, the reforms in finance, equipment and operation, the development of rate-structures, the interplay of rail lines and steamers in the Sound region and all that. It is all well worth reading, for many of the findings are still pertinent today. The Harvard University Press has done its usual competent job in producing the two attractive volumes which contain numerous well-selected illustrations. One hears expressed frequently the hope that the committee on Pulitzer awards will appreciate the invaluable contributions which this delightful Bowdoin scholar has made to the understanding of our early economic development.

Robert G. Albon

In this manual Dr. Munn has presented a series of experiments designed to acquaint the student of psychology with the problems, methods, and techniques of current psychological research.

The experiments may be done by the students themselves with a minimum of supervision and with easily obtained apparatus. Work sheets are provided, and references are cited for each experiment. A suggested procedure is offered that may be modified by the instructor if so desired.

An instructor’s handbook accompanies the manual and is designed to save the instructor much time in assembling apparatus and materials. In the handbook, apparatus for each experiment is listed, and information is given as to where such apparatus may be obtained, or how, where possible, to improvise from materials at hand. Also included in the instructor’s manual are experimental materials which may be mimeographed for distribution to the students.

Both the manual and the textbook are distinguished by the clearness of presentation and stimulating style which have made Dr. Munn’s Psychology, in my opinion, the most popular psychology text ever written.

Far too often students fail to appreciate psychology as a science on the same level as the natural sciences.

the other physical and biological sciences. The Laboratory Manual in General Experimental Psychology is so written as to show clearly the importance and scientific significance of psychology today. No student, after completing the Manual, can fail to gain a good understanding of the problems, methods, and techniques of present-day experimental psychology.

DAVID C. MUNRO, M.D., You Can Live Longer Than You Think: Bartholomew House, Inc., 1918, pp. 211.

To read this book for review while one is staying at a hotel famous for its cuisine is a challenging experience. But it can be read with interest and profitably applied for the benefit of the reader, there or anywhere.

Dr. Munro, captain of a Bowdoin football team nearly fifty years ago, made a study of human diet during his long service as Medical Director of the Lake Placid Club, and this is the second book in which he cogently sets forth his theory. He is entertaining in the way he puts it, concrete in his statements, and firm in his recommendations. His sincerity shows in everything he writes.

Dr. Munro believes in proteins and lays to carbohydrates most human deficiencies in health and physique. This theory he sustains by historical excerpts and clinical observations. He believes that if the eaters of meat, fish, butter, and eggs do not inherit the earth, at least they will be happier while they live and will outlive not only confirmed vegetarians subsisting entirely on potatoes, bread, and sugar, but also those of us who customarily eat meat, cooked vegetables, and pastries at the same meal.

The book is persuasive, and the suggested menus are definite. Whether its readability detracts from its scientific merit this reviewer is not qualified to say. It seems to him that it makes good sense. Like many books, those who agree with it while reading it may not do what it says. But that's the fault of human nature, not of the book.

THE AUTHORS

EDWARD CHASE KIRKLAND, Frank Munsey Professor of History at Bowdoin, is the author of The Peacemakers of 1864 (1927) and A History of American Economic Life (1932).

NORMAN L. MUNN, PH.D., is Professor of Psychology at Bowdoin and author of Psychology, an introductory text now being used at more than four hundred and fifty colleges and universities in this country and abroad.

DANIEL C. MUNRO, M.D., ’35, as an undergraduate, was a distinguished athlete and was captain of the football team. For many years consulting physician at the Lake Placid Club, Dr. Munro is now living at Utica, New York in semi-retirement.

REVIEWERS

ROBERT G. ALBION ’18, Professor of History at Princeton University and Historian of Naval Administration for the United States Navy, is spending this year at Harvard as Visiting Lecturer in Oceanic History. Professor Albion is the author of Foresta and Sea Power; Problems of the Royal Navy, 1652-1882; The Growth of the American Economy; The Rise of the New York Port, 1815-1860; Sea Lanes in Wartime; Square Riggers on Schedule.

ROBERT J. DOWLING ’39, teaching fellow at Bowdoin in Psychology during the summer session of 1918, is now engaged in graduate work at the University of Miami.

CLEMENT F. ROBINSON ’09, President of the Board of Overseers at Bowdoin and former Attorney-General of Maine, needs no further introduction to readers of the ALUMNUS who welcome again one of his interesting reviews.

NOTES

The first novel of Arthur M. P. Stratton ’35, Lord Love Us (Scribners), has reached the Editor too late for a review in this issue of the ALUMNUS.

Magnetic-Flea Device for Microtization by C. Lloyd Claff ’18 has been reprinted from Science, July 16, 1918, Vol. 108.

Green Seas and White Ice by Mrs. Donald B. MacMillan has been recently published by Dodd, Mead Co.

1890 Walter Irving Weeks died at his home in Rochester, N. H., November 1. Born in Wakefield, N. H., on September 14, 1867, he went to Wakefield Academy and Westbrook Seminary before coming to Bowdoin. After graduating he taught school for a few years. For nearly forty years he was engaged in the wholesale produce business in Boston. He retired and moved to Rochester in 1919. He was the former Susie Caroline Bailey, whom he married October 19, 1893. He was a member of the Zeta Psi and the Phi Beta Kappa Fraternities.

1891 Henry Whiting Jarvis died October 27 at Bangor. Born August 15, 1869, in Auburn, he graduated from Edward Little High School. After graduating from Bowdoin where he was a member of the Alpha Delta Phi Fraternity, he went to the University of Michigan Law School where he received an L.L.B. in 1893. He practiced law in Denver, Colorado for three years and for two years he was a prominent member of the Massachusetts bar in Boston. He was admitted to practice at Bangor last April but he had not been active in his profession since coming to Maine in 1947. He was a member of the Board of Aldermen at Newton, Mass., and was a member of the Massachusetts Legislature for two terms. His wife, Delta, a daughter and three grandchildren survive him.

1891 The college has been notified that William True Kempston died in California several years ago. No further details are known. He was born February 28, 1867 in Strong and was in business in Boston, Mass., when last heard from in 1900.

The English Journal, Vol. XXXVI, No. 6, has reprinted Broad-and Narrow-Context Techniques of Literary Criticism by Robert S. Brumbaugh Ph.D., Assistant Professor of Philosophy at Bowdoin. The purpose of the paper, Dr. Brumbaugh states, is "to explain and distinguish the approaches of these two extremes of criticism, 'the narrow-context' and 'the broad-context' approaches, respectively, and to indicate their relative merits and usefulness as techniques in the teaching of literature.

Notes and Discussions: Note on the Numbers in Plato's Critias by the same author has been reprinted from Classical Philology, Vol. XLIII, No. 1.

The Newcomen Society has printed in attractive pamphlet form, illustrated by Anthony Thieme, an address by Charles Penrose, LL.D., D. Eng., entitled Brackett of Maine — A Fragment of the 1820's. Cyrus Fogg Brackett, member of the class of 1839 at Bowdoin, in industry, business and engineering, technical adviser to Thomas A. Edison, was the "chief developer of Princeton's department of physics and true founder of Princeton's School of Electrical Engineering."

Necrology

1894 The Rev. James Albert Nichols died at his home at Casco on October 9. Born September 19, 1867 in Casco, he prepared for college at Bridgeon Academy. After attending Bowdoin he went to the University of Chicago where he took a course in English. In 1893 he became Principal of the High School at Old Orchard and in 1899 was Principal of the Boston Bible School. He served pastorates at Dayton, Ohio; Orchard, Bridgton, Casco; Westbrook, South Windham and Sugar Hills, N. H. Surviving are a son, Rev. J. Albert Nichols, Jr. of Brookline, Mass.; a daughter, Mrs. Thomas Lunt of East Rochester, N. H.; a brother and a sister.

1895 Fred Osian Small died August 18 at Albany, Oregon. Born January 13, 1867 in Madrid, he was graduated from Farmington Normal School before coming to Bowdoin. After graduation he attended Harvard Law School. Spending some years in teaching, he was Principal of Gould and Washington Academies in Maine and later taught in the High Schools of Somerville and Westbrook, in Massachusetts. He practiced law at Joplin, Mo. and Springfield, Mo. but had resided in Oregon for the past nineteen years. He served on the Oregon Bureau of Labor for three years and handled all litigation in Southern Oregon. His wife, Margaret F. Knoules, one daughter and two brothers survive him. His fraternity was Alpha Delta Phi.

1898 Ellis Spear Jr. died at his home in Newton Centre, Mass. on November 12. The son of Gen. Ellis Spear of the Class of 1858, he was born in Washington, D. C., June 23, 1877. At college he was a member of his class football team, and was assistant manager of the varsity team. His the fraternity was Theta Delta Chi. Receiving his L.L.B. from George Washington University in 1901 he began practice in Boston in 1902, specializing in patent work as his father had before him. Secretary and later president of the Alumni Association of Boston, Mr. Spear was a member of the Alumni Council, a Director of the Alumni Fund and for twenty years, until his resignation in 1944, an Overseer of the College. His interest in Bowdoin was always keen and active. He was an able and efficient supporter of Donald MacMillan's Arctic program and was in no small measure responsible for the building of the ship Bowdoin. His widow, Margaret Louise Abbott, whom he married in 1904 and two sons Abbott and Ellis 3rd, both of the Class of 1909, survive.

1901 The Alumni Office has received word of the death of Percy Snow Percival on January 28, 1940. He was born July 26, 1879 and prepared for college at Waterville High School. After a year at Bowdoin, he transferred to Colby. Following a term of years in banking, during which he was a member of the Peoples National Bank of Waterville, he entered the investment security business and, since 1917, had been located in Boston.

1906 Cyrus Clyde Shaw died August 31 at his home at East Orange, New Jersey. He was born November 15, 1883 in North Gorham and attended schools at Gorham before coming to Bowdoin, where he was a member of the Psi Upsilon fraternity. On November 2, 1919, he married Margaret Curry at Baltimore, Maryland. Since leaving college, he has been associated with the New York Telephone Company as special studies supervisor. Surviving are his wife, a son, Richard C. Shaw of West Orange, New Jersey and a brother, Scott P. Shaw.

1907 The Reverend Leroy Wilson Coons D.D. died at his Brookline, Mass. residence on August 25. He was born in Dayton, Ohio, August 23, 1872, the son of Philip and Almira Fouts Coons. Preparing for college at Elderorala Ohio High School, he received his Bachelor of Divinity degree from St. Lawrence University and spent several years in the ministry before entering Bowdoin. Ordained in 1896, his 50 years as minister and church official were spent entirely in New England. He held parishes in Hallowell, Pittsfield, Brunschwick and Augusta before going to the First Universalist Church in Haverhill, Mass. in 1914. From 1922 until his retirement in 1942, he was Superintendent of the Universalist Churches of Massachusetts. Surviving, besides his widow, are a son, Quentin, two grandsons and three sisters. A member of Phi Beta Kappa and Alpha Delta Phi fraternities and of the Masons, he received his Doctor of Divinity from St. Lawrence University.

1907 Word has just come to the College that Willis Nathan Haines died in the summer of 1939. Born in Dexter, July 24, 1885, he attended Bowdoin but one year, transferring to the University of Maine where he was graduated in 1909.

1910 Gardner Wilson Cole, Principal of the Casco High School and proprietor of the Casco Inn, died suddenly November 12 after being stricken ill in school. Born May 30, 1881, at Raymond, he was graduated for college at Pennell Institute and Hebron Academy. He taught at Billerica, Mass. and in 1910 was Principal of Foxcroft Academy. From 1917 to 1920 he was Superintendent of Casco, Orisfield and Raymond schools. He had been Principal of Casco High for 18 years. He was a member of the Zeta Psi Fraternity, a Mason and a deacon of the Baptist Church. Surviving are his widow, the former Laura Lovell Day, a son, daughter and two brothers.

1910 Frank Dunham Townsend died suddenly at his home in Mount Royal, Montreal P. Q., Canada, August 16. He was born in Brunswick, November 13, 1886. After service with the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company at Boston, Mass., he went to Montreal in 1910 to join the general traffic department of the Bell Telephone Company. Since 1924 he has resided at Mount Royal, where he was active in municipal affairs. Surviving are his widow, the former Dorothy Johnson; two daughters, Mary and Florence; and his mother, Mrs. Florence Townsend of Brunswick.

1916 The College has received word of the death of James Franklin Parsons who died October 23, 1921. Born January 20, 1889 in Hillsdale, Mich., he graduated from Hebron Academy. He was a member of the Beta Theta Pi Fraternity.

1937 Russell Emerson Austin Jr., died August 18 at Bath after a short illness. Born in Dorchester, Mass., August 23, 1912, he prepared for college at the Boston Latin School. He was married to Mary E. Spinney on March 21, 1936. For more than ten years he has been employed as an electrical draftsman at the Bath Iron Works. He was a member of Solar Lodge of Masons. Surviving besides his wife are two daughters, a son, two sisters and an aunt.

MEDICAL SCHOOL

1892 Herbert Winslow Robinson, a physician for more than fifty years, died November 7. He was born in South Windham, July 27, 1857 and attended Westbrook Seminary, Friends School in Providence, R. I., Haverford College, Pennsylvania, and Brown University. For a few years after leaving Bowdoin he practiced in Epping, N. H. and Kennebunk. He married Mary G. Moody March 23, 1887. About 32 years ago he went to Sterling, Mass. to practice and since his retirement in 1932 he has been living with his son in Weston, Mass.

1898 Jerome Perley Fickett, M.D., who had been ill for two years, died October 27 at his home at Portland. He attended Portland and Boston schools before coming to Medical School. Settling in Naples shortly after leaving medical school, he practiced there until 15 years ago, when he retired. In 1923 and again in 1941 he served in the State House of Representatives, representing the towns of Naples, Casco and Harpswell. He was a form chairman of the Board of Selectmen at Naples and was health officer there several years. Surviving are his widow, a son, Lewis P. '26 and three grandchildren, one of whom is Lewis P. Jr. '47.

1900 Word has been received of the death of Lewis A. Grass, a former student at the Maine Medical School. He was born June 26, 1875 in Fort Fairfield. At the time of his death he was engaged in journalism at Lawrence, Mass.

1901 Ivus Irvin Richmond M.D., died at East Bridgewater, Mass. on April 8, 1932. Born in Byron and a graduate of Kents Hill Seminary, he spent a year at the Maine Medical School before transferring to Harvard Medical School where he received his M.D. in 1902. In 1905 he married Frances T. Stewart and began his long practice at East Bridgewater.

1911 Artur Linwood Lancaster, one time student at the Maine Medical School, died June 22, 1946 at Veterans Administration Hospital, Bedford, Mass. Born January 12, 1889, he was stricken ill twice in as many years ago, he had Frederica G. Ridgway October 23, 1906. After leaving Bowdoin he was employed at South Portland, Lynn and Bedford, Mass.

1920 Dr. Edward Leo Herlihy died suddenly at South Gorham on November 1. Attending the clinical session of the Maine Medical Association, he and Mrs. Herlihy were visiting at the home of Dr. Eugene Drake M'19. Formerly an officer of the Maine National Guard and a Captain in the Officers Reserve Corps, Dr. Herlihy had practiced in Bangor for several years. In 1935 he did special study in Vienna, Austria. Besides his widow, a daughter, Mary, a sister and a brother survive. He was a member of the Phi Chi Medical Fraternity. His son, Edward jr., a member of the Class of 1949, was a victim of a tragic accident in October of last year.

HONORARY

1906 Reverend Eugene William Lyman of Sweet Briar, Va., died suddenly March 15. He was born April 4, 1872 in Cummings, Mass. He received his A.B. and A.M. degrees from Amherst in 1891 and his B.D. degree from Yale in 1894. He was a Hooker Fellow at the Universities of Halle, Berlin, and Marburg for two years. His first teaching position was instructor of Latin at Williston Seminary, Easthampton, Mass, in 1891. He served as professor at Carleton College, Minn., Congregational College of Canada in Montreal and at Bangor Theological Seminary. He received the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity from Bowdoin in 1906. In 1912 he accepted Professorship of Religion and Christian Ethics at Oberlin and the next year became Professor of Philosophy of Religion at Oberlin Graduate School of Theology where he taught five years. He was Ingersol Lecturer at Harvard in 1928. From 1918 until 1930 when he became Professor Emeritus, he taught at Union Theological Seminary, N. Y. After his retirement he went to Sweet Briar where he became active in college affairs. He was a member of Delta Upsilon and Phi Beta Kappa Fraternities, the American Philosophical Society and the Theological Society. He was the author of numerous books on the meaning of religion.

1934 Former Prime Minister of New Brunswick, the Hon. Leonard Percy Maclean, died at Ottawa, Canada on December 27, 1947. Born May 21, 1870, he attended the University of New Brunswick and Dalhousie Law School. The University of New Brunswick awarded him the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws and the University of Toronto the degree of Doctor of Civil Laws. In 1934, Bowdoin conferred its degree of Doctor of Laws. His widow, Laura F. Richardson, whom he married September 23, 1909, survives.

1942 Royal Coriscoz, art critic of the New York Herald Tribune, died October 17. He was born in Brooklyn, N. Y. on February 10, 1869. When he was 14 years old he became an employee of McKim, Mead & White, architects, where he remained for six years. In 1897 he married Ellen Mackay Hutchinson. He received an honorary L.H.D. from Wesleyan University, was a Chevalier of the Order of Leopold of Belgium and a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters. Bowdoin conferred on him the degree of L.H.D. in 1942. He had lectured at several colleges and spoke at the dedications of several busts in the Hall of Fame at New York University, and wrote inscriptions for monuments and war memorials in Washington and other cities. No immediate relatives survive.

BOWDOIN ALUMNUS

１８９２ Secretary, REV. HARRY W. KIMBALL 20 Washburn Avenue Needham, Mass.

The Secretary since his resignation at Needham has been serving churches without out ministers. He has just finished ten months with the Congregational Church of West Roxbury, Mass.

Theodore Lazell is now living with his brother-in-law at 41 Grove Street, Bangor. Dr. K. Lee is still in active charge of his 30 acre apple orchard in Dover-Foxcroft. This year he expects to market some six thousand bushels.

Howard W. Poor, after an operation which confined him to the hospital, is back in his office as an optician in York, Penna.

Bartlett, Nichols, Field and Wathen have all retired from business or profession, but are well.

１８９７ Secretary, JAMES E. RHOADES 29 Clifton Avenue West Hartford, Conn.

Don and Mrs. MacMillan, just back from a successful summer trip to the Arctic, came by on September 18, when the College and a large turn out of Mac’s friends and fellow alumni gave him a great welcome. Both spoke in Memorial Hall to an enthusiastic audience and were tendered a reception by President and Mrs. Sills in Hubbard Hall. He is the same old Mac, just as interesting and lovable as ever. No wonder Bowdoin rejoices to honor him.

FRANCIS L. "PUG" LUND

The depression period was a good time to be going to the University of Minnesota instead of trying to get a job. Things were somewhat better when I was graduated in 1935, but the decision I had to make about my future was still a difficult one.

The possibilities ranged from playing professional football to selling life insurance. A number of insurance companies approached me, but I was stubbornly blind to the opportunities in that field. Having majored in business administration, I felt there was a greater future in a sales job with a large automobile manufacturer. That's the job I took.

It was a good one, providing excellent experience and a substantial salary. However, as the years went along, I often wondered about the permanency of my future in such a dynamic business. Was I building anything of my own?

When the war curtailed car sales, it didn't take me long to decide on a career of life insurance. It offered me a business of my own, with never a fear for security as long as I worked, and richly rewarding compensation in direct proportion to my efforts. As the company I wanted to live with the rest of my life, I chose the New England Mutual.

Since January 1942, except for almost three years in the service, I have been thoroughly enjoying every day of life insurance. I can honestly say there hasn't been a single disappointment in my decision.

GRADUATES of our Home Office training courses, practically all of them new to the life insurance business, are selling at a rate which produces average first-year incomes of $5600. The total yearly income on such sales, with renewal commissions added, will average $5700. Facts such as these helped "Pug" Lund solve his career problem. If you'd like to know more, write Mr. H. C. Chaney, Director of Agencies, New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, 501 Boylston St., Boston 17, Massachusetts.

Founded in 1835, the New England Mutual is the first mutual life insurance company chartered in America. From the start its ideal has been that of complete mutuality—a company owned by the policyholders and operated for their benefit. In this spirit of service, it has always been a leader in pioneering the "liberalization" of insurance procedure, provisions and methods. Insurance in force now exceeds $21 billions. During its business life, New England Mutual has paid to policyholders more than $1 billion, of which nearly $200 millions have been dividends.

Francis R. Upton’s address is 2030 Lyon Street, San Francisco, Cal.

The President’s Gateway, our 25th Reunion gift, has been moved to the Bath Street side of the Campus where it now is Bowdoin’s front door.

The annual class picnic or midsummer reunion was held this year at Brunswick. The on-campus gathering was a pleasant variation of the practice the class has followed of meeting at the summer house of some member. Nearly fifty members, wives and guests attended. Guests of the class included President and Mrs. Sills, Mr. and Mrs. Philip S. Wilder, Mr. and Mrs. Seward Marsh. After a forearm of campus visiting, the party gathered at the Moulton Union for a fish chowder luncheon prepared by Don Lancaster and staff and amplified by Oxford County corn-on-the-cob supplied by John Halford. Group singing, solos by Miss Barbara Allen and brief remarks by the Alumni Secretary preceded President Sills’ welcome and report on the State of the College. Visits to the Rare Book Room at the Library and tea at 85 Federal Street concluded another in the long series of get-togethers for which 1907 is noted. Cornelius Doherty invited the Class to hold its 1919 picnic at his home in Glen Cove, near Rockland.

Any column of 1916 notes would be incomplete without mention of the quite well known Kinsey Report; the book is still high on best-sellers lists. And the current column of notes would be incomplete without mention of the fact that Bowdoin's Best Loved Class stands high on another list by again winning the Alumni Fund Cup, which was presented to our able and energetic class agent on Alumni Day.

Paul Niven is a director of the Jackson

HOTEL EAGLE WELCOMES YOU!

Yes, Bowdoin men and their families will find a friendly welcome awaiting them at Brunswick’s best hotel, five minutes’ walk from the campus.

The same friendly atmosphere that you remember is still here. But we have modernized the house throughout, installed more private baths, enlarged the dining room, built on a sun porch where you can enjoy meals outdoors in complete comfort, and redecorated and painted the house throughout.

You’ll find the same high quality of food here as in the past and sleep restfully in our clean, fresh rooms.

You can be assured of finding in the Eagle a modern and attractive hotel where you and your families may stay in complete comfort while you are in Brunswick.

And in our efforts to give you this fine service we deeply appreciate the support of Bow-doin undergraduates, alumni and friends.

This house, built in 1785 for General Peleg Wadsworth, is the first all brick structure in Portland. Originally two-storied with a gable roof and a store attached at the east side, the house took two years to complete because of its departure from the usual wooden dwelling then in Portland. John Nichols, who built Portland Head Light, was the master mason.

Fire in 1816 destroyed the roof of the house and in rebuilding, the present third story and hip roof were added. The house has been immortalized for all time in the poems of Henry Wadsworth Longfellow, grandson of Peleg Wadsworth.

Peleg Wadsworth was born at Duxbury, Mass., in 1748. After graduation at Harvard in 1769 he taught school at Plymouth, where he married Elizabeth Bartlett of that town. Among the better-known of their ten children were Commodore Alexander Scammel Wadsworth (named for Peleg’s lifelong friend Alexander Scammel); George Henry Wadsworth; and Zilpah Wadsworth, who married Stephen Longfellow and became mother of the poet. It was George Henry Wadsworth who voluntarily sacrificed his life for his country on a loaded ammunition ship at Tripoli. A monument to this brave deed is in the Eastern Cemetery.

Peleg Wadsworth moved his family to Portland in 1784, after a distinguished career in the war of the Revolution. He took immediate and active interest in town affairs and in 1785 was chosen chairman of the first convention in Maine on the subject of separation from Massachusetts. In 1792 he was elected Representative to Congress, the first from Cumberland District. He died in 1829 at the age of eighty-one.

HATCH PREPARATORY SCHOOL

Established as a summer school in 1926 by the present headmaster, Hatch Preparatory School was extended to a year-round school in 1928. Many small schools have appeared and disappeared on the educational scene. A number have grown into something very fine but something very different. Hatch Preparatory has long been recognized by educators as a leader in the small-school field. It has held fast to its small-school convictions, has never been tempted by numbers.

Results

Limitation of enrollment has been an important factor in maintaining the School’s scholastic record. The enrollment is determined by the number of courses that must be scheduled in meeting the needs of each student. It is not unusual for a student to save a year in school.

Nation-Wide Clientele

The alumni (over 900) represent 34 of the 48 states. The majority of applicants are sponsored by the heads of larger schools who are the first to recognize that many boys thrive under the system of small classes and close direction. A flexible program, adjusted to the interests and aims of the individual and directed by a faculty of one teacher for every four boys, facilitates distinctive college preparation.

THE ALUMNI COUNCIL

MORE than half of the 50 members of the Alumni Council met in Brunswick on February 18 and 19 for the fourth annual mid-winter on-campus Council session. A crowded schedule brought to the Council 15 members of the college staff who told of their particular Bowdoin jobs, discussed with the Council their problems and endeavored to discover how best to avail themselves of Alumni assistance. Council members displayed a keen, inquiring interest in the apparent change in the make-up of the student body, in the activities and gripes of the undergraduates, in the efforts of the Admissions staff to improve the caliber of entering students, in the progress toward new buildings and larger working capital funds and in the vexing problems which face the Administration. Guests of the College and royally entertained, visiting councilors carried back to their respective alumni groups hoards of information about a virile Bowdoin and a heartening message from President Sills that “Bowdoin’s best days are definitely those which lie ahead.”

THE COVER

RECENT meetings of Alumni Fund Directors and Agents and of the Alumni Council have brought sharply to the editor’s mind how vast is that army of Bowdoin men who labor for the College. When one adds to those two groups, the Trustees and Overseers, the Sesquicentennial Fund staff and solicitors, the officers of Bowdoin classes and of the local Alumni Clubs the total is amazing. Committees of all sorts are meeting continually and alumni in many and distant centers gather to greet college visitors frequently. It probably would be difficult if not impossible to strike a total of man-hours spent by Bowdoin men at work for Bowdoin, but this observer is confident that such a total would surprise us. Much is said and written these days of the threat facing independent colleges. So long as devoted Bowdoin men by the hundreds willingly and enthusiastically drop what they are doing and give so generously of their time and their abilities to the College, we must believe that Bowdoin will survive and emerge from these trying times all the stronger.
How Does A Boy Enter Bowdoin?

Director of Admissions Hubert H. Shaw '36
Outlines Requirements and Procedure

This question is probably asked most frequently of the Director of Admissions and his assistant. In June, however, it is all too often reworded to ask, "Why Didn't My Boy Get Into Bowdoin?" It is then that the Director of Admissions wishes Alexander Graham Bell had never invented his diabolical machine. For June is the beginning of the open season on Directors of Admissions who, contrary to popular belief, are interested in obtaining the best possible candidates for their own colleges.

"Why wasn't Johnny Smith admitted last year?" Individual situations vary too much to permit here an answer which will fit all cases. But it is hoped that the following comment on admission procedures will give alumni a clearer understanding of the problem and something of a guide in their efforts to help meet that problem.

Obviously, the Admissions staff cannot control all the factors which are involved when boys seek admission to Bowdoin, but we are definitely aware of our responsibility to the College, to schools, to alumni and to prospective candidates. It is our aim to obtain the best student body possible and to develop and maintain the most cordial relations between Bowdoin and all who are concerned with the problem of admission to the College.

Procedure

There is nothing intentionally mysterious in our practices. The steps to be taken in applying for admission are reduced to a minimum from an operational point of view. Yet we try to obtain the maximum information about each candidate. Admission is based on school grades at the certifying level, College Entrance Examination Board tests, the candidate's participation in the activities of his school and community, upon recommendation of school officials; and whenever possible, relatives and friends who are Bowdoin alumni. Other factors being equal, preference is given to candidates who are sons of alumni. As soon as possible a candidate is informed concerning his chance for admission. If he is obviously a desirable candidate he will be encouraged. If disqualifying factors are apparent, the candidate is advised at once that his chance for admission is poor or absolutely negligible. There is always a group of candidates whose qualifications are not clear-cut until they are compared with other boys of similar caliber. It is impossible to make a fair selection of successful candidates from this group until all grades, test results and other data are known in May.

Usually, the first contact with a prospective student is made by his requesting a catalogue and application blank. Only one application form is used. It should be filed at the Admissions office by the proper official at the boy's school. No fee need accompany this form. Application for admission should be made early in the candidate's senior year and certainly no later than March 15 of the year in which he wishes to enter Bowdoin. Incidentally, no preference is given to a candidate who files his application earlier than his senior year. We are glad, however, to receive an early preliminary application. It is a helpful indication of an interest in Bowdoin that we like.

Upon receipt of the application, acknowledgement is sent to the candidate and his school along with a schedule of procedure to be followed for the remainder of the application period. On the basis of his record as shown in the transcript of his mid-year grades the candidate is advised specifically about the College Entrance Examination Board tests which he should take. The present practice is to require the College Entrance Examination Board Scholastic Aptitude Test for all candidates. Applicants must take College Entrance Examination Board Achievement Tests only if their school records show results which do not certify them for admission. These tests are usually taken in April of the senior year although, in some cases, results of tests taken at an earlier date may be offered as evidence of ability.

The College Board test results reach us about May 1, and we try to send Certificates of Admission to... successful applicants about May 20. The admission fee of $25 must be remitted within thirty days of the date of receipt of the Certificate of Admission if the candidate plans to attend Bowdoin. Before the end of May, the Director notifies unsuccessful candidates and states specifically the reasons for denying them admission.

From the foregoing, it can be seen that there are periods during which there is nothing to report to candidates. If this is fully understood by the candidate and by those who are most concerned with his application, then much of the anxiety that characterizes college admission today may be lessened. For example a boy applies in September; his application is acknowledged, and he is informed of the steps which are to follow. Except for an interview either at the school or at the College, no further action can be taken until February when a transcript of his school grades is obtained. On the basis of this record the boy is advised of the College Board tests to be taken in April and, in many cases, told of his chance for admission. When the results of the Board tests are received, about May 1, the final decision is rendered.

There were 1,488 candidates who filed application for admission in September 1948. Of this number 1,350 applied for admission to the freshman class. There were only 176 available places to be filled.

This year there is a noticeable decrease in the number of applicants but the situation is still rather difficult. Alumni are reminded that the Governing Boards set a tentative undergraduate enrollment total of 895 for September 1949 and 750 for September 1950. Another stipulation is that the number of all new men to be admitted in each of these years be limited to 175. This latter ruling means that few who wish to transfer to Bowdoin with upper class standing will be able to do so. Virtually all the 175 admitted this fall and next must be entering freshmen. It is not expected at present that the draft will have any noticeable effect on the above plans.

Geographical Distribution

President Sills has said, "Bowdoin is the only small college for men in the country which is New England in its tradition, location and constituency. Nevertheless, we should like to have the number of students from outside New England increase to at least 30 per cent of the student body." In September, twenty-seven states, the District of Columbia and fifteen foreign countries were represented among the students on campus. Exclusive of the eighteen foreign students attending Bowdoin under the now famous Bowdoin Plan, 79.8 per cent or 782 of the students were from the New England states.

The Admissions Office continues to be interested in broadening the geographical distribution of undergraduates. It is not an easy task nor is it one which can be accomplished immediately. To do it well we must count heavily on the assistance of alumni, particularly those who live outside the New England area. Distant alumni know what a long process it is to develop a knowledge of and an interest in Bowdoin among people in their communities.

The Director of Admissions and his assistant, Paul Hazelton, have already visited a great many schools outside of New England. They will continue to make these trips to meet qualified boys in an effort to help alumni build an interest in Bowdoin in their areas.

Prematriculation Scholarships

This year thirty freshmen received prematriculation scholarship awards of $700 each for the freshman year only. These thirty awards consist of five State of Maine, six Bowdoin and nineteen Alumni Fund Scholarships. The prime purpose of such awards is to assist qualified young men in financial need to start their work at Bowdoin. It is important to keep in mind that a worthy boy, requiring financial assistance during his freshman year, may qualify for one of these awards. After his first year, if need is still present, he may apply to the Student Aid Committee for further help.

Assistance Of Alumni

There are being organized various groups of alumni who can furnish liaison between this office and schools and prospective students. Some readers of this article have known of the beginning of this plan and may wonder at its slow rate of progress to date. The delay has been due to various new ideas and experiences which are being incorporated now so that the first steps may be more positive and effective. Other colleges planning for assistance from alumni have needed several years to make their plans effective. Bowdoin has made a good start and we are hopeful of early results.

Many alumni, especially those engaged in teaching, are in a very favorable position to inform the College of good prospective students. Many successful applicants are boys with whom this office established contact through an introduction by some interested alumnus. Alumni are urged to continue this fine display of cooperation.

It will be helpful if alumni will remember: (1) to introduce candidates to us by mail or personally, and we will carry the ball after that, (2) to encourage parents and friends of candidates to deal directly with this office, (3) to be specific and accurate in presenting data. Personal acquaintance with the young man in question and his school record are the only basis for a fair appraisal, and any statement should be spontaneous and based upon firm personal conviction that the boy will become a valued member of the College.

In a nutshell, Bowdoin wants the best applicants to be had and at the moment, is trying to find more of them beyond the New England area; Bowdoin needs and wants alumni help in finding those applicants. Certain general qualifications will govern our selection. Among them are (1) a clear evidence of ability to pursue a course of college study and get results, (2) an aptitude for taking part in the activities and aims of a small liberal arts college, (3) a willingness and an ability to become a good campus citizen and, as an alumnus of Bowdoin, a responsible citizen in the world at large. It is neither possible nor desirable to discover boys who may be labelled as the "Bowdoin type". Yet Bowdoin does develop and temper the qualities inherent in its students and our effort must be to find the applicants for admission who, in our best judgement, are most likely to profit from their stay here. Our job is to admit boys whom we can proudly welcome into the ranks of the Bowdoin family, boys who will properly become "sons of Bowdoin".
Damn Yankee In The Southland

Charles P. McCurdy jr., Alumni Secretary at the College of William and Mary, Evaluates a Bowdoin Contribution

While it may surprise some Bowdoin alumni to read it, there are some Yankees who drift down below the Mason and Dixon Line and the Potomac who are not only warmly received but downright respected and admired. For such people we actually remove the hyphen from "Damn Yankee", which deletion amounts to no less a tribute than to be elected one of the "400" in New York.

Bela W. Norton is one of these persons.

Modestly and unobtrusively, Bela Norton came to Williamsburg in July, 1932, and today, sixteen and a half years later, still modestly and unobtrusively, he is the resident head of Colonial Williamsburg, Incorporated, that magnificent organization altruistically created by John Davison Rockefeller Jr., the purpose of which was and is to recreate accurately the environment of the men and women of 18th Century Williamsburg and to bring about such an understanding of their lives and times that present and future generations may more vividly appreciate the contribution of these early Americans to the ideals and culture of our country.

Bela's coming to Williamsburg was not an accident. It was one of those fortuitous events which, at the time, go unnoticed but which, years later, are cause for gratification. In 1932, Colonial Williamsburg was getting ready to dedicate and open to the public its first reconstructed public building — the famed Raleigh Tavern in which the first Greek letter fraternity, Phi Beta Kappa, was founded; where Jefferson had danced with the fair Belinda; and where the House of Burgesses had met after the Royal Governor had evicted them from the Capitol. Officials of the Restoration were desirous of dedicating the Tavern in a fitting and dignified manner. They went to Ivy Lee and Associates in New York to request the services, on a consultant basis, of an expert public relations man. The man who was sent was this Bowdoin alumnus named Norton.

So well did he do the job during those torrid summer months of 1932 that, in the autumn, after the dedication had taken place, he was asked to remain permanently. At first he was given no official title but merely an office and a desk at which he was to start developing a public relations program for the expanding restoration project. In 1936 he fell heir to the somewhat nebulous but official title of director of public relations for the organization but it was not until March of 1943 that he was dignified with the title vice president in charge of public relations.

On June 1, 1948 he became Executive Vice President, title of the resident head of Colonial Williamsburg, Inc.

The organization is unique for the reason that there is none other like it anywhere in the world, now or in history. Its origin dates back to the middle twenties when a dynamic and almost indigent Episcopal clergyman named William A. R. Goodwin, Rector of Bruton Parish Church, divulged a dream which he had long had for restoring this 18th century community to its original appearance. He realized something that few others had considered, namely, that, of the important 18th century cities - Boston, New York, Philadelphia, Charleston, Williamsburg - only the latter, which had literally gone to sleep for over a hundred years, could lend itself to such a restoration. He took his dream to New York where, at a meeting of the Phi Beta Kappa Society, he met for the first time, Mr. Rockefeller Jr. Dr. Goodwin was not a man who paid undue attention to the amenities of social contact and he straightway revealed his dream to Mr. Rockefeller Jr., while others were doubtless engaged in intricate academic discussions usually german to such gatherings. Mr. Rockefeller J r. is reported to have expressed a casual interest in visiting Williamsburg but not much more. In 1932 - the important date was November 27 - he did return the visit after a fashion when he attended the formal dedication of the Phi Beta Kappa Memorial Hall on the campus at the College of William and Mary. At this meeting Dr. Goodwin had the advantage. He was able to show Mr. Rockefeller Jr. in person the great possibilities of the restoration if only financial means could be made available. Suffice it to say, they were made available and in increasingly larger amounts.

At the time the restoration was undertaken, Williamsburg had preserved a remarkable proportion of its historic homes and buildings. Yet, these were disappearing rapidly and many of them were in ruinous condition. Since the restoration was begun, 612 modern buildings have been demolished or removed from the colonial area; 222 colonial buildings have been reconstructed, most of them on original foundations; 85 colonial buildings have been restored or extensively repaired; many gardens have also been restored, and the appurtenances of a colonial city have replaced all apparent modern features. In addition to the Raleigh Tavern, the Colonial Capitol, the Governor's Palace, the Sir Christopher Wren Building at the College (oldest academic building in America), Bruton Parish Church and the George Wythe House, among others, have all been restored to their original appearance. The restoration has been under way for twenty years and has already cost in excess of twenty-five million dollars. It is estimated that another ten years will be needed to complete the restoration of the historic area and, for this purpose, ten million dollars has been appropriated.

Bela Norton will locally preside over this completion program and, Providence willing, be on hand when the last nail is driven, the last brush of paint applied, and the last boxwood planted for the restoration of Williamsburg. All of this will have been done, not for the citizens of Williamsburg, nor even for the citizens of Virginia and the Southland, but for all the citizens of this great land who may come and see from whence so much of their proud heritage came.

Born in Maine, Bela Norton went to Bowdoin with the Class of 1913, but the first World War delayed his degree until 1919. After graduation, he went down to New York where, through the good services of another Bowdoin alumnus, E. P. Mitchell who was editor of the New York Sun and Frank Munsey, who had received an honorary degree from Bowdoin in 1919, Bela started a newspaper career on the old Sun. It is not possible to estimate the technical knowledge which he acquired during his newspaper days but, in 1922, he did acquire as a wife, the lovely Margaret Louzon of Montreal, Canada. He remained with the Sun until 1924 and then transferred to the old New York Evening Post as assistant city editor, this paper having then been acquired by the late Cyrus H. K. Curtis. After two more years in Park Row, he paid his last respects to journalism and went with Ivy Lee and Associates, the pioneer in public relations, that tremendously important adjunct to most of our successful business enterprises today. From Ivy Lee he came to Williamsburg.

His contributions to and enlargements of Williamsburg life, beyond his professional duties, have been outstanding. In less than four years after he arrived, he was made president of the Rotary Club - just as though he had been here always - and later became director and president of the local Chamber of Commerce. For some years he has served as chairman of the Williamsburg School Board, has worked with the State Chamber of Commerce in an advisory capacity for public relations and is currently vice president of the Jamestown Corporation which each summer presents a symphonic drama known as The Common Glory. During the recent war, he was chairman of the Williamsburg War Board, in which capacity he gave most of his time to correlating with the Army and Navy local problems which had resulted with the arrival of over one hundred thousand men in the camps surrounding Williamsburg within a radius of twenty miles.

In September, 1948, he accompanied John Davison Rockefeller III on a 16,000 mile air tour of Africa to observe first hand and to obtain a better understanding of conditions on that continent. In 1946 Mr. Rockefeller had made a similar tour of Europe and in 1947 to China and Japan. On the most recent tour they visited French West Africa, Liberia, Nigeria, The Congo, South Africa, Kenya and Ethiopia, at which latter they were official guests of the Ethiopian Government and visited Haile Selassie. In South Africa they talked with former Prime Minister Smuts and with others of prominence.

Bela claims that his years in Williamsburg have made him a better New Englander because he has found so much in common - architecturally, historically, culturally. He has even been gratified to find that in the 18th century in Williamsburg there was a family named Norton. Each summer he returns to his native state for a vacation. Williamsburgers rather feel that he is entitled to this annual trek to the great state which claims him as a native son, but they are grateful when thirty days have passed and he returns to his adopted state which admires him affectionately and to which he has contributed so largely. He may even continue to vote the Republican ticket. We do not know and we shall not ask.

"Damn Yankee in The Southland" he most assuredly is. We shall always have room for more like him.

The Sesquicentennial Fund

Bowdoin can now report tangible progress towards accomplishments in buildings as well as dollars.

Classroom Building Assured

On January 15, because the contributions of cash or securities to the Sesquicentennial Fund totaled almost $800,000 of the $1,380,000 subscribed, the Governing Boards of the College took the necessary action to make possible the realization of the first construction goal, a new classroom building. Year-end cash receipts of the Sesquicentennial Fund made an early start on the new building possible.

To supervise the planning and construction of the new building, there will be a committee consisting of Harold L. Berry '01 and E. Farrington Abbott '03 of the Board of Trustees, John W. Frost '04, Leonard A. Pierce '05 and Widgery Thomas '22 of the Board of Overseers, and Professors Stanley P. Chase '05 and Morgan B. Cushing of the Faculty. This committee was also instructed to make a study of present classroom buildings with view toward their modernization.

The new classroom building, for which the College hopes to break ground by Commencement in June, will be erected to the east of Adams Hall on the Delta. It will balance Adams Hall on the other side of the recently moved Presidents’ Gateway, and also will be in line with the heating plant and the Moulton Union. Constructed on a line with Adams Hall, it will be farther from the Bath road than Adams, thus bringing it away considerably from the noise of the heavily traveled Bath road.

Chemistry Building Next

A chemistry building, the Boards voted, should be second on the list. The Committee on Planning of New Buildings will make a survey of academic and industrial laboratories in preparation of plans for the new structure. This committee is similar in personnel to the one mentioned above except that Mr. Thomas is replaced by President Sills, who is its chairman.

Dollar Progress

During the month of December the Fund received approximately $175,000 in cash and securities of which $110,000 was received in the last week. Interest of about $6,000 on Fund monies has not been included in the above total.
The over-all figure of Alumni contributions is still far below the goal set for them. As of January 15, 1949, 2454 of Bowdoin’s 5830 Alumni (42.1%) had contributed $667,879.84 or 62% of the Alumni goal of $1,100,000. The approach to non-Bowdoin prospects would be materially strengthened if well over 60% of the Alumni would meet the fore-mentioned goal. These figures do not, of course, include the $555,000 contributed by Alumni who are members of the Governing Boards and Bowdoin Faculty, or the $325 by the Bowdoin Clubs of Boston and New Jersey. Shortly after Commencement in June, it is proposed to publish a list by classes of those who have contributed up to include that day, June 18. Undoubtedly, many who have not yet subscribed will desire to do so before then.

Meanwhile, the Fund is beginning to branch out to cover other fields. Concerning itself first with Governing Boards, Faculty, Undergraduates and Alumni, it is now beginning to give more attention to non-Bowdoin individuals, as well as corporations and foundations. Also, it is preparing the long-range program of bequests and future expectancies, which if continued should bring continuing returns to Bowdoin. This long-range program is designed to produce funds through large gifts, bequests, annuities and other insurance plans. John W. Frost ’04, the Chairman of this activity, is in the process of forming a committee to ensure a broad coverage in this work, to ensure that all Bowdoin Alumni and Friends are aware of the needs of the College and their opportunity to meet those needs.

Bowdoin Clubs Active

Some Bowdoin Clubs are actively assisting the Sesquicentennial Fund. The Bowdoin Club of Portland has taken the lead in this respect. In sponsoring a performance of Handel’s Messiah at Portland City Hall in December, it made music history in Maine and will be able to turn over nearly $1000 in profits. The Bowdoin Club of Boston, thanks to its Pop Concert last spring, has sent in $250 and the Bowdoin Club of New Jersey, $75.

Professor Tillotson, the originator of the Messiah performance at Portland, can arrange glee club concerts next year in several communities, providing the local Bowdoin Clubs will organize the project well in advance. While the financial contributions are very acceptable, the more important value is the added prestige these fine performances give to the College and its representatives.

In addition, the Society of Bowdoin Women has surveyed the souvenir field and is now about ready to sell Bowdoin paper matches, Bowdoin note paper and Bowdoin Christmas Cards.

The Long Pull

Many Alumni will remember the very popular play of some years ago, You Can’t Take It With You. The latest development of the Sesquicentennial Fund is to set up an organization for the purpose of making Alumni and friends of Bowdoin conscious of the possibilities of gifts to Bowdoin at a time when their own needs for those funds cease.

Bequests to colleges such as Bowdoin present an ideal opportunity to perpetuate the names and ideals of men and women. Through various forms of giving by Will, many of our Colleges found their very beginnings. Starting with the bequest of James Bowdoin, our alma mater has been very fortunate in the many gifts received through bequests from both Alumni and friends of the College. A look at the Treasurer’s report or at the Scholarship and Financial Aid section of the College Catalogue will reveal what an important part bequests have played in providing funds, books and equipment for the College. Some fifty scholarship funds owe their existence to bequests. The bequests to endowment and library funds are many, and include the largest listed.

A continuing and successful program of education on the possibilities of gifts through bequests and memorials should practically eliminate the need for future “drives” and “campaigns” for capital funds, such as just about every independent institution is carrying on at this time. They all need more money. They will continue to need money, but with proper organization to ensure that every Bowdoin man and friend of the College become conscious of the needs and of the opportunity of helping meet those needs, a reasonably steady flow of capital funds should result. The need for “drives” would then become infrequent or totally unnecessary.

This phase of the Sesquicentennial Fund campaign came into focus this past month with the appointment of John W. Frost ’04 as Chairman of the Committee on Bequests and Future Expectancies.

The Sesquicentennial Fund plan now being put into operation calls for an organization of hundreds of Bowdoin Alumni scattered throughout the world. These hundreds of Alumni will serve as ambassadors and salesmen for the College. They will be stimulated from time to time to be on guard constantly for opportunities of guiding money to Bowdoin; they will put much of their efforts into establishing means of providing a steady flow of capital to the College.

Eventually this committee will be composed of lawyers, trust officers and other bankers, insurance men and ministers. Momentarily, the committee is being organized step by step. Mr. Frost, a member of the Board of Overseers and a prominent New York lawyer, is currently gathering about him a representative group of Bowdoin lawyers.

Aaron A. Putnam '08, Clement F. Robinson '03, Walter M. Sanborn '05, Gordon M. Stewart '35, Frank H. Swan '08, and George R. Walker '02.

Meanwhile the Fund is doing research on insurance plans in preparation for another aspect of the long-range phase of the Bowdoin program.

Memorial Gifts

The Sesquicentennial Fund has given members of the Bowdoin Family an opportunity to do something worthwhile to honor the memory of Bowdoin sons, fathers, mothers, professors, classmates and brothers. To date, the Fund has received 32 gifts totalling $73,514.53 in the form of memorials, the majority of which honor members of the Bowdoin Family.

These gifts range in size from two figures to five, but each was given with two thoughts in mind: to help Bowdoin and to memorialize a cherished name.

The gift in memory of Professor Henry Johnson of the Class of 1874 is particularly fitting. A member of the Bowdoin Faculty for more than 40 years, Professor Johnson was an outstanding example of the kind of men on whom Bowdoin depends for its teaching. He served as Professor of Modern Languages and was one of the world's foremost authorities on Dante; he was the College Librarian for five years and Curator and Director of the Art Museum for more than 30 years. Yet he is remembered more for what he was than what he did. Charles F. Thwing in his book Friends of Men wrote: "Like Bowdoin and like the whole State of Maine, he (Professor Johnson) was the soul of friendliness."

Another Henry Johnson, Dr. Henry L. of the Class of 1907, is remembered in another way. A Bowdoin Father, grateful for Dr. Johnson's service in saving his son's life during a siege of pneumonia at Bowdoin, has voiced the hope that his contribution can be combined with others for the benefit of the College Infirmary or any other vital need of the College. Dr. Daniel F. Hanley '39 is currently studying present needs to ascertain how this memorial can be best used.

Just what sort of memorial will be established for those who died in World War II has not been determined, but already the Fund has received several gifts for that purpose. It has also received a number of gifts in memory of individual Bowdoin men who lost their lives in the service.

And there is one in memory of an Air Corps pilot who did not come to Bowdoin. Philip S. Wood Jr., son of a member of the Class of 1913, graduated from U. S. Military Academy in 1942. Shortly thereafter he was piloting a heavy bomber from an Italian base. He and his crew of 12 men and officers were lost after successfully completing a mission over Vienna. For a previous mission he had received the Distinguished Flying Cross. Although he was never heard from again, his memory has been perpetuated by this gift to Bowdoin.

One of the largest memorial gifts received to date is a fund established in memory of Woodbury K. Dana and Mary Little Hale Pickard Dana, forebears of a long line of Bowdoin men. The use to which this fund is to be applied has not yet been indicated. There has also been a gift in memory of two Bowdoin brothers, Ensign Paul Herford Eames jr. '46 and Richard Everett Eames '47. Ensign Eames lost his life off Leyte in 1945 when the heavy cruiser Indianapolis was sunk. Richard Eames died in 1947 when a private plane he was piloting crashed with another in mid-air near Sanford, Maine.

The Bowdoin Fathers Association has contributed $2500 to be used in one of the new buildings in memory of Miss Suzanne Young, former secretary in the Alumni Office who was killed in an automobile accident in England last summer. One Bowdoin Father has added about $500 to this memorial.

Other individuals, the memory of whom has been honored by gifts, include: Palmer Oliver Spinney and Mary Jane Spinney, parents of two Bowdoin men and Leon Leslie Spinney '94, the uncle of Leon L. Spinney '26, Brunswick Municipal Court Judge; Robert Henry Lunt '42, Navy veteran who was accidentally killed in 1946 as he was preparing for a career in the State Department; John G. Stetson, 1854, "a grand person, a loyal and generous son of Bowdoin"; Rev. Earl Boynton Wood '92, who died a year after accepting his first call at the Fort Fairfield Congregational Church; William Widgery Thomas '94, fourth generation representative of the Portland banking family; and Bradlee Ford Mitchell, son of a member of the Class of 1914. A non-Bowdoin son is to perpetuate the memory of his Bowdoin father by the gift of two study alcoves in the new wing of the library when this is constructed.

In addition to these memorials for individuals, the Fund has also received 36 gifts totalling $61,960 in the name of 10 Bowdoin classes.

Calvin Coolidge, late President of the United States, expressed the memorial idea best, when he wrote:

"The Memorial Idea is sound and is sure to grow as increasing opportunities present themselves. One of the most encouraging signs is the tendency today to look to institutions of higher education for memorial sites. No more fitting agencies for this purpose can be imagined. For universities are not repositories of the dead. They are more alive than the market-place; their eyes are not only on the present, but on the past and the future. And the life within their walls is always young and acquisitive. To place your name, by gift or bequest, in the keeping of an active university is to be sure that the name and the project with which it is associated will continue down the centuries to quicken the minds and hearts of youth, and thus make a permanent contribution to the welfare of humanity."

1949 Reunion Preview

Ten Classes Have Plans For June 17 and 18 Well Underway

If early activity is a fair criterion, the several classes which celebrate stated reunions on June 17 and 18 will post unusually large attendance records. Already some reunion committees have their Commencement programs rather definitely arranged and a few have begun to receive responses to reunion letters. As reported to the Alumni Office, classes are underway as follows.

1899 will observe its Fiftieth modestly but effectively with headquarters in the Moulton Union. No committee has yet been named but Lucien B. Libby is making preliminary arrangements.

1904 has been assigned headquarters in North Hyde Hall but President Emery O. Beane reports that their Forty-fifth activities are likely to center around the home of John W. Frost in Topsham. Tentative plans have been made for an outing at Lookout Point.

1909's Fortieth is being planned by Irving L. Rich (who apparently is the permanent reunion chairman) assisted by Robert M. Pennell. Headquarters are in South Appleton Hall.

1914 will be quartered in South Moore Hall with Room No. 03 their gathering spot. William H. Farrar is arranging details on the Brunswick end. Secretary Al Gray has issued his first reunion call and already has a growing pile of responses. The class outing will be held at the summer home of Earle Thompson near Boothbay.

1919 has headquarters in North Moore Hall. Perley S. Turner is reunion chairman. The class dinner will be held at the Harriet Beecher Stowe House.

1924, under the direction of President Malcolm E. Morrell has a large committee at work on their big Twenty-fifth. Brooks Savage is the chairman. President Morrell states that some committee members have not as yet accepted their assignments but that most of them have and are working. Secretary Clarence Rouillard has mailed his first bulletin and reports many replies indicating a large attendance. Pickard Field House will be the center of reunion activities and members of the class will be housed in North Appleton.

1929 has South Maine as Twentieth Reunion headquarters. Chairman Samuel A. Ladd reports that the class outing and dinner June 17 will be held at Sunset Farm.

1934's Fifteenth Reunion chairman is William D. Rounds. President Charles Allen reports that Fred Drake is arranging the class banquet and that a Boston group under John Arnold is assisting. Headquarters are in North Maine Hall with Room No. 17 the gathering place.

1939 will be quartered in South Winthrop Hall. Jotham D. Pierce is Tenth Reunion chairman. Tim Riley and Dan Hanley are in charge of Brunswick arrangements.

1944 will celebrate their Fifth with headquarters in North Winthrop. President Dick Johnstone is reunion chairman and Secretary Ross Williams is actively assisting. Elroy LaCasce is in charge of the class outing.

The week of June 12 to 18 is Commencement week in 1949. Dormitory rooms will be available to returning alumni on Thursday and Friday nights upon reservations made to the Bursar or to the respective reunion chairmen at $1.00 per night. The customary program will be observed with most alumni meetings and events on Friday, June 17 and the graduation exercises and the Commencement dinner on Saturday, June 18.
Honoris Causa

Prof. Stanley P. Chase '05 Reviews a Recent College Publication in a Chapel Address

THE College has just issued as the 29th number of the Bowdoin College Bulletin the little pamphlet entitled “Honoris Causa”. It consists of the ascriptions used by President Sills in conferring honorary degrees from his assumption of office in 1918 to the present year 1948. The title page notes that it includes also the citation read in 1934 by Charles Taylor Hawes, LL.D. That refers to the ascription accompanying the award of the doctorate of laws to President Sills himself. The College is deeply indebted to Professor Herbert Brown for the original idea of the publication, to him and Professor Riley for their careful editing, to Mr. Robinson, President of the Board of Overseers, for his graceful Foreword, and to Mr. Fred Anthoensen for what we always have from him, a distinguished piece of printing.

The list contains 247 ascriptions. Two of the persons, however, were twice recipients of honorary degrees: Arthur G. Staples '82, late editor of the Lewiston Journal, and the present Counsel of the College, Honorable Edward W. Wheeler '98.

There is more or less fun, mostly good-natured, poked nowadays at this ancient custom of conferring honorary degrees. Some of you doubtless know an amusing lithograph by Grant Wood showing a short, somewhat pompous, and very pudgy business man being invested with academic regalia by two gaunt and lanky academicians. I myself remember hearing President Lowell of Harvard, in a jovial moment, refer to the practice of conferring these degrees as “an innocent way of adding to the sum-total of human happiness.” Yet, for all this railly, the interest and value attached to these distinctions in the public mind and the deep satisfaction they give to the members of the College as well as to the recipients have not appreciably lessened.

I was told by the widow of one of Bowdoin’s honorary members—a man who had fought valiantly though often losingly for causes in which he believed—that in his final illness, when he was extremely depressed, he asked once to have read to him, as a means of rallying his spirits, the ascription used by President Sills in conferring upon him a doctorate of letters.

Certainly this Bowdoin list comprises a highly distinguished company, who have been and are an element of great strength in the life of the College. To select just ten names which would be instantly recognized by a well-informed person in any part of the country, we might take: Van Wyck Brooks, Harold H. Burton, Robert Frost, Sir Wilfred Grenfell, The Earl of Halifax, Dwight W. Morrow, Kenneth Roberts, Edwin Arlington Robinson, Harlan Fiske Stone and Wendell Willkie.

I have amused myself by attempting a classification of these 245 names according to lines of activity. Such a process is bound to be very tentative, so many of the persons fit Mrs. Malaprop’s description of Cerberus as “three gentlemen at once.” The choice of a category for them is more or less arbitrary. But for what it is worth, here is the classification:

- Government service (except Judiciary) ........................................ 27
- Law and Judiciary ........................................................................ 26
- Business, Banking, and Industry .................................................. 26
- Ministry ....................................................................................... 22
- Medicine ..................................................................................... 20
- Literature and Journalism ............................................................ 20
- Scholarship (in humanistic and social studies) ......................... 19
- Science (including engineering, forestry, invention, and exploration) ......................................................... 18
- School Teaching or Superintendency of Schools .................... 15
- Art, Music, and Architecture ..................................................... 14
- Administration of Higher Education ........................................ 13
- Military and Naval Service ....................................................... 12
- Social Service and Philanthropy ................................................. 4
- Service to the College and in General Citizenship ........ 9
- College and university teachers, overlapping other classifications, number 49. Of these, 20 were engaged in teaching some branch of language or literature.

Perhaps the most interesting thing that comes out of any attempt to break such a list down into groups is the consideration of the doubtful cases—those names that might go into two or more groups, or else don’t fit very appropriately in any. What shall one do, for instance, with the late Herbert L. Swett '01, the proprietor of Lakewood and the originator of the summer theatre as we know it? or with the late Sir Harry Oakes '96 (for “business executive” hardly suggests the more original and colorful phases of that extraordinary career)? or with Bowdoin’s first Rhodes Scholar, David Porter '06, who, though he was for a while Headmaster of Mount Hermon School, made his chief contribution as an executive officer of the national Y.M.C.A.? or with Mr. Anthoensen himself, the head of the Anthoensen Press—should he be classified as a business executive or as an artist? or with the late Charles W. Hawkesworth '06—in a quaint governmental phrase, “Superintendent of Schools and Reindeer” in Alaska? or with the late Robie Stevens '06, who, when only eleven years out of college, ruined his health for life by resisting even under the threat of torture the demand of the Bolsheviks to surrender the keys of the institution in Petrograd by which he was employed? Everyone to his own taste in such decisions, for in Mark Antony’s words, though without his irony, all are honorable men.

The writing of these ascriptions is an art requiring no little literary skill, especially the power to condensed much substance in the single phrase. Brevity is the soul of wit, as Polonius so truly said, and the composer of citations must lay that counsel to heart. That President Sills, though he is no Polonius, has this gift, at least when he is on the Commencement platform, is evident to anyone who pages through this pamphlet; and in the remaining two or three minutes allowed me I should like merely to repeat a few of the felicitous phrases one runs across.

Harvey Dow Gibson '02, banker; Trustee of the College; internationally active as a leader of the American Red Cross during both World Wars; recognized at home and abroad as one of those in civil life who contributed most to the Victory which we celebrate.

Preston Kyes '96, a professor of medicine, who has given all his time, all his energy, and too much of his health to the pursuit of pure science.
DON CARLOS SEITZ, journalist, poet of the buccaneers and pirates of romantic days, and foe of the buccaneers and pirates of political and business life today.

WILLIAM ALBION MOODY '82, Professor of Mathematics, who has made generations of freshmen tremble, and generations of graduates rise up to bless him for having inculcated honest intellectual habits.

JOHN CLAIR MINOT '96, an old friend of the President, literary editor of the Boston Herald, whose words, mainly of wisdom, have more influence on the reading public of New England than those of any other journalist.

PHILIP DANA '96 Treasurer of the College, who performs the exacting duties and responsibilities of that office to the complete satisfaction of everyone but himself.

EDWARD ARNER THOMPSON '91, who, though he lost his eyesight, had a notable career as a dramatic reader, an outstanding example of the Bowdoin truth expressed in "old Phi Chi" that "Pluck beats luck."

ROBERT PETER TRISTRAM COFFIN '15 widely known from Attic Room to Christ Church, from Archbishop Land to Aunt Emma.

FREDERICK HALE, United States Senator; able, conservative advocate of national defense, giving an admirable example to his colleagues in the Senate by his belief and practice of the efficacy of action as superior to the efficacy of talk.

JOHN Abel Lord, Lieutenant United States Navy (retired), restorer of the frigate Constitution, whose example is valuable to the graduates of today: for he has done one thing supremely well.

JEFFERSON BUTLER FLETCHER, Professor of Comparative Literature of Columbia University and translator of Dante; like Dante's teacher, always emphasizing the things of the spirit, — Come l'om s'eterna.

IRVING BABBITT, critic, upon most questions fundamentally right and very often right alone.

WILLIAM CONVERSE KENDALL '85, ichthyologist, who it is said can tell by the scales of a fish, as a criminal investigator could tell by fingerprints, where a fish came from, where it was caught, and who caught it.

LEVERETT SALTONSTALL, descendant of a Harvard great-grandfather, who at Bowdoin's first Commencement received an honorary degree; friendly ambassador of our mother state who we hope from his experiences today may echo the words of his ancestor, "I almost fancied myself in Cambridge."

ARCHIBALD JOSEPH CRONIN, novelist who has given to the phrase "best seller" a new and deeper meaning.

RALPH OWEN BREWSTER '09, for the past twenty-five years the stormy petrel of Maine Politics, and like that famous denizen of our coast ready for each succeeding storm.

PAUL NIXON, Dean of Deans; since 1909 on the Faculty of Bowdoin College, and since 1918 its witty, incomparable, and understanding Dean; today on the twenty-fifth anniversary of his assumption of that office, honored by his grateful college.

JAMES PHINNEY BAXTER 3rd, President of Williams College; bearing a name long honored in Maine, born in Portland, nurtured in Brunswick, straying to Williamstown, sojournin at Harvard, in 1937 settling down to guide the fortunes of the College of which he is so loyal an alumnus.

ROScoe HENDERSON Hupper '07, an admiralty lawyer, born and brought up on the coast of Maine, and carrying into his law practice in New York City something of the salty tang of the sea.

FREDERIC ERLE THORNLAY TILLOTSON, for many years though without a formal degree a master of his art, and now pro merito and Honoris Causa, Doctor of Music.

Of such praising we may say, as Chaucer said of the Clerk of Oxford's speech, that it is "short and quik and ful of hy sentence."

The 1948-49 Alumni Fund

At the recent meetings of Class Agents and Alumni Fund Directors, Chairman Kendrick Burns '14 reported the progress of the annual Alumni Fund gift to date and formally entrusted the appeal to the several Class Agents. Regretting that the general mailings had been somewhat less productive than a year ago, Chairman Burns expressed the confident hope that the diligent personal appeal of the agents to their classmates would soon put this year's Fund well on its way toward the objectives of $70,000 and a participation by Seventy Percent of the Alumni. He believes that the needed dollars will be forthcoming if seventy percent of us contribute, each as he is able, and reminds Bowdoin men that the emphasis is not so much upon How Much as it is upon How Many.

As of February 15, class contributions and participations were as follows:

On The Campus

The College continues its traditional encouragement of students to enter the medical profession. Not only is their entrance at Bowdoin made easier by pre-matriculation scholarships but they are eligible for assistance during their stay here. Furthermore, substantial awards are made to men while attending medical school. Prof. Samuel E. Kamerling recently announced that the committee on medical scholarships has given twenty-three awards totaling over $6,000 to twenty-two Bowdoin men and one Bates man now seeking their medical degrees. These scholarships are made from the proceeds of the Garcelon-Merritt Funds and were given to students attending eleven different medical schools.

February Graduation

Forty-three men, representing classes from 1944 to 1950 inclusive, received degrees at special graduation exercises held in the Chapel February 5.

Charles W. Carruthers '50 and Roger L. Kenvin '49 were appointed Teaching Fellows for the Spring term; Carruthers in Physics and Kenvin in English. Alan L. Logan '42, who has served as Fellow in German, will also be a Fellow in Comparative Literature for the current semester.

Eight degrees awarded cum laude were received by: James B. Aker '50, Charles W. Carruthers '50, James T. Gouranouros '46, Robert E. Hart '49, Roger L. Kenvin '49, Bernard A. LeBeau '48, Charles Rallides '50 and Sherman D. Spector '50.

President Sills, in his address, stressed that "ignorance and judgment without facts were the principal enemies of right living." He went on to say that modern education is likely to encourage prejudice rather than sound judgment because of its practice of dealing with opinion rather than with factual knowledge. "Knowledge is not enough," said the President. "It must be transmuted into assessment that results in judgment." Continuing by saying that "in a world which is becoming in many ways more and more complicated, the task of passing judgment on men and events is a more and more difficult process," the President concluded with a reminder to the graduates that "in many fields of human activity you can find use for college training both in being well informed and accurate in the use of facts and intelligent and broadminded in judgments."

Athletics

This was to have been a great year for hockey at Bowdoin, with our first covered rink and plenty of good ice for practice and play. But the weatherman didn't cooperate. Because of the unusually warm winter in Maine, the team has actually had less time on the ice this year than in previous years with the old outdoor rink. With an average Maine winter, and our rink set up in the hangar at the Brunswick Naval Air Station, we expected to have enough skating time for Coach Danny MacFadyen to develop one of our best teams. So far, about the only cold weather we have had was during the two-weeks' examination period. Two or three weeks of cold weather would be very welcome to a group of disappointed hockey squad members. Hockey is a great game. There is very strong interest in it on the part of the sixty boys who sign up to compete for the varsity or junior varsity teams, and the spectator interest is really surprising.

The basketball team was steadily improving until mid-year exams took their toll. The team played fine basketball and won more games during January than any previous Bowdoin basketball team. A few tall boys with some basketball experience would be a great help in this sport. The freshman team is the best in Bowdoin history. It is the first Bowdoin team to defeat the University of Maine freshmen from the Annex or Brunswick Campus.

Coach Magee's track team is strong again this year, in spite of heavy losses from graduation. It probably is not as good as the outstanding, undefeated team of 1948, but it should not lose many meets. The schedule includes meets with New Hampshire, Dartmouth, Amherst, Vermont, Boston College, Bates and Colby and the New England meets. For the first time in many years, Coach Magee did not have a varsity one-mile relay team at the B.A.A. games in Boston. He did take a freshman team, however, which did itself proud by defeating teams from Boston College and Holy Cross. So track is another sport in which this year's freshmen are very strong.

The swimming team easily defeated the strong Wesleyan team last Saturday to continue its, as yet, undefeated season. Except for scholastic difficulties, which make it impossible for two of Bob Miller's varsity swimmers to take the trip to Amherst, the chances for an undefeated season in swimming would be very bright indeed. This is the third successive powerful swimming team that Coach Miller has developed, and next winter's team can be even better if three or four of his prospects can reach the "gentleman's" average in their courses.

Bowdoin teams are improving this year, and will definitely be better next year. As has been pointed out above, there are better freshmen in every sport than we have had for some years. Even more important, perhaps, is the fact that there will be no summer school this year. That means that most Bowdoin athletes will now have three full years of varsity competition. Matt Branche, for example, was entitled to another year of competition, but he graduated last June after having attended several summer sessions. The Bowdoin track team would be really strong if Branche were available for competition. What is true in regard to Branche, has been true of many Bowdoin athletes in all sports in the past few years. With a better freshman group and the expectation of a longer period of competition on the part of upperclassmen, prospects are bright for the future in all sports.

The College is represented by teams in fencing, winter sports, rifle, and wrestling, so that in all, there are fourteen Bowdoin varsity, junior varsity and freshman teams competing against teams from other colleges and schools this winter.

In the winter intramural program, boys who are not on any of the squads which compete against outside teams, are playing on twelve interfraternity basketball teams, twelve volleyball teams and eleven bowling teams. Late in the winter, Bowdoin will play host to the intramural champions in basketball from Amherst and Williams. A three way tournament will be held with the winning Bowdoin fraternity team playing the Amherst and Williams teams. Similar competition in touch football was held at Amherst last fall, while the softball competition will be held at Williams next spring.

Regular classes in physical education are held at three different hours each day except Saturday. There are two classes a day in what is called “special swimming” for boys who, while not candidates for one of the swimming teams, want to improve their swimming. Coach Walsh conducts a class in coaching every day except Saturday. A little later in the year, there will be offered one and possibly two six weeks courses in Life Saving.

On February 5, Bowdoin held its tenth annual baseball clinic, with Dan MacFayden and eight other past and present big league ball players and a national league umpire acting as the faculty. Some four hundred school boys visited the campus and enjoyed the lectures, exhibitions in the cage and the world series pictures.

On the second Saturday in March, Bowdoin will conduct its 33rd annual interscholastic track meet. This event brings about four hundred school boys from thirty-five to forty New England schools to the Bowdoin campus.

It should seem obvious that the program outlined above will keep the members of the Bowdoin athletic staff fairly busy during the winter season.

Debating

Four teams from Bowdoin’s debating squad of twenty-five men opened the year by participating in a Tournament conducted by the University of Vermont. Bowdoin was represented by John P. Ashby ’50, John E. Good ’48, Richard T. Gott ’52, Merton G. Henry ’50, John R. Hupper ’52, Everett L. Knight ’51, John A. Mitchell ’50 and Malcolm S. Stevenson ’50. Bowdoin won from Vermont (70-60), Wesleyan negative (85-69), Wesleyan affirmative (78-73), Penn State (75-65), Champlain (87-75), Rhode Island (70-50), and lost to Dartmouth (68-73), Army (89-95), Brooklyn (63-73), Wake Forest (73-84), Rutgers (66-72), Bates (76-85).

During the current semester two Bowdoin teams will meet Boston University at Boston on February 18. On February 25 two Bowdoin teams will debate Federal Aid to Education with the University of New Hampshire at Brunswick. That same day another team will meet Tufts away. March 4 Merton Henry and John Good will participate in a panel discussion at Augusta. The following day two Bowdoin teams, as yet unnamed, will participate in the annual Maine Intercolligate Debate Tournament this year held at Bates College. A similar Maine Tournament for freshmen is being arranged for a later date at Orono. On April 16 Hamilton College will send a team to Brunswick and on April 22 Amherst will meet Bowdoin at Brunswick. Arrangements are underway for additional contests at Brunswick with Tufts, M.I.T., Holy Cross and Amherst, and for debates away with Harvard and Wellesley.

For the third consecutive year Bowdoin will conduct an international debate in Memorial Hall on March 23. Cambridge University of England is sending to this country George William Pattison, Vice-President of the Cambridge Union Society, and Denzil K. Freeth, Secretary of the Union Society. Debating with the English visitors, under a plan of mixed teams, will be Bowdoin’s representatives Merton Henry and William S. Auger-son ’47. Bowdoin will shortly announce which of the submitted list of topics it will debate. In addition to debating some of the conventional subjects, the English visitors are ready to debate that “This House is tired of politics and politicians”, and that “It would have been better for mankind if the American revolutionaries had stopped short of leaving the British Empire.”

With the graduation of Debate Manager Robert E. Hart, the Council enters the present term with Malcolm S. Stevenson as President and Richard Gott as Manager.

Music

Another full year of Bowdoin music is already underway. Professor Tillotson was the assisting artist at the concert by the famed Curtis String Quartet on February 3. Both he and Mrs. Tillotson will assist at the Portland Symphony Orchestra concert on March 8. They will play the Mozart double piano concerto in E flat. The Vielle Trio appears May 9 in a recital of ancient instruments.

The Glee Club appears at North Conway, N.H. on February 19; with Westbrook Junior College in Portland on February 26; in a joint Brunswick concert with the Pembroke College Glee Club; in joint concerts at Wheelock College and Bradford Junior College, March 11 and 12; at Thayer Academy in Braintree, Mass., on March 12. The Club’s spring tour includes concerts at Endicott Junior College in Beverly, Mass., at Pleasantville, N.Y., New Rochelle, N.Y., Syracuse, N.Y. and Philadelphia, Pa., and reaches its climax with the important appearance at Town Hall in New York City on March 23. Some other concerts are likely before the Club closes its season with the annual Bowdoin Night with the Boston Symphony Pops on May 19.

At all of these Glee Club concerts, the internationally known Meddiebempsters will render several numbers. This double quartet of sprightly entertaining singers hope to participate in a contest between several similar organizations from about six colleges which is now being planned for a spring date in Boston.

The usual series of Musical Chapel Services, Simpson Sound System evenings, Brass Ensemble Recitals, Student Recitals, recorded and live broadcasts by Bowdoin-on-the-Air round out the year's diversified program.

Dramatics

The Bowdoin Masque and Gown launched its 1948-49 season with a presentation of a tryout play, Beware the Brave, by Edwin L. Verguson '39. The show was produced with central staging, arena style, in the Moulton Union lounge. The popular “whodun-it”, Ten Little Indians by Agatha Christie, was produced in Memorial Hall for the Christmas Houseparties. The Fifteenth Annual student-written One Act Play Contest promises to be the peak of this year's productions. As usual, cash prizes and an “Oscar” will be awarded to the undergraduates having the best plays, which will be presented on March 7.

The judges for the One Act Play Contest include: Miss Helen Varney, former art teacher in the Brunswick schools and active for many years in the Brunswick Dramatic Club, Mr. Philip S. Wilder '23, Assistant to the President and also active in local dramatics and Mr. John Sweet, of the English Department and formerly a professional actor.

It was a difficult task for the judges to determine which three or four plays should be produced from a field of eighteen manuscripts submitted by fourteen students. The final 'scripts chosen were written by; Jose de Tejada, a foreign student sponsored by the Bowdoin Plan, Peter T. Poor '50, recently elected President of the Dramatic Club and Thomas J. N. Juko '51, a newcomer to the competition.

Two of Poor's plays are to be produced, one a dramatization of Robert Frost's Death of the Hired Man. Juko's presentation will dramatize Coleridge's Rime of the Ancient Mariner. Juko's second play received honorable mention. Conflicting loyalties in a Parisian family during the German occupation is the theme of Tejada's show.

It is hoped that a plan may be arranged to read or produce for the campus audience some of the fourteen other plays submitted to the contest. Seven from all of the plays reviewed were considered unusually well written, seven mediocre and only four unsatisfactory.

Judges for the plays in production on March 7 in Memorial Hall will be Mrs. Mildred Thalheimer, dramatic coach at Brunswick High School, Professor Robert P. T. Coffin and Mr. William C. Root of the faculty.

Phi Beta Kappa

Four who received their degrees February 5 and five undergraduates have been elected to membership in Phi Beta Kappa, Alpha of Maine, and were initiated at exercises in Hubbard Hall on February 11. The elections were announced at the regular daily chapel service by Professor Nathan D. II, secretary of the chapter.

The graduate group includes: James T. Gourdouros '46 of Saco, Robert E. Hart '49 of Bangor, Roger L. Kevnin '49 of Rockville Center, N.Y. and Sherman D. Spector '50 of Portland. Kevnin, who graduated cum laude with honors in English, has just been appointed Teaching Fellow in English for the Spring semester. The other three men also graduated cum laude, Gourdouros receiving honors in Government and Spector high honors in History. The undergraduate group includes: Hayden B. Goldberg '49 of Gardiner, Richard A. Maxwell '48 of Biddeford, Harlan B. Peabody Jr. '50 of Providence, R.I., Earle G. Ramsey '49 of Bath and Dana P. Ripley '50 of Damariscotta. Three other students, Keith Dowden '49 of New York, N. Y., Stillman P. Hilton '48 of Winchester, Mass. and John Roscoe Hupper '50 of New York, N.Y. were elected to Phi Beta Kappa earlier in their courses, as was Charles W. Carruthers '50 of Brunswick who graduated February 5 cum laude with honors in Physics, and is serving as Teaching Fellow in that subject.

Speaker at the public meeting following the initiation banquet was the distinguished naval historian, Robert G. Albion Litt. D. of the class of 1918, Professor of History at Princeton, whose subject was “America and the Sea — Past and Present.”

Sailing

The age old sport of sailing, though dating back to the gay nineties in a few colleges, first blossomed into a major activity of the Ivy League in the late 1920's. In 1935, M.I.T. embarked on an ambitious program, building forty dinghies and an elaborate boathouse. Shortly thereafter, Brown University followed with a similar program. The “Tech” dinghies have since become a familiar sight on the Charles River Basin where they dart about in heated competition.

At the outbreak of World War II, twenty-eight eastern colleges were actively competing for more than a dozen major trophies under the auspices of the Inter-Collegiate Yacht Racing Association.

Founded in 1939, the Bowdoin Sailing Club became the 29th member of that national organization. Since its inception, the club has faced problems which at times seemed insurmountable. A lack of nearby facilities made the choice of racing teams by merit impractical and practice impossible. Though no one questioned the desirability of sailing at Bowdoin, the natural tendency to consider Mere Point and Casco Bay as the obvious location for such activities aroused anxious fear among many seasoned sailors. And rightly so, for with its treacherous tides and smoky sou'westers, the open ocean was far from safe for the little dinghy type sailboats that had become standard among the colleges.

In 1947, however, an excellent place was discovered in the basin of the New Meadows River, about half way between Brunswick and Bath. A dam eliminated tides and currents, and gentle sloping hills on each side provided the lake with a gentle but steady breeze.

Mr. Walter C. (Jack) Wood, Director of Sailing at M.I.T. and an official of the Inter-Collegiate Yacht Racing Association, described the pine rimmed lake as unsurpassed by any college on the Atlantic Coast and declared that no college possessed the season’s activities. Several members of the faculty and student body are thinking of buying boats which will be for their private use, but loaned to the College for regattas.

Today, with over eighty members in the national association, Bowdoin is proud to maintain its reputation as a maritime college and to show her continued support for the traditions of the sea.

The Turner Fund

The recent untimely death of Frances Skiffeld Smith, wife of Lawrence W. Smith ’13, has brought to the College much earlier than had been anticipated the bequest known as the Solon E. and Lida Skiffeld Turner Fund in memory of George Lincoln Skiffeld of the Class of 1913. The principal of the Fund, which was set up in trust several years ago, amounts to about $700,000 and is the largest bequest in Bowdoin’s history. The income only may be used but that use is unrestricted. President Sills has made it known that the income will probably be used to offset the declining tuition income due to the reduction in enrollment and in some measure to meet the necessity of raising salaries. This magnificent addition to college resources is welcomed as a supplement to the Sesquicentennial Fund and as a further evidence of the close ties existing between the town and the College.

Bowdoin-on-the-Air

A letter to the editor from John Sweet, Faculty Advisor, tells of a vigorous year for Bowdoin-on-the-Air. With the help and stimulus gained from the generous gift of the Class of 1924, a new studio is in operation in the Union. Plans for equipment are not yet complete and there is some thought being given to a new location, possibly in one of the new college buildings, when the nature of the broadcasts and the character of the equipment has been determined. The 72 members function through a council which meets weekly to prepare and revise scripts for the broadcasts over Station WGAN at 12:30 p.m. on Sundays. Tape recordings of student broadcasts of last fall’s football games have been made and are available for use at college and alumni club meetings.

Broadcast programs have included the Inter-Fraternity Sing, three on-the-spot interviews with notable campus visitors, appearances of foreign students and several Middlebempster shows. Bowdoin-on-the-Air is a lusty extra-curricular activity ranking with that of the Orient, the Glee Club and the Masque and Gown, all of which are cooperating to improve the work and the publicity results.

Alumni are urged to listen to the weekly programs and to write their ideas, suggestions, advice and to send questions about the work of Bowdoin-on-the-Air.

1950 Institute

President Sills has announced that Modern Literature is to be the topic and theme of Bowdoin’s 15th Institute which is to be held in the spring of 1950. Prof. Orren C. Hormell, Chairman of the faculty committee, reports the committee’s recommendation that the lectures be concentrated in a shorter period than was the case during the last Institute. The committee also suggests that the emphasis be placed on the creative and the critical rather than on the scholarly side and that the speakers be practicing creative writers.

As has been the custom in previous Institutes, lectures will be open to the public and speakers will meet students in round table conferences. The College intends that each student shall have the opportunity of attending two Institutes during his college course.

waters better suited to dinghy sailing. Mr. James A. Gillies jr., President of the Bath Box Co., has generously offered the use of his property on the Old Bath Road for a landing place and headquarters.

While making careful plans for the procurement of a fleet at home, the club could not neglect its commitments abroad and, as was announced in the November ALUMNUS a Bowdoin team won the Associate Championship of New England for the first time. During the fall season, the club successfully sailed against Middlebury, Colby, Amherst, Wesleyan, Williams and many others.

At their meeting January 15, the Governing Boards of the College voted $2,000 for the purchase of five sailing dinghies and the all-important safety launch. A twelve foot modified Class X dinghy designed by John G. Alden, Boston Marine architect and built by Bluenose Yacht Building Ltd. of Halifax, was chosen. The boat, a handsome lapstreak cat, is considered one of the best designs available. They are to be delivered early in April.

A number of meets have been scheduled for this spring, both at home and away, beginning with a dual team race with Harvard here on April 17. Other meets will embrace all the “little New Englands” at least twice and many of the larger colleges once. Plans also call for a comprehensive program of instruction in sailing and seamanship, with racing and recreational sailing rounding out

Bowdoin In The News

Six Alumni Whose Headlines Caught The Editor's Eye

The adjournment, sine die, of the 80th Congress marked the retirement of WALLACE H. WHITE JR. '99 from a long and distinguished career of public service. A rousing tribute by his colleagues was paid to the Senator who had served the House and Senate for 32 years. He has established himself as an authority in many fields, notably communications and Merchant Marine. Together with his grandfather, Senator William Pierce Frye '50, Senator White has concluded a period of over three-quarters of a century's service to the people of Maine and the United States. Although maintaining a home in Auburn, Senator White plans to spend much time in Washington.

From over 100 candidates considered, by Gov. Bradford of Massachusetts and an advisory committee of 15 members, for appointment to the Youth Service Board, WILLIAM A. MACCORMICK '12 was selected as chairman for that organization. The Board is designed to take over the work of the Division of Juvenile Training in the Department of Public Welfare and that part of the program of the Division of Child Guardianship which has to do with delinquents. MacCormick, Orient Editor-in-Chief, Track Manager, Tennis Captain and President of the YMCA in College, has been in Boys Work for over 36 years in Maine, New Jersey and Massachusetts.

With the election of PAUL H. DOUGLAS '13 of Illinois, Bowdoin still has two Senators. While at Bowdoin, Douglas was a Phi Beta Kappa man as well as a varsity football star and recipient of various awards and in 1938 the Bowdoin Prize, which he received jointly with Harvey D. Gibson '02. As Professor of Economics at Chicago University, he gained international recognition as an authority on the theory of wages. His political career started with a position in the Chicago City Council from which he resigned in May 1942 to enter the Marine Corps. He advanced through the ranks to grade of Lieutenant Colonel and was twice wounded and decorated for bravery while in the Pacific theater.

For 25 years with the New York Telephone Company and more recently Assistant Vice-President of American Telephone and Telegraph Company in charge of labor relations, SANFORD B. COUSINS '20 has been elected Vice-President and General Manager of the New England Telephone and Telegraph Company. Past President of the Alumni Council, Cousins is living at 46 Mount Vernon Street in Boston. His office address, is 50 Oliver Street.

At the age of 41, DONALD W. WEBBER '27 was appointed the youngest Justice ever to attain that position in the Maine Superior Court. Upon graduation from Bowdoin, where in spite of his comparatively small stature, he was active in both football and hockey, he received his law degree from Harvard Law School in 1939 and joined his father, George C. Webber '95 in the practice of law. During the war, Webber served in the Labor Relations Department of the Navy. Prior to his present position, he has served as counsel for the Maine Legislative Research Committee and as a member of the Board of Bar Examinations.

Surviving not only the preliminary exams in Maine, but also the final tests given to candidates from all New England, RICHARD A. WILEY '49 has been chosen one of the four Rhodes Scholars from this area. He is Bowdoin's fourteenth to receive this distinction. Wiley, who was graduated last June, summa cum laude, was a varsity track man and is now at Harvard Law School. He plans to sail on the Queen Mary in September with over a score of freshmen Rhodes Scholars for two years of intensive study at Oxford. His present address is 25 Coolidge Hill Road, Cambridge 38, Mass.

The College Library has recently come into possession of the letter and enclosure herewith reproduced. In the handwriting of Bowdoin's second president the letter shows that one hundred thirty years ago the College was as pressed for funds in proportion to its limited income as it is today and that then, as now, was seeking help.

Brunswick, Jan. 4, 1819

Samuel Bradley, Esq.

Dear Sir:

Allow me the liberty of addressing you on the following subject. The funds of Bowdoin College are such, at present, as not to justify the choice of a professor of languages. Vacancy in a department so important is sensibly felt to the injury of the Institution. A petition for aid will probably be presented to the Legislature of this state at the ensuing session, by a committee appointed for that purpose. This, Sir, is respectfully to request you to give such support to the measure, as, in your judgment, may be justified by the character and wants of the seminary. With this is connected an account of our funds and expenditures.

I am, Sir, with much consideration, your obedient servant,

Jesse Appleton

Backward

The letter fits neatly into the historical pattern.

Samuel Bradley was a distinguished citizen of the state whose influence with the Massachusetts legislature President Appleton was trying to enlist in behalf of the College at a critical moment in the history of the College and the State. It is not unlikely that the president wrote letters of similar purport to other influential men. At this time, the separation between Maine and Massachusetts was impending. Bowdoin, chartered by Massachusetts, was a beneficiary of an annual stipend from the proceeds of the bank tax which was scheduled to continue until 1824. President Appleton must have been concerned at this time, both with reference to the continuance of the Massachusetts appropriation and as to additional funds.

It was pretty well understood that the proposed act of separation would require the new state to assume that particular appropriation but future appropriations might be loaded with conditions unfavorable to the College. Massachusetts had the right to amend Bowdoin's charter. Would Massachusetts surrender this power to Maine?

Maine was largely settled by people who could not make a living in Massachusetts. These northeast Yankees had little taste for the sacred codfish. They felt that Massachusetts, when it looked down east, looked down its nose. Massachusetts continued to be Federalist long after that party was nationally defunct. Maine was Democratic and remained so until the Civil War. Suppose the Maine Democrats should get the power to amend the College charter and then should make the institution public instead of private, as the Democrats in New Hampshire had tried to do with Dartmouth?

President Appleton was a staunch Federalist. One difficulty which must have been in his mind, at the time when he wrote the letter, was happily resolved a few months later by the insertion in the act of separation of an amendment preserving the College from any amendments to its charter unless the Maine and Massachusetts legislatures should concur. This amendment was the result of a trip to Boston by Nathaniel Kinsman, a Federalist lawyer in Portland. He was not an alumnus; but was an ar-

OCDENT friend of Bowdoin from which his only son had graduated in 1816. He enlisted the aid of Senator Lyman, an influential Federalist of western Massachusetts where the sister college, Williams, was located. The spark plug of the separation movement was William King, an influential Democrat living in Bath, who was later to become the first governor of the new state. At this time he had little use for Bowdoin, although later he became one of its trustees and its very good friend. In 1815, the Federalist attorney for the College had plastered an attachment on all King's property, when the treasurer of the College whom King had bonded, defaulted. King regarded this as a political move and a personal insult. He smarted to get at the College, and, therefore, at first opposed the Lyman amendment; but he withdrew his opposition, doubtless foreseeing that a compromise might be worked out after the separation.

The Act of Separation was passed in June, 1819, adopted by the people of Maine the following fall, duly proclaimed by the Governor of Massachusetts; and the state entered the union March 4th, 1820. King, as Chairman of the Constitutional Convention, in the fall of 1819 was instrumental in inserting into the Constitution of the state a prohibition against appropriating money for any literary institution unless the legislature has the right to grant, alter, limit and restrain the powers of the institution.

President Appleton died Nov. 12, 1819, between the time when he wrote this letter and the time when the State constitution was adopted. His death opened the way for the election of President Allen, a Democrat who had been president of the short-lived, state-chartered Dartmouth University.

The funds which President Appleton was seeking early in 1819 from the Massachusetts legislature were produced during the next few years by the Maine legislature, at the cost of Bowdoin's giving up its Massachusetts protection; but the surrender was nullified by the federal district court in the 1830's and Bowdoin has ever since remained, and doubtless will continue to be, an institution whose charter cannot be changed without the concurrence of the legislature of both states and the governing boards of the College.

Books

The appearance of three books on Nathaniel Hawthorne with another one to come out in the spring does not necessarily denote a revival of interest in the Salem maestro. Hawthorne has been an object of interest to scholars almost since his death. This is due not only to his preeminence in American literature, but also because of his personality which has been interpreted in almost as many ways as there are biographies of him. Hawthorne's early years, from his birth until 1837 when Twice told Tales was published and he appeared more in the public eye, have always been a source of mystery to biographers and, therefore, the cause of a great deal of theory and romancing. Hence the many interpretations of him.

The noteworthy fact about the two new biographies by Randall Stewart and Robert Cantwell is that they present Hawthorne as a normal man whose only remarkable characteristic was his genius as a writer. To this end both reviewers have devoted several years attempting to dispel the myths which have grown up around Hawthorne's childhood and early years and who has tried to show that he led the life of a reticent and somewhat introspective man, these two new biographies are welcome indeed.

The blame for the story of Hawthorne's strange childhood, his solitary mode of living, and particularly the complete withdrawal from society of his mother after her husband's death (an example which encouraged Hawthorne to do likewise) must be placed on Miss Elizabeth Peabody. When Julian Hawthorne was writing his biography of his father, he and Miss Peabody have devoted several years to help and used her reminiscences to start the legends which have persisted ever since. Family letters which must have been available to him, but not to subsequent biographers, indicate quite clearly that Miss Peabody was using her over-active imagination in "remembering" events that stretched back over half a century. She did not know Hawthorne until 1837 except perhaps briefly when they were children, and her story should have been subjected to the closest scrutiny and compared with family documents. Every biographer since Julian Hawthorne's Nathaniel Hawthorne and His Wife have accepted these Peabody reminiscences and made their interpretations accordingly. Everyone, that is, until Professor Stewart and Mr. Cantwell.

Professor Stewart in his admirable biography has made full use of family letters and documents which depict the young Hawthorne as a normal boy, enjoying the usual social activities of his time, both when he was growing up and when he was a student at Bowdoin. The chapter on his years at college gives an excellent picture of Bowdoin as it was a century and a half ago and at the same time shows Hawthorne as both gregarious and convivial. It was while he was at college that Hawthorne made up his mind to become a writer. The period from 1825, when he graduated from Bowdoin, until 1837, when Twice Told Tales appeared, has been known as the "solitary years". Professor Stewart has shown that during these years Hawthorne traveled over New England in the summers and maintained the usual social contacts. He did not visit friends and relatives. He also spent a great deal of time in reading and writing, for it was during these years that he perfected his art and style—a natural occupation for one desiring to be a writer and not necessarily proof that he was a recluse.

The remainder of the biography which covers the years of Hawthorne's more public life and therefore the better known, Mr. Stewart covers without differing in any marked degree from previous accounts. Having edited Hawthorne's love letters, he is able to go into more truthful and realistic detail about his love affair and marriage with Sophia Peabody and his early interpretations. No reader can lose interest in him as a novelist even in his later years more plausible than has been the case previously.

If one were to offer any criticism of this book, it can only be that the biography is too brief. No scholar today is better fitted than Randall Stewart to write the life of Hawthorne: and if it is the case that Mr. Stewart has not included more, nor does he indulge in any literary criticism during the course of the life. However, his admirable and scholarly review of Hawthorne's writings as a whole in the concluding chapter of the book more than make up for the lack of literary analysis earlier and is a method which has the advantage of diminishing the distraction with which literary criticism often interrupts the biography of a writer.

If Professor Stewart's biography is too brief for the complete satisfaction of a student of Hawthorne, Mr. Cantwell's account of Hawthorne's life up to the publication of The Scarlet Letter is, to his credit and that of his method, both complete and thorough. He has written what is really a Dictionary of American Biography about Hawthorne's relatives and friends. His research has been enormous and he has added a great deal of information about the earlier Hawthornes including the novelist's father, as well as the early life of Sophia Peabody, particularly her Cuban trip. All of this is intensely interesting, but it distracts the reader's attention from Hawthorne himself.

Mr. Cantwell has added a new interpretation to the many already submitted—the theory that Hawthorne was a 19th Century F.B.I. agent of the government. "He was forever visiting scenes where espionage was occurring or where violence of some sort was threatened or where smugglers were active." His argument is based only on conjecture and coincidence and has nothing tangible to support it. He will find very few students of Hawthorne to agree with him, and while his theory makes interesting reading, its flimsy basis on fact diminishes its effect.

His chapter on Hawthorne's college years, which will be of interest to Bowdoin readers, emphasizes Hawthorne's teachers and fellow-students and gives a vivid account of the courses, expenses of a college education, and Brunswick itself. It is probably the fullest account of Hawthorne's years at Bowdoin that has yet been published.

Robert Cantwell, like Professor Stewart, pictures Hawthorne as leading "an active and vigorous life". In addition, he makes him much more of a politician than previous biographers have done. In portraying Hawthorne as a hard-headed and practical politician, he links his political activity with his mysterious government-agent activities.

When Mr. Cantwell has finished his second volume, he will have written the most detailed and lengthy biography of Hawthorne yet to be written. It will undoubtedly start several controversies over portions of his interpretation and some, at least, of his theories. But he has written an interesting book, and he has given us a great deal of information about Hawthorne's friends and family that could only have been obtained by painstaking research. What is more, the book is at all times readable.

The third book, The Portable Hawthorne, is a selection of short stories, The Scarlet Letter, excerpts from three other novels, and portions from his journals and letters, edited by Mr. Cowley. Mr. Cowley's selections are good and representative in revealing the various aspects of Hawthorne's art, and the editor's essays introducing these selections maintain the reputation of this fine Viking series as an excellent "portable Hawthorne" for the student to use in lieu of bulkier volumes.

MANNING HAWTHORNE

Financing Local Government is one of special interest to Bowdoin alumni and to the entire Bowdoin family because it introduces to them an author possessing conviction, vigor, and scholarship in the vital present-day practical government.

It is a pleasure to welcome Lawrence Pelletier, of the Class of 1936, as a participant in contributing the services of the College and of the Bureau for Research in Municipal Government to the cause of efficient state and local government, not only in Maine but throughout the forty-eight states.

The author stresses the immediate value of an objective study of local financing on the ground that "the most pressing problem facing municipal government today is the need for new sources of revenue." Originally, the data presented in this book were assembled by the author for the Tax Committee of the Maine Municipal Association. The publication of the study is sponsored jointly by the Maine Municipal Association and the Bureau for Research in Municipal Government.

The thesis that the need for new sources of revenue is the most pressing problem facing Maine municipalities is developed and evaluated by the application of assumptions capable of a reasonable degree of proof. Important among such assumptions are:

1. More and better services can be realized only when a more adequate tax base is provided.
2. Local units of government are in desperate need of new sources of revenue. The following proof is offered: (a) Declining value of the dollar. "It is difficult, if not impossible, to make the property tax bear the full impact of inflation." (p. 19) (b) "Citizens insist daily on more and better services from local government," i.e., improved school systems, better trained and more adequately paid teachers, new and expanded services such as social welfare, hospitals and recreation; and capital improvements for highways, schools, and municipal buildings deferred during the depression and world war.
3. Local needs can no longer be financed by the equitable taxation of property.

The author divides the possible sources of additional revenue into three main categories. First, withdrawal of the state from the property tax (Chapter IV). Maine ranks third among the forty-eight states in the high proportion of state revenue derived from property taxation (p. 31). It is recommended that "the state broaden its tax base and relinquish the property tax to the sole use of municipal government."

Second, state financial assistance to municipalities. This category is developed under four sections. (1) Grants-in-Aid; (2) Shared Taxes; (3) The New York State "Moore Plan"; (4) Supplemental Taxes. State aid throughout the nation in 1947 went mainly for education, welfare, and highways, with education receiving almost half the total (p. 37).

In Maine, the objects of state grants include education, highways, and welfare. Combining grants-in-aid and shared taxes we find that in 1947 Maine ranked forty-fifth among the forty-eight states in the total assistance given to local government units.

Under the topic of shared taxes, the author recommends that the basis for sharing the telephone and telegraph taxes be changed and that consideration be given to the sharing of any major tax adopted by the state in the future. He believes, however, that grants-in-aid are to be preferred to shared taxes because they are more stable and because they can be distributed on the basis of local need. The "Moore Plan" for New York represents "the most ambitious program of financial assistance adopted by any state for providing municipalities with an adequate and stable source of revenue" (p. 38).

It is pointed out that a supplemental tax is a supplement to a tax levied and collected by the state which has been adopted by the local unit under the home rule provision that the municipality may designate the rate and determine its use. Its availability for Maine municipalities will depend solely on the adoption by the state of a broader tax base including such taxes as the income or sales levy.

The third category, New Sources of Revenue (Chapter VI, pp. 70-116), contributes most to the practical solution of financing local government.

Five sources of revenue are analyzed and evaluated and the scope and the characteristics of their use are given both in this chapter and in the most valuable appendices, pp. 118-190. The sources are as follows:

1. Service charges.
2. Local payroll-income tax.
3. Sales taxes.
4. Selective sales taxes.
5. Licenses and occupation taxes.

The author objectively weighs each of these sources and applies such tests as productivity, equity, adaptability, administrative costs, feasibility, and economic effect. He courageously ends the consideration of each source with his own frank conclusion.

For large cities, Professor Pelletier recognizes three major sources:

1. Sales tax.
2. Payroll-income tax.

He concludes that for Maine cities the sales tax is not feasible; and that the payroll income tax should not be adopted except in emergencies. He agrees, however, with the Citizens' Tax Committee of the City of Portland that the gross receipts tax is best adapted to local uses in our larger municipalities.

To rural units of government, little can be offered from the new revenue sources except from Grants-in-Aid and direct assumption by the state of local functions.

The author injects a word of caution that the revenue-producing resources of the state are not unlimited. He also reminds us that efficient organization and administration in local government are essential in order that the cities and towns of Maine may reap the benefit of new sources of revenue.

Professor Pelletier's study, Financing Local Government, should be "required reading" for every Maine citizen interested in local government. Furthermore it will be welcomed by all students in the field of municipal research.

AUTHORS

Not members of the Bowdoin family, Messrs. Stewart, Cantwell and Cowley are writers of national repute.

Lawrence Lee Pelletier '36 upon completing his graduate work at Harvard, taught for a short period at the University of Maine. Three years ago Dr. Pelletier was appointed Assistant Professor of Government where he has specialized in municipal research problems. He has served as consultant for the National Resources Planning Board, the U.S. Bureau of the Census, and has been an active and valuable member of the Maine Town and City Managers' Association and the Maine Municipal Association.

The National Municipal Review for February contains an article by Professor Pelletier, dealing with town management and entitled New England Pioneers Again.
Things broke fast in 1940. In June I was graduated from Harvard with a degree in Physics. By October I was a Meteorological Cadet in the Air Force. Then, after five and a half years in the service, I was a civilian again. (He came out a Lt. Col. — H.C.E.)

That brought me to a career crossroad. Physics was too far in the past to return to, and meteorology didn't appeal to me as a lifetime job.

So I decided to draw up a description of the career I'd really like. Some sort of selling was indicated, because I don't like paper work, but do like to move around and talk to people. I wanted freedom of action—a business of my own that didn't require a lot of capital. I didn't want a ceiling on my earnings, nor a slow climb through a seniority system. And, after seeing the inhumanities of war, I felt that if, in addition, I could be of some public service, the job would be just about perfect.

Life insurance, it turned out, was the only field that fitted all these specifications. And that discovery brought me to the question, "Which company?". I began my search by calling on New England Mutual. Six weeks and eight companies later, after exhaustive comparisons, I was back at New England Mutual, taking an intensive training course. After that, I started out on my own in San Francisco, the city of my choice. (He sold over $300,000 of life insurance his first year. H.C.E.)

Today, two and a half years later, I know I chose the right career and the right company. I'm still getting the finest training available, and I'm at home in "The best paid profession in the world." My income is in exact proportion to the time and effort I put in. And best of all, I enjoy the deep satisfaction of knowing I'm helping others—helping them achieve that vitally important goal, financial security.

James M. Banghart, San Francisco

Here's another career story that'll interest college men. H.C.E.

Gradsuties of our Home Office training courses, practically all of them new to the life insurance business, are selling at a rate which produces average first-year incomes of $5000. The total yearly income on such sales, with renewal commissions added, will average $5700.

Facts such as these helped James Banghart solve his career problem. If you'd like to know more, write Mr. H. C. Chaney, Director of Agencies, New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, 501 Boylston Street, Boston 17, Massachusetts.

These Bowdoin men are now New England Mutual representatives:

REVIEWERS

MANNING HAWTHORNE '30, Director of Plans Publications with the American Optical Company, has taught American literature in various places including six years at the University of Maine. At present he is working with others on the correspondence of his great-grandfather, Nathaniel Hawthorne '25, and with Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana on 'The Friendship Between Hawthorne and Longfellow.'

OREN C. HORMELL, a member of the Bowdoin faculty for thirty-eight years, Professor of Government since 1927, founder and director of Bowdoin's Bureau of Research in Municipal Government, through his writings and active participation in both local and national problems has come to be recognized as one of the outstanding authorities in this country on municipal government.

NOTES

It is a rare occasion indeed when a doctoral thesis arouses enough general interest to be discussed in the 'New Yorker.' The December 25, number of that magazine prints an interview with Allan F. Hubbell '35, instructor at Columbia University, who has just had published an exhaustive doctoral dissertation entitled 'The Pronunciation of English in New York City.' The conclusions reached are in part an analysis of several hundred phonograph recordings of New York speech made during the last ten years.

"I was thrown out of some of the best houses on Brooklyn Heights," states Dr. Hubbell, "but in the end I got what I needed."

It might interest the reader to learn that the pronunciation "foist" was not originally "Brooklynese" but probably a survival of perfectly respectable seventeenth century English.

Hoffmann: Author of the Tales (the basis of Offenbach's opera Tales of Hoffmann) by Harvey W. Hewitt-Thayer '35, former Chairman of the Modern Languages Department at Princeton, has been published recently by the Princeton University Press. This important work will be reviewed in a later issue of the ALUMNUS.

Dun and Bradstreet, Inc. has just printed a pamphlet by its Vice-President Roy A. Fouke '19 entitled 'A Study of the Theory of Corporate Net Profits' together with a series of financial tables based on the Ratios for the year 1917.

This study does not concern itself directly with the relationship between wages and selling prices but is concerned "primarily with a concept, the concept of corporate net profits, the assumptions of accountancy on which that concept is based, how the mathematical figure of net profit is determined in a world of constantly fluctuating dollar values, the relationship between the increase in real wages and in real profits, problems of applied mathematics in accountancy, and the economic functions of net profit in an incentive economy."

This study stresses the importance of higher mathematics in our civilization today, not only in the metaphysical realm of philosophy but also in the practical and applied fields of science and business.

The Books Editor who majored in Romance Languages — and who could never understand the meaningless curves of "supply and demand" in his unintelligible college texts is grateful to have discovered after many years that economic studies can be both readable and stimulating.

In Medieval Studies in Honor of Jeremiah Denis Matthias Ford, published by the Harvard University Press, Professor Edward B. Ham '22 has contributed a paper entitled 'A Postscript to Textual Criticism.'

Dr. Ford, Smith Professor of French and Spanish Literature, Emeritus, received from Bowdoin in 1955 the honorary degree of Lit.D.

Alumni Clubs

ALBANY

Assistant Director of Admissions, Paul Hazelon '42, was the guest at an informal meeting of the Albany Bowdoin Club on January 4. Members gathered at the home of Convenor James Colton '31. The evening was spent in discussing ways and means of interesting schoolboys of the area.

BOSTON

The Bowdoin Club of Boston had a New Look meeting at the University Club on November 29. Speakers for the evening were: Nat Kendrick, Mal Morrell and Adam Walsh. The reunion aspect of the meeting was featured with all present having a chance to spend time with the representatives of the College.

Several Barber Shop Quartets were imported to help out with the singing and the whole club had an opportunity to get into the act by making up their own quartets or joining in on the community singing.

It was a completely informal meeting with stress on reunion and short speeches. There was a short business discussion when President Harold Davie presented the new by-laws to the Club. One hundred seventy-five attended in spite of poor weather conditions. The Bowdoin Club of Boston invites members of its brother associations in other cities to attend its next meeting which will be held in February. The Secretary is John C. Gazlay '34. His address is 4 Harbor View Drive, Hingham, Mass.

CLEVELAND

Twenty members and several guests, including a high school principal and the superintendent of schools, met at the University Club on January 21 for the annual dinner of the Cleveland Bowdoin Club. President James Berry '25 introduced as speakers Director of Admissions H. H. Shaw '36 and Coach Adam Walsh and led the informal discussion of Bowdoin's effort to interest Ohio schoolboys. As a result of Secretary Piper's work, the two guests from the College had spent a busy two days visiting schools in the city and suburban towns. The meeting ended with the showing of football pictures.

New officers elected are: President, Donald McKay Smith '35; Vice-President, John B. Hickox '34; Treasurer, William S. Burton '37; Secretary and Council Member, William S. Piper jr. '31.

HARTFORD

The Bowdoin Club of Connecticut met at the Hartford University Club on Monday, January 17. Ninety-two members and their ladies attended. President Robert Hall '05 presided and gave a report of progress on the Sesquicentennial Fund urging club members to improve their participation. He introduced Professor Herbert R. Brown, who gave a sprightly and entertaining account of campus doings and the state of the College. He mentioned Faculty changes in recent years but stated that Bowdoin enjoyed a relatively stable teaching personnel. Coach Adam Walsh reviewed the athletic situation and urged alumni to continue their help in locating deserving applicants for admission. He showed football movies at the close of the meeting.

New officers elected are: President, Fred D. Wish jr. '13; Vice-President, Willis G. Parsons '23; Secretary-Treasurer, David A. James '43. The new secretary’s address is 9 Arnoldale Road, West Hartford, Conn.

LOS ANGELES

Guests of President Sherman Shumway ’17, ten members of the Bowdoin Club of Northern California, met for cocktails and dinner at the Jonathan Club in Los Angeles on February 7. The guest of honor and chief speaker was Harry Palmer ’04, Overseer of the College and chairman of the special gifts committee of the Sesquicentennial Fund. He reported in entertaining fashion what was going on at the College and mentioned the problems involved in trying to maintain Bowdoin’s traditionally high standards. Outlining the capital needs of the College, Mr. Palmer reported on the progress of the Fund to date and the plan to break ground for the new class room building in June. Club members gave definite assurance of their support, not only in enlisting alumni support but also in securing the interest and support of non-Bowdoin friends in the area. The annual meeting of the club is planned for the near future.

MINNEAPOLIS

On January 10, ten members of the Bowdoin Club of Minnesota held a dinner meeting at the Minneapolis Athletic Club. President Harry G. Cross ’15 and Secretary Nathan A. Cobb ’26 arranged the meeting. There was a long discussion of ways and means to increase interest in Bowdoin among local schoolboys. Mr. Hazelton agreed to return later in the year to visit schools of the area.

NEW YORK

President Roy A. Foulke greeted 125 members at the annual meeting of the Bowdoin Club of New York, held at the University Club on January 28. He introduced Prof. C. Wilbert Snow ’07, formerly Lieutenant Governor of Connecticut and for many years a member of the Wesleyan faculty, who spoke on Education and Democracy. The chief speaker of the evening was Pres. Kenneth C. M. Sils. He delivered his customary talk on the State of the College in an absorbingly interesting way and later answered questions concerning the College and its problems.

It was reported that advance sale of tickets for the Town Hall appearance of the Glee Club on March 23 was sufficient to underwrite expenses. Members pledged their efforts to further the sale of tickets that a capacity audience be present.

Officers elected are: President, Roliston G. Woodbury ’22; Vice-Presidents, Boyd W. Bartlett ’17, M. Lawrence Willson ’21, Waldo R. Flinn ’22, James B. Dunleavy ’23 and John B. Stafford ’25; Secretary, Carleton S. Connor ’36; Treasurer, John E. Hooke ’37. Upon the completion of Ralph Barrett’s term as member of the Alumni Council in June, Richard C. Van Varick ’32 will be the club’s representative member.

PHILADELPHIA

The thirty-fifth anniversary of the Philadelphia Bowdoin Club was celebrated at a banquet held at the University Club on January 29. Over one hundred alumni, wives, mothers, fathers and prospective students attended, a record for the Club.

Charles Cary ’10, retiring president, opened the meeting with a suggestion of a motto for the coming year, “Let this be a year when white pines rise up because we alumni push them up”. He introduced the three guest speakers of the evening, President Sils, Adam Walsh and Director of Admissions Bill Shaw ’36. The Club was especially happy that Mrs. Sils and Mrs. Shaw were able to accompany their husbands to the Philadelphia meeting. The messages brought from the College were of interest and a real inspiration. President Sils brought all in attendance up to date on the state of the College.

New officers elected were: President, Edward H. Snow ’14; Vice-President, William P. Drake ’36; Secretary, David H. Lawrence ’44; Assistant Secretary, Delbert R. Nash ’50. Frank Evans ’10 was re-elected Alumni Council Representative. Plans were discussed concerning the coming concert of the College Glee Club which will take place at the Irvine Auditorium of the University of Pennsylvania March 25.

PITTSBURGH

Seventeen were present at the Pittsburgh Bowdoin Club dinner held at the HYP Club on January 22.

We are proud of this attendance in view of the fact that but 21 men reside in the Pittsburgh District. Charlie Pope travelled 125 miles over the mountains to be present. The foregoing were not only good examples of Bowdoin loyalty but proved the esteem held for our guests, Adam Walsh and Bill Shaw.

The College Athletic program, followed by football movies was presented by Adam Walsh and the rest of the story of Bowdoin today was amply supplied by Bill Shaw. We’re indebted both for a pleasant evening. Fred Willey ’17 spoke on behalf of the Sesquicentennial Fund. Tom Braman ’29 and Al Hurrell ’20 re-elected themselves President and Secretary, respectively, for the year. Bowdoin men anywhere near Pittsburgh are invited to make their presence known to Albert E. Hurrell, 502 Walnut Road, Ben Avon, Pittsburgh 2, Pa.

PORTLAND

Under the leadership of Secretary Stan Low '35, the Portland Bowdoin Club rallied a capacity house to hear and see the stirring presentation of Handel's Messiah in Portland City Hall Auditorium on Sunday, December 5. Professor Tillotson wielded the baton in directing the Portland Symphony Orchestra and nearly 300 voices of the Bowdoin and Colby Glee Clubs and the Radcliffe and Brunswick Choral Societies. Valuable publicity was given the College.

PROVIDENCE

President Frank Burke '29 greeted nearly forty members when the Bowdoin Club of Rhode Island met at the Providence University Club on January 27. Following a brief account of his school work in the area by Assistant Director of Admissions, Paul Hazelton '42, President Sills gave an interesting talk on the state of the College. The President took his hearers into his confidence and answered many questions. Swimming Coach Robert Miller and Prof. Athern P. Daggett '25, who is on leave at Brown University, were present and responded briefly. Plans are underway for the annual drive in the spring. Secretary George A. Laubenstein '42 urges Bowdoin men who have recently come to Rhode Island to contact him at 210 Waterman Street, Providence.

SPRINGFIELD

On January 19, over fifty members, prospective students and Bowdoin fathers gathered at the Sheraton Hotel in Springfield for the midwinter meeting of the Western Massachusetts Bowdoin Club. H. Philip Chapman '30 presided. Director of Admissions Hubert S. Shaw '36 outlined the plan for alumni participation in the screening of applicants and told of his nearby school visits, several of which had been arranged by club officers. Coach Adam Walsh described what the Department of Physical Education endeavored to accomplish and showed football pictures.

Francis W. Gorham '24 was elected President and Joseph C. Caldwell '47, Secretary-Treasurer. The retiring president, H. Philip Chapman '30 was chosen the club's member of the Alumni Council.

ST. PETERSBURG

The St. Petersburg Bowdoin Club held a meeting on January 19. The group met for luncheon at the Soreno Hotel. Members present included; George Carmichael '97, Fred Fessenden '95, Doc Lincoln '91, Convener, Frank Leslie M'01, Charles Parkhill '46 who had been formerly working in Southern California, Albert Ridley '90, W. R. "Cos" Smith '90 and James Tarbox '14. Tentative plans were made for another meeting to be held the last of February when it is hoped more Bowdoin men will be in attendance.

WILMINGTON

Spark-plugged by William K. Simonton '43 and Frank C. Evans '10, the Bowdoin men in and near Wilmington, Delaware have held two meetings. Eighteen of the twenty-five in the local group have attended these gatherings at the University Club with Bowdoin parents and friends of the College or guests. Football and Maine movies were shown and the evenings devoted to informal discussions. Another meeting is planned for March 14. Although some are not able to attend the Philadelphia meetings, it has been decided not to organize a separate Wilmington Club.

Worcester

Thirty-three assembled for the year's first meeting of the Worcester Bowdoin Club at the Worcester Club, one Oak Street, at 6 P.M. on January 18. J. Harold Stubb's '26, President of the Club, presided. Due to excellent work by telephone of the members of the committee, James M. Keniston '24, Willard Phelps '33, John P. Donaldson '44 and John R. Nissen '44, chairman (after the initial notice was sent by secretary) a considerable number of Bowdoin faces new to our meetings were present.

Bill Shaw '36, Director of Admissions, extended greetings from the College; told of the plans for reduction in enrollment and stressed need for ascertaining a boy's exact status, in terms of required courses, before trying to sell the College to him or to the College. The Admissions Office is now able to give much more prompt and definite assurances to applicants at interviews. He reported that almost no military service men are now asking for admission.

Adam Walsh, Coach of Football, spoke of the excellent work by the White Key, the decisions of the Boards to start the new classroom building and to hold no summer session in 1949. He stressed the advantage that still held for a small college; described the intramural round-robin athletic contests with the liberal arts colleges of New England, gave a summary of athletic doings and prospects, including good words for golf and tennis, for fencing and wrestling and for the Sailing Club. He said we should try to keep ahead of our competitors and mentioned the scholarship grants from Mr. Verney for use at Bates and the income from $75,000 that could be used for athletic scholarships at Colby. The evening ended with informal discussions and showing of football pictures.

1886 The College has been informed that JAMES W. CALDERWOOD died in 1947. More information has not been obtainable.

1890 FRANK EDWARD SIMPSON M.D., dermatologist and specialist in radium treatment, died December 15 at the Wesley Memorial Hospital in Chicago, at the age of 79. He was born in Saco where he attended public schools before entering Bowdoin. While in college, he was leader of the College Glee Club and a member of Psi Upsilon and Phi Beta Kappa fraternities. He received his medical degree from Northwestern University and later studied in Berlin, Paris and Vienna. He practiced in Chicago from 1897 until his retirement two years ago. He was Professor of Skin and Venereal Diseases at Chicago Polyclinic for ten years and Clinical Professor of Dermatology at Northwestern Medical School. He served as attending dermatologist at Cook County, Wesley Memorial and Polyclinic Hospitals. A former president of the American Radium Society, he was the author of two books on radium treatment and a contributor to scientific publications. His widow, Mrs. Beryl Simpson, and three sons survive.

1893 WADSWORTH SPRING died in a Lewiston hospital, on September 6, where he was a patient for one day. Born June 16, 1869 at New Gloucester, he prepared for Bowdoin at Bridgton Academy. His college fraternity was Theta Delta Chi. He had spent thirty-five years of his life in the shoe business at Norway. Two stepsons and a brother survive.

1894 WILLIAM EUGENE CURRIER M.D. died at his Leominster, Mass. home on November 23. He was 77 years of age. Born in Lynn, he prepared for Bowdoin at Lees- ter Academy. From Bowdoin, he went to Harvard Medical School. A member of the staff of Leominster Hospital for 25 years, he retired a month before his death because of ill health. He formerly served the city as school physician. His fraternity was Alpha Delta Phi.

1896 GEORGE THEODORE ORWAY, 75, a former Boston and New York investment banker, died December 2 in Franklin, N. H. He was born in Boston and prepared for Bowdoin at Phillips Exeter Academy. As an undergraduate, he was captain of his class football team, manager of the varsity, football team, assistant manager of the Orient and class president. His fraternity was Alpha Delta Phi. From Bowdoin he went to Harvard Law School from which he graduated in 1899. He had been associated with the Federal Utilities Bank, New York City; was a partner in Bertram and Grimson Company; and vice president of the J. G. White Company, also of New York City. He had also been connected with Parry, Coffin and Burns Company and Hooper, Kimball and Williams Company, both of Boston, and with the former Curtis Stephenson Company of Portland.

1897 Word has been received of the death of ROBERT SIDNEY HAGAR. His daughter, Mrs. Jensen, reported that he died of a heart ailment on December 27, 1948 in Los Angeles where he had been since he was stricken with paralysis of speech in September 1943. He was born in Richmond where he received his education prior to his entrance to Bowdoin. Since his graduation from college, his life had been spent largely in inspecting mines with a view to learning their value for development purposes. He had many narrow escapes in that dangerous business. He leaves two sons and three daughters.

1899 CARL VOSK WOODBURY, for nearly half a century on the faculty of Norwich University and in 1944 acting president, died December 15, at the Gifford Memorial Hospital in Randolphi, Vt. A native of Skowhegan, he prepared for Bowdoin at Deering High School in Portland. His fraternities were Phi Beta Kappa and Theta Delta Chi. He was principal of the Baring high school before going to Norwich. He received his master's degree from Norwich in 1909 and a doctorate in 1914. Affectionately known to many generations of Norwich men as "Fuzzy", he had served continuously on the faculty since the fall of 1900, becoming head of the Physics Department in 1927. Because of emphysema placed on the teaching of physics during World War II his department was expanded from one of three members to a staff of thirty. His most recent service to the University was as chairman of a committee named to compile a complete history of the school. Surviving are his widow and four daughters.

The College has for its records a copy of the splendid eulogy of Mr. Woodbury written by his close friend, Hon. Charles A. Plumley, formerly President of Norwich University and now Congressman from Vermont.

1907 FRANK SHERMAN PIPER died in Cornish at his home on January 18. He was born in Parsonfield on July 5, 1884 and prepared for college at Parsonfield Seminary. As an undergraduate, he was active in varsity football and was a member of Delta Upsilon. He received his LL.B. at Harvard Law School and passed the Maine Bar examinations in August 1914, since when he had practiced law in Oxford County.

1909 The College has received word from his guardian that WILLIAM HAINES has been “missing for eight years and is presumed to be dead.” No further details are known.

1909 RAYMOND EARLE MERRILL died December 27 at Arlington Heights, Mass. at the age of 65. He was born in North Conway, N. H. He prepared for Bowdoin at Deering High School. He received his law degree from the Northeastern Law School. At one time principal of the high school at Hollis, N. H., he later taught at Wellesley High School in Massachusetts before taking a position at the high school in Medford, Mass., where he became head of the science department. His fraternity was Alpha Delta Phi. Surviving besides his widow, Mary Hillman Merrill, are a son and two daughters.

1910 Atton Holmes Farrin, 63, died December 28, in South Bristol, Conn., following an illness of several months. He was born in Pemaquid, and prepared for Bowdoin at Skowhegan High School. He was a member of the Kappa Sigma Fraternity. He taught school in Maine, Vermont and Connecticut for about twenty-five years and since 1921 had been postmaster at South Bristol. He is survived by his wife, Annie M. Farrin and twelve children.

1917 Word has been received by the College that Woodbury Perkinson Brigham died several years ago. Further information is unknown.

1918 Linwood Harvey Pierce died on December 29, of a heart ailment at the age of 53 in the Miles Memorial Hospital, Damariscotta. He was born at West Southport, and attended Lincoln Academy before coming to Bowdoin. He was president of the board of directors of the First National Bank of Damariscotta, president of the board of directors of Miles Memorial Hospital, a trustee of Lincoln Academy and proprietor of a grocery store, which he had owned and operated since 1921. He leaves his widow and four children.

1921 Prof. Alexander Thomson, a member of the Wesleyan University Faculty since 1928, died at the age of 49 in the Middlesex Hospital, Middletown, Conn. January 5. He was a native of Skowhegan, where he attended the public schools prior to his entrance to Bowdoin. While an undergraduate, he was active in athletics as a member of the varsity football team and captain of the track team. He was President of his class and recipient of the Wooden Spoon as Popular Man. After a year of teaching history at Cornell, he was chosen a Rhodes Scholar and received his Master of Arts degree at Oxford University in 1925. A year at Cornell and three years at New York University preceded his appointment at Wesleyan where, in addition to his teaching duties, he served as Dean of Freshmen. His fraternity was Delta Kappa Epsilon. Survivors include his widow, Mary, and three daughters.

Resolution presented by Prof. Hugh Brockunier and adopted by the Faculty of Wesleyan University, February 15, 1949:

ALEXANDER THOMSON
1899-1949

In the death of Alexander Thomson, colleagues and students and friends have lost a good comrade. His presence here for two decades gave all who knew him a finer sense of the human spirit. His presence here for two decades gave all who knew him a finer sense of the human spirit. For his buoyant nature, the warmth that was in him, his unfailing sincerity, we have treasured his friendship. For the fine intelligence in his scholarship, for his outstanding qualities as a teacher, his wisdom and integrity of purpose as colleague, we have esteemed and loved him. In honor of one who has enriched the lives of all of us by his wise and endearing personality, we join in this tribute to Alexander Thomson. Be it therefore resolved by the faculty of the Wesleyan University that they record their sense of great loss and enduring gratitude, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to his widow, accompanied by an expression of profound sympathy.

HOTEL EAGLE WELCOMES YOU!

Yes, Bowdoin men and their families will find a friendly welcome awaiting them at Brunswick's best hotel, five minutes' walk from the campus.

The same friendly atmosphere that you remember is still here. But we have modernized the house throughout, installed more private baths, enlarged the dining room, built on a sun porch where you can enjoy meals outdoors in complete comfort, and re-decorated and painted the house throughout.

You'll find the same high quality of food here as in the past and sleep restfully in our clean, fresh rooms.

You can be assured of finding in the Eagle a modern and attractive hotel where you and your families may stay in complete comfort while you are in Brunswick.

And in our efforts to give you this fine service we deeply appreciate the support of Bowdoin undergraduates, alumni and friends.

BRUNSWICK . MAINE

THOMAS H. RILEY . . . . 1880
JOHN W. RILEY . . . . 1905
JOHN W. RILEY, Jr. . . . . 1930
THOMAS P. RILEY . . . . 1939

“*We send our sons to Bowdoin in the fall.”

Both professors Catlin and Van Cleve are remaining in Brunswick.

Mr. John R. McKenna of Ottawa, Ontario has been appointed head of reader services at the College Library. Following the war, he completed his work for a B.A. degree at Queen's University, Kingston and took a library degree at McGill University.

Lawrence L. Pelletier '36, Assistant Professor of Government, served as consultant to the Committee on State Government at the annual meeting of the National Municipal League held in Chicago during December.

Prof. George H. Quinby '23 and Albert R. Thayer of the English Department recently took active parts in the fifth annual conference of the New England Speech Association held in Boston. Prof. Quinby gave an address on secondary school and college dramatics. Prof. Thayer, vice president of the organization, served as program chairman.

Prof. and Mrs. Thomas A. Riley and Prof. Stanley P. Chase '05 attended the meetings of the Modern Language Association, which were held in New York City last December.

Dr. and Mrs. Henry G. Russell have announced the birth of a son, Stephen Chase, who was born November 29. Dr. Russell, who is on leave of absence from the College this year, is at Columbia University.

Mr. and Mrs. George "Dinny" Shay have announced the birth of a third daughter, Elizabeth Joan, who was born November 27. Versatile coach and election prognosticator deluxe, Dinny is broadening his faculty duties by giving lectures on Scholasticism to the Philosophy classes.

Prof. Newton P. Stahlnecker has left Bowdoin to assume direction of the Philosophy Department at the University of Indiana.

John S. Sweet, instructor of English, is currently starring in the British movie, "A Canterbury Tale", which opened recently at the Beacon Theatre in New York City. The picture was made while Sweet was in the Army in Europe. Michael Powell, known for his "Colonel Blimp", "Stairway to Heaven", and "Red Shoes", produced "A Canterbury Tale".

Prof. Perley S. Turner recently represented the College at the New England Educational and Professional Standards Group Meeting held in Boston.

The Bowdoin Bureau of Municipal Research, made possible through the generous gift of William J. Curtis '75, which has done such notable work in cities and towns of Maine under the capable guidance of Professor Orren C. Hornell is receiving increasing demands for its services. Assistant Professor Lawrence L. Pelletier '36 is proving an able assistant to Professor Hornell.

PORTLAND PRESS-HERALD
PORTLAND EVENING EXPRESS
PORTLAND SUNDAY TELEGRAM
Prior to the war of the Revolution there was no court house or regular place for holding court in Portland. Sometimes court was held in the old town house at the foot of Middle Street. The second story of the old meeting house on India Street "was fitted up at the expense of the town as a court room," and served as such from 1746 to 1774. Occasionally court was held in the Widow Alice Greele's tavern, or in Freeman's Tavern.

In 1774 the town house at the foot of Middle Street was moved to Greele's Lane to make way for "a large and handsome new Court House." This building was to be 54 by 50 feet, with a belfry. It was uncompleted when the town was destroyed in the bombardment of 1775.

The frame for the first building to be used as a regular Court House was raised on the site of the present City Hall on October 3, 1785. It was 48 by 34 feet, with 20 foot stud posts, two stories high with a "roof so framed that a belfry could be added at some future time." The first floor was an open hall in which were kept the gallows and stocks and pillory, ready to be erected for use when needed. The second floor contained the court room and offices. The cupola, added in 1788, was surmounted by a gilded and hand-carved weathercock. Near the front of the Court House stood the whipping post with cross bars for securing the arms of the culprit.

In 1816 this building was moved to the upper part of Exchange Street to make way for a new brick Court House.
Hatch Preparatory School
College Prep for Boys • Established 1926

Hatch Prep was started as a small school and has remained a small school and consequently has long been recognized by educators as a leader in this particular field.

Twenty former students of the school are in attendance at Bowdoin during the current academic year, 1948-49.

THE SESQUICENTENNIAL FUND

PROGRESS to May 1 of Bowdoin's effort to increase its capital and to improve its working tools has been set forth in a circular to all alumni. The article appearing in this issue of the Alumnus states the confident hope of the Sesquicentennial Fund staff that the second million may be reported at Commencement time. One of our new buildings is assured. If contributions are received from the 54% of alumni who have yet to respond, it is possible that a second building can be authorized. In a generally difficult fund-raising period, the results of Bowdoin's once-in-a-lifetime appeal, though not startling, are gratifying.

THE ALUMNI FUND

WITH approximately 65% of its dollar objective in hand at this writing, the Alumni Fund, our annual gift to meet current Bowdoin needs, is stressing more widespread participation. Chairman Kendrick Burns, his associate Directors and the 52 Fund Agents have not given up hope that Seventy Percent of Bowdoin's alumni will share in the 1948-49 Alumni Fund. About thirty percent have now contributed. The Class of 1901 alone has so far made the desired Gentleman's Grade but 1916, 1904, 1929, The Old Guard, 1902, 1909, 1910, 1908, 1914 and 1903 seem likely to enter the select circle soon. The Chairman believes that, in his report at Commencement, he will be able to name several other classes with a participation of 70% of their members.

The definite trend in college Alumni Funds is toward more contributors and also more dollars contributed. Under a governmental program committed to the distribution of income and steadily increasing income and estate taxes, it must be apparent that institutions not publicly supported will be receiving fewer large gifts. Unable to give substantially as they would like to do, the alumni of our independent colleges are including in their annual giving, contributions which represent the income on those capital gifts. When we assemble an Alumni Fund gift of $70,000, we are giving the income on two millions of endowment which Bowdoin does not have.

The Directors and Agents of our Alumni Fund continue to emphasize the importance of and the necessity for many, many contributions. They urge all Bowdoin men to have a share in our yearly gift, no matter how small that share must be. Our combined giving is truly impressive. Dartmouth, with an alumni body more than three times as large as ours, consistently leads the college Alumni Fund parade. For the past two years 63 percent of all Dartmouth men have participated. Are we Bowdoin men less devoted to our college?

That Gentleman's grade can be reached.

THE COVER

STEVE MERRILL'S wizardry is again in evidence. Inserted in a solid background of ivy leaves is a familiar shot of students headed for the Physics Lab. We are limited in the expense of cover making and a single run of green may not do all we wish it could for the ivy highlights. The result, however, is gay, seasonable and, we trust, a trifle nostalgic.
Bowdoin Worthies

Upon his graduation in 1832, Johnston immediately entered the teaching profession and spent three years at Oenida Conference Seminary at Cazenovia, New York. In his third year there, he served as principal of the school. Then came the chance to go to Wesleyan. Once again Johnston’s career paralleled that of his former teacher. For Bowdoin was but three years old when Cleaveland decided to cast his lot at Brunswick, and Wesleyan was but four years old when Johnston made up his mind to go to Middletown, Connecticut. It might have been that the decision in the latter case was somewhat influenced by a knowledge of Cleaveland’s early association with the infant college—Bowdoin.

John Johnston accomplished much in that year of 1835. Besides becoming principal at the Cazenovia school and receiving an offer from Wesleyan, he also received his Master’s Degree from both Bowdoin and Wesleyan and, for good measure, found time to marry Maria Hamilton of Cazenovia. Sufficient to say that, when he started his career at Middletown, there was little doubt in the minds of his contemporaries as to the success that awaited him.

From 1835 to 1839, Johnston was Assistant Professor of Mathematics and Lecturer on Natural Science. In 1839 he was made Professor of Natural Sciences at Wesleyan and the following year received his LL.D. from McKendree College, Illinois. Until his retirement in 1873, he filled the chair of Natural Sciences at Wesleyan and for six years he was Professor Emeritus. In all, John Johnston was associated with Wesleyan University for 44 years.

Johnston was a wise, congenial and inspiring professor as was also Cleaveland; but they differed in one marked respect. Johnston continued his writing throughout his career. Cleaveland made but one revision of his famous Mineralogy, whereas Johnston revised his Manual of Chemistry seven times, bringing out the eighth edition in 1871, shortly before his retirement. He also published two other textbooks, Manual of Natural Philosophy and Primary of Natural Philosophy. In addition, he published numerous articles in the American Journal of Science, the National Magazine, the Methodist Quarterly Review and the New England Historical and Genealogical Register.

Because his forebears were early settlers in Maine, his grandfather coming from Scotland in 1753, John Johnston had a keen interest in genealogy. As a result he published a history of Bristol and Bremen, Maine. His own family contributed much to the histories of these towns. Thomas Johnston sr. helped to incorporate Bristol and served for 32 years as selectman or assessor. He was promptly succeeded in office by his son, John. Thomas Johnston jr., a brother, was the first treasurer of Bremen.

Professor Johnston died December 1, 1879 at Clifton, New York, leaving four sons, all of whom were associated with the dental supply company, Johnston and Brown of New York City.

Although none of Professor Johnston’s descendants came to Bowdoin, one grandson,—himself a Wesleyan graduate,—has seen to it that the name of the illustrious professor lives on at Bowdoin. In 1940, Mr. Albert Wheeler Johnston, of Greenwich, Connecticut, by a gift of $25,000, established the John Johnston Scholarship at Bowdoin. His reasons were twofold,—to honor the memory of his grandfather and to provide means whereby some boy with chances for an equally brilliant future might come to Bowdoin. He believed that his grandfather’s “industry, individualism, independence, and sense of responsibility” could best be memorialized by encouraging selected boys to cultivate those characteristics.

The John Johnston Scholarships are awarded to able and worthy candidates for admission, preferably from rural Maine, for whom a college education would be quite impossible without very considerable financial assistance.

Thus does the name of a Bowdoin graduate, one of New England’s outstanding teachers, live on here at the College, nearly 120 years after his graduation.

A. H. F.
Hoyt A. Moore 1895

By the calendar Hoyt A. Moore would appear to be one of the Old Guard. But the calendar does not tell the true story. His energy in his profession as well as in his devotion to Bowdoin may fairly be called unique among the living alumni of the College, — wherever their names appear in the chronological list.

He was born in Ellsworth, September 15, 1870, the son of Augustus Edwin Moore, a farmer who became a storekeeper, then president of the local savings bank, and also a city official; and of Susan Tucker Moore, whose great-great-grandfather, Captain Josiah Tucker, settled in Cherryfield in 1760. In the fall of 1891 he entered Bowdoin from the Ellsworth schools; joined D.K.E., and during his college course took particular interest in forensics, winning the sophomore declamation.

Graduated in 1895, Phi Beta Kappa, he taught school for six years at Wilton, Ellsworth, and Putnam, Connecticut, and then decided to study law. Graduating at Harvard Law School in 1904, he joined at once the office of the famous New York law firm which is known in the profession as the Cravath firm, and is now a senior partner. Founded in 1823 as Miller & Seward, this legal partnership has carried on ever since with successive changes of name, and since March 1, 1944, has been Cravath, Swaine and Moore.

In 1906 he married Lora Parsons of Ellsworth. They have a son and a daughter.

Hoyt Moore's connection with Bowdoin for nearly sixty years has been close. To the College he has given unstintedly of his time. He has served on the alumni council; and received the alumni achievement award in 1941. He was an overseer from June 20, 1929, and has been a trustee since June 20, 1933. For many years he has been chairman of the visiting committee, which has the responsibility of setting up the budget. The printed reports which he has drafted for the committee to submit annually to the Boards have been as comprehensive as reports of financial officers to corporations like General Motors or General Electric. Fellow committee members have found that he hardly sleeps or eats when there is work to do.

And to the College he has also contributed generously in material gifts.

The Augustus Edwin Moore dormitory, costing over $120,000 was given by him; and his annual contributions to the Hoyt A. Moore fund up to the time when the Sesquicentennial Fund was started, totalled over $75,000 more. And the "sesqui" is "yet to come."

His personality as it is known to his office associates is indicated by the following quotation from a biographical sketch which appears in the second volume of The Cravath Firm, a history recently issued for private distribution under the editorship of Robert T. Swaine, one of the firm, who has given the ALUMNUS permission to use the quotations.

Hoyt Moore's hard, driving work far into the night, through Sundays and holidays, has become as much a tradition of the Cravath office as Governor Seward's night work at Auburn a century ago. As the Governor wore out his young men and kept working when they had to go home for sleep, so Hoyt Moore has outstayed the succession of his young associates. He has a constitution of iron; save for a serious operation in 1910, which kept him home for several months, he has never admitted illness; and no one has ever seen him exhausted. The story, doubtless apocryphal, has long been told that when some of his partners urged that the office was under such pressure as to make additions to the staff imperative, Moore replied: "That's silly. No one is under pressure. There wasn't a light on when I left at two o'clock this morning."

Meticulous . . . In the drafting of corporate papers, he is hard to satisfy. In the early years of Moore's partnership when he was under great pressure in a matter for Bethlehem, Cravath assigned one of his own assistants to help Moore. Never having worked for Moore, but knowing his reputation, the associate carefully examined all the recent products of Moore's draftsmanship within the scope of the current project and, with them as a basis and making the modifications required by the statutes of the governing state, prepared papers which he thought conformed to Moore's best models. They met a scathing denunciation as a shoddy job. When the assistant explained that the drafts had their origin in some of Moore's own recent documents, Moore gave a reply which typifies his approach to every job: "Haven't you been here long enough to know that what was good yesterday isn't good enough today?"

The expanding work for Bethlehem Steel Corporation and its many subsidiaries has been Moore's principal concern. No lawyer ever unreservedly gave more of himself to a client than Hoyt Moore has given to Bethlehem.

Such is Hoyt Moore, — an able lawyer, and one of Bowdoin's most distinguished and loyal sons.

The Sesquicentennial Fund

INTENSIVE solicitation of Bowdoin Alumni for the Sesquicentennial Fund is to be completed this June, and fittingly enough, the Alumni are in a position to help the Fund over its second big hurdle.

At this writing (May 9, 1949) subscriptions to the Fund total $1,735,000, including the recent bequest of $250,000 made to the College by Dr. Charles E. Adams '84 of Bangor. Almost $900,000 has been received in cash or securities. By Commencement this figure will be well over a million dollars. The fund expects to receive at least $100,000 from the estate of William Nelson Cromwell, New York lawyer, before June. This will still leave the Fund some $165,000 short of its second million.

And that's where the Alumni come in. To date just 44.6% of Bowdoin's 5800 Alumni (excluding those who are members of the Governing Boards or Faculty) have subscribed to the Sesquicentennial Fund. In dollars they have pledged $695,506 as against a goal of $1,100,000. If the Alumni can come up with that $165,000 between now and June 18, the Fund will surely have its two million.
As a climax to the Alumni phase of its operations, the Fund is planning to publish, as soon after Commencement as possible, a complete roster of Bowdoin men who have subscribed or contributed to the Fund.

A study of the contributions of Alumni to date by classes indicates that it is the younger Alumnus who better appreciates the capital needs of the College. In contrast, the records of the Alumni Fund (conducted annually to help the College meet current expenses) show that the older Alumnus is more concerned with meeting current expenses.

Meanwhile the Fund is forwarding its work in a number of directions. It is hoped that a suitable ceremony will be held at Commencement in anticipation of the erection of the new classroom building. Just when actual construction will begin cannot be determined since final plans for the building have not been approved. The Building Committee is anxious to see that construction is kept to the bare necessities. Operating on the old Yankee axiom of "Use it up, wear it out, make it do", the Building Committee is studying present classroom buildings in an effort to determine how they can contribute their maximum to future classroom requirements through modernization.

The descriptive leaflet of the campus which was published last summer for the benefit of visitors, has been revised and an additional leaflet on the Art Building and Library is being drafted. In the same category, pamphlets to stimulate bequests and memorials are also underway. The campaign is being carried on among parents and friends of the College with satisfactory results.

Three other activities for the benefit of the Fund are in progress, but these are being conducted independently. The first is a "Bowdoin Friendship Club", a campaign in Brunswick and Topsham spontaneously undertaken by leading citizens of those towns. The campaign has just started under the chairmanship of Harry H. Smart of Brunswick and is to last until June, 1950. Chairman Smart is hopeful of announcing several substantial contributions by Commencement of this year.

The second independent activity is the sale of Bowdoin book matches and Bowdoin notepaper being sponsored by the Society of Bowdoin Women. The matches are already on sale, at a dollar for a box of 50 books and the proceeds will go to the Sesquicentennial Fund. The Society expects to begin the sale of Bowdoin notepaper shortly before Commencement. Later they plan to take orders for Bowdoin Christmas cards.

Finally, the Bowdoin Wives Association, composed of wives of students, is undertaking a second rummage sale for the benefit of the Fund. Last year the Wives netted nearly $300 from a similar rummage sale.

Regardless of its many ramifications, Fund operations are currently aimed at two major objectives: endowment and the construction of a new chemistry building. All monies now being received are being set aside in equal portions for these two items on the Fund's list of goals.

Goethe and Bowdoin College
Professor Thomas A. Riley '28 Tells of A Little Known Interest in the College

This year, the Bicentennial of Goethe's birth, must bring back into our memories the fact that Goethe had some contact with Bowdoin College, in spite of the expectation that a poet born in Frankfurt, Germany, two hundred years ago would have known nothing of a tiny college of a few dozen students hidden away in the wilderness of America.

One of Goethe's many interests was the study of geology and mineralogy. He was, in his way, a thorough student and scientist in these fields, devoting to them many years of his life, reading with eagerness the contributions of other countries and languages concerning the latest discoveries in geology and mineralogy. This intense interest is displayed in long sections of Part II of his drama Faust. Goethe's contact with Bowdoin College was through the textbook written by Professor Parker Cleaveland: An Elementary Treatise on Mineralogy and Geology, published in Boston in 1816.

A German letter written by Goethe to a friend of his, J. G. Cogswell, in July, 1819, says:

Professor Parker Cleaveland, whose important work you, my dear fellow, have called to my attention, has acted in a very friendly manner towards the Jena Mineralogical Society by sending to it his splendid book. The Society thinks it can best acknowledge this favor by bestowing on him the enclosed diploma, which I beg of you to send him with best regards and at the same time to recommend the Society to his friendly attention.

Since Goethe was president of the Jena Mineralogical Society, it has seemed likely that the diploma would contain a genuine Goethe autograph if it could be found. The Goethe Jahrbuch of 1906 reported getting in touch with Librarian Little of Bowdoin College and of Mr. Little's being unable to find any diploma or mention of the Mineralogical Society in Cleaveland's papers. However, only a few days ago, while working on a Goethe exhibit for the College German Department, Miss Edith Lyon of the Library staff discovered the original diploma issued to Professor Cleaveland in 1819. Although it was not actually signed by Goethe, the extremely interesting document came directly from Goethe's hand and is now on display in the College Library.

Goethe's enthusiastic interest in Cleaveland's work is evidenced by frequent references to it in his diaries and letters during a period of years. In 1823 he reports his delight in receiving the second edition of the work.

So far, no direct correspondence between the two men has been discovered, nor have I found in my studies any indication that the two ever corresponded directly, but the possibility is still not completely excluded. Goethe-letters in Brunswick may show up yet.
Recent Art Museum Acquisitions
Curator Albert Sutherland Roe Reports
New Treasures in the Bowdoin Collections

Since the last report in the Alumnus two years ago, the College has continued to receive generous gifts of works which have enriched the art collections.

The most extensive gift came from the same donor who several years ago presented to the College the ceiling, panelling and furniture which have been so effectively used to decorate the new Rare Book Room in the library. In the spring of 1948, this donor, who desires to remain anonymous, gave to the Museum a most unusual and handsome German oak cabinet of the Renaissance period. Dating from the second half of the sixteenth century, this chest is notable for the decoration of the folding doors; the sixteen panels into which the two doors are divided each being carved with a head in such deep relief as to be almost in the full round. This decoration, which is supplemented by considerable foliate ornamentation, produces a singularly rich effect, and one matched by few pieces in other American collections.

A few months after the gift of the cabinet just described, the same donor made a further presentation, consisting this time of a number of paintings and several additional pieces of furniture.

Among the paintings, the most important historically and artistically is a portrait of a lady of the Spanish court which has been attributed to the leading court painter of the sixteenth century, Sanchez Coello (1515-1590). The greater freedom of pose characteristic of Italian portraiture of the High Renaissance had not yet been introduced to Spain, and Spanish art of the sixteenth century is very largely under the influence of the stiffer and more detailed manner of the Flemish school, the Low Countries being, of course, at this time under Spanish domination. Coello’s portrait, as may be seen from the accompanying cut, is very characteristic of this style: stiff in pose, with much attention paid to a meticulous rendition of the elaborate details of the costume.

Also included in the same gift are three characteristic compositions of the French eighteenth century school, two of them attributed to Charles Joseph Natoire (1700-1777) and the other by Charles Eisen (1720-1778). Both of these men worked in the fanciful and decorative manner most commonly associated with Francois Bou... late Anson K. Cross of Boothbay Harbor, given by Mrs. Cross, and a chalk study by the Italian artist Arturo Dazzi presented anonymously through the Cleveland Museum. In the field of contemporary sculpture, Mrs. Eleanor Lincoln Johnson, formerly of Brunswick, gave the College two of her own works, "Chinese Head" and "Head of a Javanese Woman".

There have also been several other gifts of furniture, which have made it possible for us to furnish our galleries almost completely with antique pieces. From the estate of the late Miss Mabel S. Davies we received a set of six early American chairs and a Sheraton walnut desk. Mr. Stephen B. Luce gave another early American chair in memory of the Misses Walker, donors of the Art Building, to whom the chair at one time belonged. A French walnut side chair was given by Miss Marian Stetson in memory of her father, John G. Stetson of the class of 1854. Mrs. Albert E. Davies, who for some years has been donating antique silver in memory of an early Overseer of the College, Hon. Daniel Cony, recently added to the collection a rare piece of early date, a "caster" or salt-shaker made in London in 1710.

Finally, in the field of graphic arts, we have received notable gifts of etchings by two of the outstanding American masters of recent years who have worked in this expressive and difficult medium. Mrs. Ernest Haskell presented thirty-three etchings by her late husband, a resident of West Point, Maine, who at the time of his early death in an automobile accident in 1925 was considered the outstanding American artist employing this technique. Mrs. Haskell also included two of Ernest Haskell's lithographs and four of his oil studies in her gift. Another leading American etcher was Charles H. Woodbury of Boston who died in 1940. Through the kindness of Mrs. Charles Bruen Perkins, we have received eight fine specimens of his work.

Thus it may be seen that in the past few years the Art Collections of the College, which are unusually fine among the collections of all the smaller institutions of the country, have continued to grow, thanks to the interest of numerous generous friends of the College. In other ways the Museum has also been active since the war. Gratifying interest has been shown in the courses given to the undergraduates and enrollments have increased steadily at the same time that the offerings have expanded. It is now planned to give three courses in the history and principles of the fine arts each term, with courses recurring in a three year rotation; this will make possible the most thorough coverage of the subject that has ever been given at Bowdoin. Our slide collection, both black-and-white and colored, continues to grow; it is now one of the most extensive and also one of the best in quality of any small college.

There has also been the usual monthly series of Special Loan Exhibitions. During the summer these exhibitions will feature in June drawings and etchings by Josiah Tubby of Portland; in July, a joint exhibition of paintings by Merle D. James of Cushing, Maine, William Thon of Port Clyde, and Andrew Wyeth of Chadd's Ford, Pennsylvania; in August, watercolors by Lester Cooke of Boothbay Harbor, a member of the Art Department of Princeton University.

It is a source of particular gratification that two of our monthly Special Exhibitions within the past year have been built around work by members of the College community. Last July Professor Robert Peter Tristram Coffin of the English Department gave an exhibition of his drawings. These drawings were a principal feature of the first of two "open house" days when the College played host to large numbers of summer visitors to the region; on this occasion Professor Coffin spoke and President and Mrs. Sills were hosts at a tea in the Moulton Union. In November the Museum had the pleasure of sponsoring the first one-man showing of work by an undergraduate ever held at Bowdoin, an exhibition of oil paintings by Robert Ryel Bliss '47 of Newton, Massachusetts. Mr. Bliss, who is due to graduate this June, plans to make painting a career.

1909's Fortieth well in hand. From headquarters in South Appleton the class will journey to Al Moulton's camp on the Royal River in Yarmouth. Their ladies will be at Hope Farm.

Bill Farrar is arranging 1914's Thirty-fifth. The class will be housed in South Moore and the ladies at Walker Homestead in Topsham. Earle Thompson's summer home in Boothbay Harbor will be the scene of the class outing on Friday.

1919 will observe its Thirtieth at North Moore and at the Harriet Beecher Stowe House. Pick Turner is reunion chairman.

The big Twenty-fifth Reunion of 1924 starts on Thursday with a luncheon and a reception at Pickard Field House. Mal Morrell and Jake Aldred are the Brunswick arrangers for Chairman Brooks Savage. A large attendance is assured and something will be happening all the time for three days and nights. The class dinner will be at Jaquish Inn.

Sam Ladd reports a fine response to initial 1929 letters. Headquarters are in South Maine; the class outing and dinner will be at Sunset Farm in Harpswell.

Chairman Bill Rounds reports good 1934 response to date. Headquarters are in North Maine. Fred Drake is handling the Brunswick arrangements.

1944’s Fifth has been in the works for months. Chairman Dick Johnston has been ably helped by E. B. Ellis, Ross Williams and Roy LaCasce. North Winthrop will be headquarters.

The class outing will be at the Gurnet House.

Actual progress on Bowdoin’s building program will be appropriately observed by informal exercises to locate the new Classroom Building. Plans may also be announced concerning the proposed new Chemistry Building. The Sesquicentennial Fund hopes to report its second million. The almanac says “sunny and warm”. All signs point to a big and joyous 144th Commencement.

The General Catalogue

Editor Philip S. Wilder ’23 Sketches
Progress of an Exhaustive Compilation

OLDER alumni and a few younger alumni with older Bowdoin relatives will remember an impressive, green bound volume bearing the title General Catalogue of Bowdoin College, and containing in its more than six hundred pages brief biographical sketches of every Bowdoin man associated with the College between 1794 and 1915. The Prefatory Note, unsigned, but without doubt written by George T. Little ’77, presents the book as the “fourth edition in English of The General Catalogue of Bowdoin College and the Medical School of Maine.” Research indicates that the first edition “in English” appeared in 1889 and was preceded by twenty three editions in Latin, the first dated 1810.

The 1915 volume combines an original edition issued in 1912, listing only graduates of the College, and a supplement including the “non-graduates”, together with graduates of 1913, 1914 and 1915. This supplement was edited by the late Gerald G. Wilder ’04, who succeeded Professor Little as Librarian.

It has been felt for many years that there was need for a new General Catalogue and in 1945 a committee was appointed, under the chairmanship of John W. Frost ’04, to begin work on the project. The Assistant to the President was designated as Editor of the new book and in the fall of 1946 Mrs. Margaret Washburn, wife of Cadwallader L. Washburn H’47 opened an office in Hubbard Hall. Her first task was to complete the records of men listed in the 1915 book but since deceased. This entailed an enormous amount of research and correspondence but before she left the project in 1947 she had made a good start and had reduced the number of alumni in the classes prior to 1875 whose data were not complete to half a dozen.

She was succeeded as Assistant Editor by Mrs. Miriam Stover Thomas, a Bates graduate and a recognized genealogist. Under her direction a staff of “Bowdoin Wives” has filled some dozen filing cases with biographical material and will soon have copy for the new book ready for the printer.

Mr. Frost’s committee, now comprising Mr. Harrison Atwood ’09, of the Overseers; Mr. Boyer, the Librarian; Professor Herbert R. Brown; the Alumni Secretary; and the Editor; has had valuable assistance from Mr. Frederick W. Anthoenen H’47 in planning the book which will contain over eight hundred pages and should appear in the spring of 1950.

It will contain an entry for every Bowdoin student who remained in College as long as one semester and every member of the Governing Boards, the Faculty and the Administration. Coaches, “other officers” and honorary graduates will be included. Each entry will contain the full name of the individual; his date and place of birth (and of death, if deceased); his educational and occupational record in brief; his war service, if any; and notes as to his membership in Phi Beta Kappa or in a Bowdoin undergraduate fraternity. If he is the son of a Bowdoin man, this will be indicated, with appropriate class reference. In the interest of brevity, it has been necessary to condense and compress the records of many men and to omit material which may, to some, seem of real importance.

It is planned to mail to every living alumna the copy for his entry and to make additions and changes, as requested, where this seems practicable.

It is hoped that many alumni will purchase copies of this book. The volume will be priced far below actual cost, will be a fine example of the printer’s art and will carry an enormous wealth of information about the thousands of men and the few honored women who have been, and are, a part of Bowdoin College.
An unusually large collection of letters written by Nathaniel Hawthorne, 40 in number, has been given to the College. The letters are the gift of Miss Marion B. Maurice of Athens, Pa., a descendant of Horatio Bridge, former Paymaster-General of the U. S. Navy and classmate (Bowdoin 1825) and life-long friend of Hawthorne. Twenty of the letters are from Hawthorne to Bridge and were written between 1838 and 1863. In one, Hawthorne refers to Bridge as the “best friend (male)” he has.

Also in the collection are 16 letters from Hawthorne to William B. Pike of Salem, Mass., some of which Hawthorne wrote from England when he was U. S. Consul at Liverpool, to which office he was appointed by Franklin Pierce, 14th President of the United States and a member of Bowdoin’s Class of 1824. The remaining 10 letters in the collection are of miscellaneous authorship, but contribute information about Hawthorne.

Hawthorne reveals himself as most human in a letter written from Liverpool in 1854 in which he shows concern over a proposed bill to fix salaries for various consuls. Hawthorne complains about the cost of living and the fact that he is on the verge of going into debt. He hopes that he will be allowed to remain on a fee basis. Later on Hawthorne admitted to Bridge that he had realized enough from the position to live on “with comfortable security.”

The letters, which will be housed in Bowdoin’s Rare Book Room along with other items in the College’s Hawthorne Collection, are of particular interest to the College for another reason — their reference to Hawthorne’s and Bridge’s Bowdoin friends. These include, besides President Pierce and Representative Gilley, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow (1825), and U. S. Senator John P. Hale (1827) of New Hampshire.

The College Library has also been given a complete autographed copy of Excelsior by Longfellow. This contribution was donated by Roscoe H. Hupper ’07. Although not the original draft, the poem is handsomely preserved in a morocco-bound volume which also holds some unusual etchings and engravings of the author as well as a biographical sketch.

A second Longfellow item, which was contributed to the library by Frederick W. Pickard ’94, is a copy of the Boston Pearl and Literary Gazette of 1834. It contains the much-disputed short story by Longfellow entitled “The Wondrous Tale of the Little Man in Goslin Green”, which was written while the author was Professor of Modern Languages at Bowdoin. Because the story concerned a Brunswick character by the name of John Schwartkins with whom Longfellow was quite friendly, the locale was somewhat disguised and the story signed with the pseudonym of George F. Brown.

Athletics

At this writing Dan MacFayden’s Baseball team has defeated all three of the Maine colleges in exhibition games, has won from Wesleyan and lost to Amherst in a close game. Later examinations permit the first full schedule since before the war. The team looks like one of Bowdoin’s better aggregations.

The Track team, after winning all its winter meets except the one with Dartmouth, has opened the spring season with a win over Vermont. Dual meets with Tufts and Boston College precede the State and New England Meets. Prospects are again good. Jack Magee’s cohorts have had two successful winter seasons and last year won both the Maine and the Eastern intercollegiate championships.

Bob Miller produced another outstanding Swimming team. It won all of its dual meets and, without the services of several valuable members, placed fourth in the New Englands. Bowdoin has lost but two dual swimming meets in three years.

The Golf and Tennis teams show signs of regaining pre-war form. Prospects are good for both state championships.

The college athletic facilities are busy indeed. Freshman and J. V. teams in track and baseball and the usual intramural program of softball are keeping everybody active.
Dramatics

The Masque and Gown Executive Committee voted to make the first performance of Twelfth Night, on May 16, a benefit for the Town Hall stage, now seriously in need of repair and new equipment, as a memorial to the performances held there from 1904 to 1914 by Bowdoin thespians. Many of the older alumni will doubtless recall the benefits the College received from the town and will be happy to know that some return is being made. Twelfth Night will be repeated for the Ivy festivities on the afternoon of May 20.

To permit the darkening of Memorial Hall for the afternoon performance of High School one-act plays on April 30, the College installed velveteen window curtains to match the proscenium curtain supplied by the Masque and Gown last summer. These add very much to the appearance of the Hall and make it possible to test lighting equipment at any time.

Rehearsals for the Commencement production of Aeschylus’ Seven Against Thebes are proceeding well under Professor Means, and New England classicists are already writing for tickets. Reservations may be secured from Samuel W. Philbrick ’50 at the DKE House.

Each year the Negro Newspaper Publishers Association cites individuals, publications and organizations for services in behalf of interracial goodwill. President Truman, Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, Dr. Ralph J. Bunche and radio entertainer Arthur Godfrey were among the ten cited in February 1949. Of interest to Bowdoin men is the fact that these citations are known as the John B. Russwurm awards. Russwurm, one of the two first Negroes to receive American college degrees, was a graduate of Bowdoin in the Class of 1826.

D. U. Lectureship

On March 17 Austin H. MacCormick ’15, delivered the annual Delta Upsilon Lecture at Memorial Hall. Noted penologist and author, currently chairman of the U. S. Army parole Board, he gave an absorbingly interesting account of the efforts to improve our handling of crime and criminals and livened his talk with many stories of his personal experiences. The lectureship was established at the suggestion of the late Avery M. Spear ’25 and is the annual gift to the College by the members of the Bowdoin Chapter of Delta Upsilon.

A Bowdoin Press

Bowdoin has recently installed a small printing plant in the basement of Hubbard Hall, and is now offering an informal course in Printing and Typography.

The purpose of the course is to introduce interested students into the vocational possibilities offered in the field of printing, the sixth largest industry in the United States, and its allied fields in which some knowledge of printing and typography may be of value—editorial work, publishing, advertising, institutional promotion, and the production of printing itself. It is not intended, however, to give a complete course of specialized training in printing or any one of these fields; instead, the program will seek to provide a minimum training in handling the essential materials of printing, a basic knowledge of types and the principles of better typography, and to suggest the possibilities of lifting printing and typography to the level of high craftsmanship.
Group work in the course will be conducted one evening a week at the Library, during which preliminary class instruction will be given by lectures. Workshop periods will be arranged during which students may secure practice in working at the case, stone, and press. However, no commercial work of any kind will be undertaken in the shop.

The idea for the workshop and course was conceived a year ago by Kenneth J. Boyer, Librarian. Dartmouth and other colleges have already instituted such courses in connection with small college-owned printing plants for academic purposes. Since the Bowdoin Library already houses in its Rare Book Room the collection of books printed by the famous Anthoensen Press, and is quietly building up a specialized library of books on the graphic arts through acquisitions in the Anthoensen-Christian Collection, it occurred to Mr. Boyer that the next logical step might now be the establishment of a small printing plant and a course of instruction to help make use of these collections. Working with Sheldon Christian ’37, of Brunswick, and Fred Anthoensen H’47, plans for establishing the shop were perfected and, with the help of Mr. Anthoensen, the materials were specified and gradually assembled, and a room in the basement of the Library was made over for a workshop. Equipment consists of a series of Caslon types especially imported from England, a quantity of select Oxford types, stands, cases, and an old style hand press.

Mr. Christian, a qualified student of printing and typography and proprietor of The Pejepscot Press, was asked by Mr. Boyer to act as instructor, with Mr. Anthoensen agreeing to continue an interest in the subject.

Music

The Glee Club has nearly completed the outstandingly successful year’s program sketched in the February issue. Topped by the appearance in New York’s Town Hall on March 23 and the broadcast for Monsanto Chemical Company on April 10, the year’s program will end with the Boston Bowdoin Club’s annual Symphony Pops Bowdoin Night Thursday, May 19, at which concert Professor and Mrs. Tillotson will be featured in a Mozart two-piano concerto.

A gauge of the high grade of Bowdoin’s musical work under Professor Tillotson was supplied by Irving Kolodin in his New York Sun article on March 24. “For most college choral groups, the notion that their work has anything to do with ‘glee’ is an anachronism... Not so the Bowdoin Glee Club directed by Frederic Tillotson in Town Hall last night; they sang, seemingly what they liked and liked what they sang. At one point, even the piano accompanist, Jose de Tejada, was vocalizing; can more be said for the wiles of a choral director?”

The Meddiebempsters have continued their European fame as participants in all Glee Club concerts and in a series of appearances on their own. They organized and underwrote Octets, etc. an evening of double quartet singing at Jordan Hall in Boston on April 23. Six other college groups took part.

Concerts of Chamber Music, a concert by the Choral Society and student recitals have rounded out a full year of Bowdoin music.

Bowdoin At Home

Once again the College is planning to hold special events on the campus this summer in order that townspeople and summer residents may have an opportunity to know the College better.

President Sills has already appointed the Summer Activities Committee which in turn has selected Friday, July 22 and Friday, August 19 as the dates for the events so that Alumni who plan to come back to Maine this summer may have an opportunity to fit these dates into their schedules.

While the details of these two programs have not been worked out as yet, it is definite that Summer T. Pike ’13 will be the guest of honor on July 22. The Atomic Energy Commissioner will give a lecture in the afternoon followed by a reception by President and Mrs. Sills. In conjunction with this lecture a special exhibition of the paintings of Andrew Wyeth, son of N. C. Wyeth, is being arranged for the Art Building. It is also hoped that an atomic energy exhibit may be made available to the College for this event.

The August 19 affair will be based on a lecture by W. Hodding Carter jr.
'27, the Pulitzer Prize Journalist of 1946. His afternoon lecture will also be followed by a reception by President and Mrs. Sills. A journalistic theme will run through the rest of the day's program. The New England Women's Press Association is planning on holding its summer convention at Bowdoin over this weekend, and the College has tentatively scheduled press seminars for the morning of August 19. It is also attempting to arrange for a press photography exhibit for the Art Building.

The Summer Activities Committee, with one exception, is the same one that was responsible for last summer's highly successful days. The Committee is headed by Clement F. Robinson '03 and includes: President Sills, ex-officio, Professor Philip C. Beam, Samuel A. Ladd jr. '29, Stephen E. Merrill '35, Professor Paul Nixon, Thomas P. Riley '39, Philip S. Wilder '23 and Alfred H. Fenton '31, secretary. Professor Robert P. T. Coffin '15 replaces Donovan D. Lancaster '27 who served last year and will not be available this summer.

The Orient

Richard P. Davis '49 is to be editor of the Orient for the paper's forthcoming volume seventy-nine, it was announced by retiring editor John H. Nichols '49 at the second annual Orient dinner held in the Moulton Union April 7. The guest speaker for the evening was John T. Gould '31.

The new annual dinners perform the double function of reviewing the editorial work of the past year and of heralding the new staff. Prizes are also awarded to members of the staff for outstanding work during the year. John T. Gould '31, editor of the Lisbon Enterprise and author of The Farmer Takes a Wife, spoke on the unique problems of country journalism and of some of the ingenious examples of feature story writing. President Sills spoke briefly on the relationship of the Orient to the administration and on the college policy of non-censorship of student publications.

Prizes went to William S. Augerson '47 for feature writing; Irving P. Fleishman '52 for business management; George F. McClelland II '49 for sports reporting; Joshua Curtis '50 for news writing; H. Bradford Henderson '52 for general improvement and Richard M. Elliott '48 for photography.

Invited guests present were F. E. "Red" Cousins '24 of the Portland Press Herald and Charles Wilkes of the Brunswick Record.

Foreign Students

The reputation of Bowdoin College as an educational institution has taken a sharp rise during the past year, thanks largely to a group of eight foreign students currently enrolled at the College. Since December of 1948 these students have been speaking on the average of once each week before assorted assemblies from Bangor to Boston. And the receptions they have received have been little short of astounding.

The whole thing started when Michael Halse of London, England approached Alfred H. Fenton '31, Publicity Director of the Sesquicentennial Fund. Mike, as with most all Bowdoin Plan students, was short of spending money. Under the Plan the College provides tuition and the fraternities offer free room and board. No provision is made for incidentals, however, and because of the exchange situation, foreign students have little spending money. Mike wanted some speaking engagements in order to earn some.

Seeing the publicity value in such an operation, Fenton promptly began writing letters to various clubs around the state and on December 8 Mike journeyed to Augusta to address the Men's Club of the Universalist Church. So well did the engagement go that Fenton decided to bring other foreign students into the picture. More letters went out and gradually things began to snowball.

At this writing, eight of the foreign students have had 24 engagements in the last six months with five other engagements in the making. In addition, single engagements have been filled by Peter J. DeTrey jr. '51 of Westwood, N. J. and Dr. E. E. Evans, Visiting Professor in Geography from Belfast, Ireland.

Service clubs head the list of audiences. To date Bowdoin speakers have addressed the Rotary Clubs of Portland, Bath, Lewiston, Belfast, Augusta and Boston; the Kiwanis Clubs of Augusta and Portland; and the Lions Clubs of Bangor, Belfast, Bath and Sanford. Other clubs which have engaged speakers include the Portland Club, Men's Clubs of the Universalist and Congregational Churches of Augusta and of the Congregational Church of Bath, the Lisbon Lobster Club, Morse High School of Bath, Augusta PTA, Biddeford Masonic Lodge, the Skowhegan Chamber of Commerce and the Kennebec Union of Women's Club of Waterville.

The Sanford Lions Club has been the students' biggest booster. Through the generosity of Mr. John Papas, a member of that club, arrangements were made to provide two Bowdoin Plan speakers each month from January through June.

Equally important in the operation have been the services of Richard M. Van Orden '51 of Grand Rapids, Mich. As Chairman of the Foreign Student Committee of the Student Council Van Orden has served as master of ceremonies at 15 of the meetings where foreign students were speaking. In this way Van Orden has been able to get in a few words about the Bowdoin Plan before introducing the speakers. He also has served as chauffeur.

It is very likely that the impetus of this effort will carry over to next year. Already the Sanford Lions Club has expressed a desire to hear the next group of Bowdoin Plan students which will arrive in the fall.

The Meddiebempsters

On Saturday evening, April 23, at Jordan Hall in Boston a delighted audience saw and heard something new. Octets from seven colleges demonstrated their skills at "Pied Piper harmony, very close but definitely not barber shop" with plenty of fifths and ninths. And there was also a sprinkling of well-restrained but well-received horse play of the sort which older alumni remember as an expected part of their Glee Club entertainments. Bowdoin's Meddiebempsters conceived, underwrote and staged the thoroughly enjoyed program. With them appeared the Williams Octet, the Bradford Tabooz, the Harvard Krokodioles, the Dartmouth Cadets, the Mount Holyoke V-8's and the Amherst D.Q.'s. It is to be hoped that an evening of Octets is to be a fixture on our musical calendar.
Alumni In The News

Bowdoin Men Who Have Been Making Headlines

WILLIAM B. NULTY '10, appointed in 1947 by Governor Horace Hildreth '25 a Superior Court justice, has been elevated to the Supreme Court by appointment of Governor Frederick Payne. A native of Buckfield, Judge Nulty prepared for Bowdoin at Hebron Academy. He taught at Portland and South Portland High Schools before entering Cornell University for graduate work. He pursued his law studies at Columbia and the University of Maine and was admitted to practice following study in the Portland office of Bradley and Linnell, of which firm he was long a member. In 1922 he was named Assistant United States District Attorney but his work has been largely for corporations, the Portland Company and the Canal National Bank among them.

Robert G. Albion '18 will be the first Gardiner Professor of Oceanic History and Affairs at Harvard University, where he has been a visiting lecturer on Oceanic History during the past year. Editor-in-chief of the ORIENT as an undergraduate, he has gained fame as a student of naval affairs and writer of books pertaining to our Merchant Marine. Professor of History at Princeton and administrator of summer sessions, Dr. Albion is recognized as an eminent naval historian. Recipient of Bowdoin's honorary Doctor of Letters last June, he made the Commencement Dinner response for the alumni.

S. ALLAN HOWES '25 has been elected Headmaster of Waynflete School in Portland. One of Bowdoin's Phi Beta Kappa athletes, he made his letter in track and captained the cross country team. He received his M.A. at Harvard and taught there for a year before going to Rhode Island State College. After some years on the faculty at Groton School and naval service in World War II as a teacher of anti-submarine tactics, he returned to Portland as Treasurer of E. Corey Company. His active work as a trustee of Waynflete School and as the School's acting director during the current school year has led to his return to the teaching profession.

MERRITT A. HEWETT '27 will become Headmaster of Kingswood School in Hartford, Connecticut next September. A cum laude graduate with varsity letters in football and track, he taught at Milton Academy during 1927-28 and spent the following year at Harvard Law School. He returned to the Milton faculty in 1929 and has since been a teacher of mathematics and history there as well as coach of football and track. Since 1944, Hewett has been Milton Academy's Registrar and Director of Admissions. He has been widely active in Milton and Boston civic affairs, serving as an executive of the Milton Civilian Defense Committee, the Greater Boston War Fund and the Greater Boston Community Council.

After more than twenty years in the service of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, CLARENCE H. JOHNSON '28 has been elected Vice-President and General Manager. Winner of the Smythe Mathematical Prize and member of Phi Beta Kappa, he graduated magna cum laude and went directly to the company as a student accountant. His service includes terms in Baltimore, Maryland and Richmond, Virginia where he held positions of increasing importance before being returned to the home office in Washington as auditor in 1945. A native of Topsham, Johnson prepared for Bowdoin in the Brunswick schools.

The new Headmaster of the Thacher School, in Ojai, California, beginning with the opening of the fall term, will be NEWTON K. CHASE '33. The announcement was made recently by Mr. Richard Bard, President of the Board of Trustees. A native of Blue Hill, Chase prepared for Bowdoin at Phillips Academy, Andover. Graduating cum laude, he is the nephew of Professor Mary Ellen Chase of Smith College who received Bowdoin's honorary Doctor of Letters at his Commencement. Before going to Thacher to teach History and the Classics, he was on the faculty of the Deane School, Santa Barbara, California and the Gunner School in Washington, Connecticut. He has been at the Thacher School since 1938 and during the past year has been Acting Headmaster.

The Orient deplored again the “rapid decay of college singing ... many good voices are found in college.” It suggested the choosing of a glee club by competition. The college orchestra evidenced “a great deal of natural talent and a high degree of musical culture” at a successful concert given early in the winter term.

In an article in the Brunswick Telegraph, Prof. Vose stated that the iron bridge between Brunswick and Topsham at the foot of the falls, and the bay bridge, lower down the river, were unsafe. A public meeting was arranged at which he presented his conclusions which were subsequently confirmed by a committee appointed by the selectmen.

A gift of $20,000 from the Stone estate enabled the College to complete Memorial Hall.

Deploiring the small size of the freshman class, the Orient blamed the regulation which required an annual payment of $20 to the College by non-resident students living outside the dormitories. This payment of $80 during the four-year course “forms no inconsiderable item to a student who is paying his way through college, and those in nine out of ten cases are the ones who room outside ... The above fact has been copied in the papers far and wide, and zealously spread by the opponents of Bowdoin ... If an $80 barrier is set up before them ... we cannot expect many of them to enter.”

Prof. J. B. Sewall presented $1000, which was expected to yield an annual income of $50 to be apportioned equally between a Greek and a Latin prize.

In baseball “The Bowdoinos” beat “The Colbys” 14 to 5, but lost to “The Bates” 9 to 8. Other games were against local teams. “The idea that sports are an injury to the College has now comparatively but a few supporters.”

The Ivy Day festivities occurred Thursday and Friday, June 5-6.

The track and field contests at the fair grounds included a few items familiar seventy years later; viz., — throwing the 16-pound hammer (60.1 feet); 100-yard dash (10½ seconds); 220-yard dash (35½ seconds); 100-yard hurdle (16½ seconds); running high jump (4½ feet). Other events were the hop, skip and jump; putting 31-pound shot; standing high jump; one mile walk; throwing baseball; standing long jump; three-legged race; potato race; three standing long jumps; tug of war; and 100-yard backward race.

All three lower classes entered crews in the boat race on Ivy Day morning, and all three crews finished, the Sophomores winning.

President Hyde gave a talk in chapel on the tobacco habit. “It was a broad and sensible idea of the subject which is so much before students the world over.”

A new system of ranking was introduced which remained in force for many years. Scholarship was ranked on a scale of ten; attendance on a scale of six; the two averaged resulted in a scale of 8; 7.5 to 8 was A, and so on down to E, D being the passing rank.

The scheme, opposed at first, soon became familiar, and continued successfully until it broke down under some of the administrative incidents. Absences, except for representation of the College; e.g., in athletic sports, were not excused unless the absence continued for a week. Naturally, illnesses of less than a week became rare, and the taking of a “week off” to see the sights in Boston or go fishing was not uncommon. Such absences were supposed to be excused by medical certificates or other justifiable evidence, but as time went on the system just did not work. One phase that developed in later years was the “class cut.” The professor sitting at his desk would find his audience reduced or vanished. Those few who disregarded the cut were regarded as scabs unless excused by the fact that they were scholarship holders or prize contestants whose standing might be affected by participating in the cut. The class cut was eventually outlawed, but the ranking system on which it was founded did not long survive.

A new Bowdoin seal devised by Alger V. Currier, a Gardiner, Maine, artist, was adopted by the Governing Boards. At first the Orient characterized it as “the handsomest in the land”, but conceded that “it will take a long time for the older alumni to countenance the new seal, beautiful as it is.” The “dear, stupid and round old face of the earlier seal has smiled from the sheeptkins of Bowdoin’s great men and small ... Not without a pang ... do we say goodbye to old roly-poly.” Later issues of the Orient spoke of hot discussion among the alumni, and showed that the new seal failed to meet their approval. The Boards subsequently cancelled the action, restored the seal as we still have it and permitted the reissue of diplomas which carried the short-lived artistic Currier seal.

The substantial Jackson residence at the corner of Maine and Potter streets having been thoroughly remodeled, the Alpha Delta Phi fraternity took possession of it. This was the first fraternity house at Bowdoin. Other chapter houses were soon under construction. To make way for the construction of the Psi U house, the square Thompson house was whisked on runners up Maine Street, and through what is now Longfellow Avenue, to its present location facing that street. Many spans of horses and yokes of oxen furnished the motive power. Hundreds of spectators added to scores of drivers made a lively scene.

Bowdoin received $1-20 of the three million dollar Fayerweather estate. The receipt of the fund permitted a long needed raise of faculty salaries.

The glee club had a successful Massachusetts trip with concerts at Steinert Hall and at Wellesley. Harvey D. Gibson ’02 made the arrangements.
A rumor that President Hyde had been called to Amherst produced from students and alumni expressions of the pride and satisfaction of Bowdoin men in their president.

A faculty regulation against submitting the same document for more than one prize gave general satisfaction.

Clubs on the Deutscher Verein plan were being organized in various courses.

A successful precursor to the modern Institutes took place with lectures by Edward Stanwood on Four Men Who Just Missed the Presidency; Rev. John Sewall on The Peary Expedition of which he was a member; U. S. Representative D. S. Alexander on Politics; Professors Emery and McDonald pro and con on Imperialism; Professors Chapman, Hutchins and two visiting professors. Electric lighting newly installed in Memorial Hall added to the success of the series.

Dutton won the Class of '68 Prize with a discussion of the Patriotism of Peace.

Bowdoin invited sixty fitting schools to hold an interscholastic meet on Whittier Field, in place of the defunct interscholastic athletic association.

In November, Frederic E. T. Tillotson, pianist, gave a concert in Memorial Hall, assisted by Mrs. Burnett, 'cellist, and Miss Jacobs, contralto, "Mr. Tillotson is one of America's foremost pianists, and although only twenty-five years old his fame is widely known."

The Annie Talbot Cole lecture was by the distinguished architect Ralph Adams Cram on the subject of Spain and Spanish Art.

Charles Hildreth was elected president of the Y.M.C.A. and football captain for the coming season.

All three of the Maine colleges and the University of Maine joined in a rule barring freshmen from representing an institution in athletics during the first semester.

As a memorial to Bowdoin men serving in the recent world war, New York architects designed a rostrum which was severely criticized, and the plan was eventually abandoned in favor of the memorial flagstaff.

The graduate manager system in athletics was working out successfully after two years' operation. Prof. Thomas Means was the first such manager, and was succeeded by Lyman Cousens, '02. Responsibility was centered in the graduate manager, and a system of accounting was set up devised by Prof. Morgan Cushing. In one of a series of reports in the Orient Mr. Cousens spoke of the fact that financial difficulties were "due to the depreciated dollar."

George E. Hill won the '68 prize. His subject: Calvin Coolidge.

The student council investigated the honor system in effect in other colleges, but were not as yet ready to recommend it for Bowdoin.

The relay team defeated Dartmouth and Brown at the BAA games and Williams at the American Legion games.

Harvey D. Gibson '02 was elected a trustee, Edward Stanwood '61 having died.

The Boards recommended that membership of the freshman class be limited to one hundred fifty, and that preference be given to students seeking the A.B. degree.

A memorial service was held for Woodrow Wilson with Judge Charles F. Johnson '79 of the United States Circuit Court as the principal speaker.

Alumni Clubs

AUGUSTA

President Emery O. Beune '04 presided at the annual meeting of the Kennebec Bowdoin Club held at the Augusta House, Wednesday evening, April 20. Many alumni attending legislative sessions were present as well as a large turn out of members. Dean Kendrick reported on the State of the College and Coach Adam Walsh talked about athletics and undergraduate activities. Following the business session, Coach Walsh showed football movies. The following new officers were elected: President, Richard B. Sanborn '40; Vice-Presidents, David B. Soule '38 and Almon B. Sullivan '19; Secretary-Treasurer, Donald W. Parks '28; Council Member, Nathan S. Weston '08.

BANGOR

Nearly 60 members including three from Bar Harbor braved miserable weather to attend the annual meeting of the Penobscot Bowdoin Club at the Penobscot Valley Country Club on March 1. Coach Adam Walsh was the speaker of the evening. He reported on campus doings, outlined the athletic situation and made a strong plea for alumni help in finding able entering students. A showing of football pictures and the Bowdoin-on-the-Air tape recording of the Bates game were seen and heard with interest.

Officers for the new year are: President, S. Braley Gray '34; Vice-President, George F. Peabody '34; Secretary-Treasurer, Vale G. Marvin '36; Council Member, David G. Means '33.

BOSTON

About 150 members of the Boston Bowdoin Club attended the annual dinner meeting at the Statler Hotel on Thursday, April 14. Pre-dinner activity was under the watchful eye of Val Ringer '42 of the hotel staff. Bob Hayden '34 presided over the dispensing of tasty oysters fresh from his home town of Cotuit. President Harold W. Davies '10 urged all members to cooperate with Geo F. Stanwood '38 in making the annual Bowdoin Night at the Symphony Pops on May 19 a success and called attention to the intercollegiate Octets Concert at Jordan Hall on April 23. He praised the efficient work of Treasurer Roy W. McNiven '41, who reported a goodly balance despite one subsidized meeting and rather sketchy payment of club dues.

Special dinner music was supplied by the Bay State Four, a Barber-Shop Quartet, under the leadership of Geo F. Stanwood. His associates were Milt Spencer, Ian Fraser and Herb Barton.

At the business session, by-laws were amended to permit a larger board of directors and the slate of nominees presented by John Tarbell '26, was elected. New officers are: President, William P. Sawyer '36; Vice-Presidents, Stanwood L. Hanson '18 and Theodore L. Fowler '24; Secretary, Geoffrey R. Stanwood '38; Treasurer, Everett P. Pope '41.

President Sills gave his yearly report on the State of the College for the 32nd consecutive time before the Boston Club. He stated that Bowdoin was in good financial shape and that, thanks to more than a million dollars contributed to the Sesquicentennial Fund and recent bequests amounting to about a million more, there was in sight some considerable relief for the critical years ahead. He warned that publicly supported institutions would be keener competitors for good entering students and that Bowdoin’s return to a more normal size occasioned heavy income losses. It is most important that the College receive continued financial support that the capital objectives of the Sesquicentennial Fund be reached and that the efforts of the yearly Alumni Fund to meet rising current needs be successful. President Sills took issue with the economic phases of President Truman’s report on education; he believes the proposed program of Federal aid will deprive students of needed incentives.

The President praised the Bowdoin Plan under which foreign students attend Bowdoin and gave hearty credit to the undergraduates for starting and carrying on the plan. He announced that ground would be broken for the new Classroom Building next June and that plans for the new Chemical Building were progressing.

Atomic Energy Commissioner Sumner T. Pike ’13 held the close attention of his audience with his comments on the development of atomic energy. Regrettting certain published remarks to the effect that the U.S. was producing a million dollar atom bomb each week, Commissioner Pike admitted that we are far in the lead in developing constructive uses of nuclear energy. Possession of the atom bomb may not have prevented war with Russia but it has had its influence. Industrial and scientific processes are being developed which will reduce time elements from 50 to 100 years to from 8 to 10 years. He pointed out the importance to medical research of some recent discoveries. “Medical freshmen know some things about human body cells which even Medical School Deans didn’t know two years ago.”

CHICAGO

The annual meeting of the Chicago Bowdoin Club was held at the Fair Restaurant on April 19. Fifteen members were present. Officers elected for the new year are: President, Richard M. Lampert ’32, Secretary-Treasurer, Albert S. Long jr. ’44, Council Member, Walter N. Emerson ’11. The club hopes that a representative from the campus may be with the club soon. Plans for a meeting will be made when it is known that a college staff member is available. The Secretary’s address is 735 Michigan, Wilmette, Illinois. He hopes that Bowdoin men newly located in the Chicago area will contact him.

DALLAS

Convener John Young rounded up a small but enthusiastic group to greet Harry Palmer ’04 February 22. The College emissary was shown all over Dallas and was eagerly plied with questions about Bowdoin. Jim Esson ’32 and Jack Marble ’41 joined the dinner party at the Italian Village.

LOS ANGELES

The Bowdoin Club of Southern California met for dinner at the Mona Lisa Restaurant in Los Angeles on Wednesday, March 23. Sherman Shumway ’17 reported on the progress of the Sesquicentennial Fund canvass of California alumni. George C. Wheeler ’01 gave an account of the mid-winter meeting of the Alumni Council. It was decided that, in lieu of club dues, there should be a Spring gathering which would produce revenue for meeting expenses. Officers for the coming year are: President, Herbert H. Foster ’16; Vice-President, Donald C. Hight ’16; Secretary, Lendal I. McLellan ’23.

NEW YORK

President Rolliston Woodbury ’22 staged an informal ladies’ night dinner meeting of the New York Bowdoin Club at Hans Jaeger’s Restaurant, 85th Street and Lexington Avenue, on Thursday, April 21. Nearly 200 attended, most of them younger alumni. The effort to round up more club members by providing a lively program at a lower cost was notably successful. Stan Lomax, noted sportscaster, and Mr. Ford Frick, President of the National League, were unable to attend. A friend of President Woodbury’s introduced Professor Briscou who entertained with amusing remarks on many subjects and Coach

Adam Walsh gave a report of the athletic situation and prospects at Bowdoin. Coach Walsh paid tribute to the excellent field work being done by Admissions Director Shaw and his assistant Paul Hazelton and to the Alumni Fund which was making this work possible. He reported that a welcome revival of class unity and spirit was noticeable on campus and that from the more than 150 schools visited by the Admissions staff applications had been received from more high-ranking athletically - inclined schoolboys than in many years. The members agreed that more similar meetings should be held.

PITTSBURGH

Thirty-two, including wives and parents of Bowdoin undergraduates, gathered at the University Club on April 25 for the dinner meeting of the Pittsburgh Bowdoin Club. President Sills was the guest of honor. The report of the meeting reads that the President's talk of conditions at the College "was all to the good but seeing Casey after several years was treat enough in itself." Among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Innes of Shadyside Academy. Mr. Innes, a Yale graduate, is a true friend of Bowdoin and "an alumnus by adoption." He has in no small measure been the reason why there are at present twelve undergraduates from the Pittsburgh area. It was agreed that President Sills' all too brief visit and the presence of Bowdoin parents had done much to make the meeting outstandingly successful. The secretary, Albert E. Hurrell '20 is not convinced that he knows all the Bowdoin men within reach of Pittsburgh and urges all who are near to communicate with him. His address is 502 Walnut Road, Ben Avon, Pittsburgh 2, Pa.

SAN FRANCISCO

The Bowdoin Club of Northern California met at the Bohemian Club in San Francisco on February 16. Convener Ray Deston '30 and Henry Hawes '10 arranged the meeting, which was called to greet Harry Palmer '04, who reported on Bowdoin activities and particularly the Sesquicentennial Fund. Present, besides the Convener, were Capt. F. W. Carll '18, Myron Sprague '19, Hamilton Oakes '29, B. R. Vining '23 and Dexter Foss '45. An eye affliction kept Henry Hawes from attending and regrets were received from Crossman '96, Koughan '15, Redman '34, Gibson '11, William '05, Brett '05 and Davis M'06. The Bowdoin group around San Francisco is growing and plans are underway for another meeting soon. The Convener is General Agent for the John Hancock Insurance Company with offices in the Russ Building. He hopes all newly arrived Bowdoin men will make their presence known.

SEATTLE

On April 12 a group of five Bowdoin men met for luncheon at the Elk's Club in Seattle. The gathering was the result of efforts by Paul W. Muehlen '48 to make Washington State alumni acquainted. Considering the distances involved, his first meeting may be regarded as successful. Those present beside Muehlen were William F. Finn '05, Dwight S. Robinson '07, Kenneth R. MacLean '26 and Charles H. Burdell '34. It was agreed that other meetings should be held and an attempt made to reach more alumni in the area. Paul Muehlen will be glad to hear from any who will contact him at 4510 West Findley Street, Seattle.

WASHINGTON

Seventy-five members and their ladies attended the annual dinner meeting of the Washington Bowdoin Club at the Shoreham Hotel on April 27. President Robert Hale '10 introduced for brief responses Justice Harold Burton '09, Maine Senators Margaret Chase Smith and Owen Brewster '09, Illinois Senator Paul H. Douglas '13, former Senator Wallace White '99 and Atomic Energy Commissioner Sumner T. Pike '13. President Sills was the speaker of the evening. Following comments of educational trends of the day, he gave his report on the state of the College and discussed some of the problems, financial and otherwise, which face the Administration. Clarence H. Johnson '28 was elected President for the ensuing year and David R. Porter '06, Secretary.

WILMINGTON

The active group of members of the Philadelphia Bowdoin Club who live in and near Wilmington held a third dinner meeting at the Hob Tea Room on March 14. Sixteen of the twenty-five known to be nearby attended. Frank C. Evans '10 gave a report of the mid-winter meeting of the Alumni Council and William K. Simonton '43 showed colored slides of his honeymoon trip through Mexico. Another meeting is planned for Monday, May 23. It is hoped that a member of the College staff may attend.

Books

The winds blow back and forth across boundary lines between countries with an almost imperceptible motion that tends to divide the world into private little pockets. Almost as freely do intellectual movements, the life currents of human development, flow across oceans, mountains, and customs barriers. Where German thought ends and American thought begins is as difficult to fix as the difference between Canadian and American air. Few of us realize this fact because few of us steep ourselves so thoroughly in both American and German thought that we are able to conceive that the seemingly irreconcilable differences are frequently the merest external phenomena, the froth on the surface of a deep stream.

Professor Hewlett-Thayer does not make these statements in his Hoffmann: Author of the Tales, but to this reviewer the conclusion seemed unavoidable as he reads this important work on German Romanticism. On almost every page of this book about a great German the reader is reminded of a great American. Edgar Allan Poe. The differences in languages between the two geniuses become extremely superficial compared to the overwhelming fact of similarity in their lives, in their spirit, philosophy, style, and influence.

Professor Harvey W. Hewlett-Thayer, born in Woolwich across the river from Bath, Maine, a Bowdoin College graduate in the Class of 1895, former Chairman of the Modern Language Department of Princeton University, specialist in the German languages and literatures, a worthy successor to that other Bowdoin-educated Professor of German, Henry W. Longfellow, is thoroughly prepared by years of foreign study, years of teaching at Princeton, years of research, to act as an intermediary between Germany and the United States. In this book, he lets his New England mind and education probe deep into the life and work of a German Romanticist, seeking to give, for the first time in English, a comprehensive picture of Ernst Theodor Amadeus Hoffmann. Through this picture one sees the outline of a powerful thought movement in Germany and thus comes to a picture of the German mind. Then immediately, through its resemblances to the mind of Edgar Allan Poe, a man with roots deep within American soil, the reader must come to wonder if there is any real difference between American and German thought, once one is below the deceiving and meaningless surface characteristics.

Almost any American will associate the name of this book with the unforgettable been written only by the American specialist in German. Not only is the book unique in being the only English study of Hoffmann written in English, but it is most unusual in being a study of German literature written in style that does not grate on American ears.

The book is an example of the service to America that the American-born specialist in German-studies can perform. In days when the foreigner is taught to take over completely the teaching of foreign languages, and native American students are turning perforce to other fields of study and research, this book offers a thrilling and encouraging example of what native Americans can do in the study of a foreign literature.

Thomas A. Riley

Some years ago I wrote a book about my family's recipes. Ever since then I have had a lot of undeserved reputation as a connoisseur of fine cookery. I have tried to point out that the recipes in my Mainstays of Maine were mostly not mine but the family's, that I am an amateur at cookery, and that I am an expert only on the eating end of the family dishes. But it has been no use. Expert gourmet I have become, and nothing I can say may make any difference. So when the Books Editor of our Bowdoin ALUMNUS handed me this book on the eating places of New York City to review, I simply swallowed hard and took it.

Of the 210 restaurants listed in this expert guide to the art of urbane eating I have eaten at only four or five. Most of this terrain is terra incognita to me. My mouth waters constantly at these concoctions, but most of the dishes are sealed mysteries to me. I can speak only as an outsider here. Yet maybe I can say something solid about this book. It has taught me to love the joys of the New York cuisine.

The book makes my mouth water, as I say. And that is a good sign. The mere calling of the roll of the dishes listed is a kind of poetry: "The restaurant has good variety. For instance, you might find braised breast of lamb Madera, Hungarian beef goulash, creamed turkey and mushrooms, spaghetti with meat sauce Bolognaise, poached egg Benedict with English muffin, baby flounder sauté meunière, baked Boston scrod Portuguese, and broiled fresh mackerel on the same menu."

Just as the catalogue of ships in the Iliad can make even the veriest landlubber glow, so here these constant lyrics of menus can kindle the mere snatcher en passant at rolls and coffee in the Penn Station. The next best thing to eating fine foods is reading about them. I suppose, and this volume is a cornucopia of good eating and magic of emotion. You can see the author behind these Anodes of sole à la Ritz, terrapin Maryland, filet of sole Margnery, duckling bigarde (whatever on this sweet earth that is), filet mignon Mirabeau, frog's legs Provençale, and spaghetti Caruso. You can catch a glimpse of him and truly blessed and friends between mouthfuls. You can see that this writer is a warm human being who glows and grows as he eats. He does not check his imagination or emotion with his hat. He takes both with him to the table. He is alert to see the poety in fine food: "I can think of no better meal at the easy Penguin than the onion soup, which is excellent, and the fried chicken, which comes all wrapped up in a napkin, like a Christmas surprise. When you fold it back you find golden-brown pieces of crispy chicken, topped by a hot muffin or roll with a square of butter melting inside."

In the Café Chambord—where I once ate Maine lobster transfigured in absinthe and where the head chef nearly knifed a waiter for walking heavy-footed across the floor and causing his soufflé to fall—Mr. Dana becomes lyrical: "From jambon to cérises jubilée, from Madeira aperitif to Grand Armagnac, the disciples of good eating are truly blessed ... The hors d'œuvre table is wheeled up, the jambon inviting in its steel vise. Razor-thin slices of the savoy ham are soon on your plate to relish with a piece of French bread. "For a soup I can think of none better than one of the delicate potages like cream of watercress or strimbebec. One of soup, holding its virtues under a hot crust of cheese, may send you home in rhapsodies."

The book is an excellent compromise between realism and rhapsody, statistics and wise economics and flutterings of the heart over what has been, since long before any of the religions we live by now were heard of, the religion of the good table. To anyone who has time between trains to explore the gastronomy of New York City, I recommend this book as an invaluable guide, not only to joy but to thirst in feasting. To anyone who likes to read about a human being having a good time for himself, I recommend it also. This includes about everybody and just about makes it unanimous.

John Gould has done it again. He has fashioned another convenient and appropriate book upon which to hang another collection of his delightful yarns. The introduction of his bride to down east folks and ways of life served in _Farmer Takes A Wife_. The House That Jacob Built made effective use of the rebuilding of Great-Grandfather Jacob Gould's home on the Lisbon Ridge farm.

_In And One To Grow On_, the famed and widely-read member of Bowdoin's Class of 1931 makes a new group of tales a part of a boy's growing up in a Maine seacoast village, not so many decades ago. In his brief foreword, the author says, "Some folks will assume my town is Freeport, Maine... an unwarranted assumption." Unwarranted or not, readers who know their Casco Bay are certain to see familiar things in the gay drawing on the book's jacket and murmurr. "It could be." And John does admit that "the town had moved inland a little since the days of sail." By the way, the line drawings by F. Wendroth Saunders are genial.

Whatever the locus, _And One To Grow On_ is recommended without reservation. The people in it live and so does the town. Not a few, who had that rich privilege of small Maine town growing up, will experience plenty of chuckle-punctuated re-living as they read. Boats and sea captains, school and fishing, clambakes and May baskets, the general store and town meeting, natives and summer folks, cutting ice and doing chores, cider and cake sales; they are all here along with a galaxy of town characters and a good measure of the author's homespun comment.

"Yes, indeed, John Gould has done it again."

Necrology

1884 CHARLES EVERT ADAMS M.D., 86, died April 4 at his home in Bangor, after a long illness. A native of Bangor he attended the public schools there prior to entering Bowdoin. For two years after his graduation, he was employed in the land and lumber office of S. and J. Adams, Bangor. After receiving his M.A. degree in 1887 he became director and instructor of gymnastics at Colby College. During this time he was studying at the Maine Medical School, from which he graduated in 1890. He then became director of the gymnasium at Rutgers College, and while there was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. He spent several months in Europe studying forestry in the famed Black Forest of Germany. He was a member of the Bangor Chamber of Commerce, the Bird Conservation Club and the Historical Society. His fraternity was Delta Kappa Epsilon. Surviving is his niece, Miss Lydia A. Adams.

1886 It is now possible to amplify the brief February notice concerning the death of James W. Calderwood. He died on April 18, 1917 at the age of 83, at his home in East Weymouth, Mass. A native of Quincy, Mass., he was educated at the local schools prior to entering Bowdoin. He came to Weymouth in 1912 and taught music at the Beverly schools. He was also the leader of the Beverly's Men's Glee Club. He served as director of the Weymouth Orchestra and Band; and for one time led the Wollaston Glee Club. A member of the Blue Lodge of Brighton, Mass. and the Commandery in Malden, Mass., he was also a member of the Weymouth Rotary and Lions Clubs and the Weymouth Teachers Association. His sister, Miss Isabelle Calderwood of Weymouth, survives.

1887 ELLIOT BOUTON TORREY, nationally-known painter and dean of San Diego artists, died at a San Diego hospital on March 10, at the age of 82. He had been ill for two years. Born at Hardwick, Vermont, he prepared for Bowdoin at North Yarmouth Academy. His fraternity was Alpha Delta Phi. Upon graduation from Bowdoin, he went to Lynn, Mass. to work in electricity. In 1893 he turned to painting. Before settling down on the West Coast, he painted in France and New York City. He had won many honors for his paintings of children and for his other portraits, landscapes and marine views. His work has been exhibited in the Paris Salon, National Academy of Design, Salmagundi Club, New York; Corcoran Gallery, Washington and the Carnegie International Exposition in Pittsburgh. Permanent exhibitions are at the Chicago Art Institute where he studied; Cleveland Museum of Art, San Diego Fine Arts Gallery, Boston Art Club, Akron Art Institute and the Walker Art Building. Surviving are his two brothers, Joseph Torrey ‘81 and Dr. Charles Torrey ‘84.

1889 JOHN MURRAY PHELAN, 81, died suddenly from a heart ailment at his home March 27. He was born at Mendon, Mass., where he attended the local schools prior to preparing for Bowdoin at Westbrook Seminary in Portland. His fraternity was Zeta Psi. For forty-five years he was with the Mutual Life Insurance Company and was assistant actuary in the New York office at the time of his retirement in 1935. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Helen Dunklee Phelan and two daughters, Miss Mary Phelan of Rutherford, N. J. and Mrs. Burton Hess of Buffalo, N. Y.

1894 REV. ALFRED VIEAZIE BLISS, former secretary of the Massachusetts Congregational Conference and Missional Society, died March 3 at the age of 77. He was a native of Bangor, where he prepared for Bowdoin at the public high school. When he was an undergraduate, he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and became a member of the Delta Kappa Epsilon fraternity. From Bowdoin he went to the Andover Theological Seminary, graduating in 1897. He held Congregational pastorates at Ludlow, Vt., Utica, N. Y. and Taunton, Mass. There are no survivors.

1896 JOHN EDWIN Frost, 71, died March 7 at a Concord, N. H. hospital. Born at Eliot, he prepared for Bowdoin at Berwick Academy. He was a member of Delta Upsilon and Phi Beta Kappa fraternities. After graduation from Bowdoin, he taught school for several years at Plainfield, Mass., and at Strong and Phillips. He was a veteran of the Spanish-American War. Employed by the John Hancock Insurance Company for 27 years, he was superintendent of the Concord district when he retired in 1927 because of poor health. He was a member of the Joseph Warren Lodge of Masons in Boston. Mrs. Lillian M. Frost, his widow, and nephew and six nieces survive.

1899 That the Class Secretary reports that word of the death of Arthur S. Libby had been received from his widow. Further details are not now known.
1900 Percy Clifford Giles, 75, died at the Portland City Hospital, July 29, 1948, after a brief illness. Born at Boothbay Harbor, he prepared for Bowdoin at Lincoln Academy in Newcastle. Active in intramural athletics, he was a member of Kappa Sigma. He was principal of the Denmark High School for one year before going to the Philippines where he taught school until 1905. On his return to this country he served as high school principal at Hubbardston, Provincetown and Stowe, Mass. and as a teacher at Woonsocket, R. I. Several years ago, he returned to Boothbay Harbor and, in 1916, he was elected to the Town Board of A. T. He was a member of the Committee on Odes, the choral music group, and was an officer of the Main Street Athletic Association, and a member of the Portland Yacht Club. He died in 1907 as the result of a fishing party accident. Surviving are his widow and a second son.

1901 John Alexander Pierce, 70, died March 1, 1895, in Chicago, Ill., after a long illness. He was born in Portland, and attended Portland High School prior to entering Bowdoin. He continued to prepare for Bowdoin at the University of Maine. In 1895, he was elected to the Class of 1899. During his second year at the University of Maine, he was a member of the Crown and Cofin, the freshman track team, the Committee on Odes, the choral music group, and was editor-in-chief of the Bugle. His fraternity was Psi Upsilon. After graduation he worked as a journalist and author for the New York Sun. In 1897, he served as a drama editor for the New York Herald Tribune and did free lance writing until 1925 when he went to Paris, France. Returning to this country, he was appointed to the staff of the American Embassy in Mexico City. Surviving are his sister, Miss Evalina Pierce and two brothers, Thomas L. and Maurice R. Pierce.

1903 Herbert Ellery Thompson, M. D., 71, died March 29 at a Bangor Hospital, after a long illness. He was born in Standish, where he received his education prior to coming to Bowdoin. After graduation, he taught successively for one year each at Potter and Wisconsin Academies and at Claremont, N. H. High School; for another year, he was a professor of biology at Bowdoin. He later entered the Maine Medical School and was graduated in 1899. Following a year's service at the Maine Eye and Ear Infirmary in Portland, during which time he took up pathology as a specialty, he became pathologist of the Eastern Maine General Hospital in 1910. There he stayed until his retirement in 1942, except for the few years he served in the Maine State Department of Health. He was a member of the Order of the Mystic Shrine, a past president of the Bangor-Brewer Lions Club and the Bangor Symphony Orchestra. His daughters, Miss Alice Josephine Thompson, survives.

1904 Herbert Weymouth Cass Sr., 67, died April 1 at his home in Dover-Foxcroft, ME. He was born in Dover-Foxcroft, where he attended the local schools and the Foxcroft Academy before entering Bowdoin. He also attended the Boston University Law School. His fraternity was Beta Theta Pi. For several years, his business was interior and exterior decorators of homes under the firm name of Herbert W. Cass and Son. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Estelle Cass and his son, Herbert W. Cass Jr.

1905 Robert Knight Eaton, 65, died March 26 at his home in Chestnut, S. C. He was born in Providence, R. I., and spent his early years in Bratenwill, where he taught at the school there. In 1895, he returned to Boothbay Harbor and, in 1901, he was elected to the Class of 1903. He was a member of the Mandolin-Guitar Club, the History Club, the Ivy Day Committee and his class baseball team. His fraternity was Delta Kappa Epsilon. After graduation, he worked at the Philadelphia Textile Institute, where he was employed as a textile engineer by the Whittin Machine Company at Whittinsville, Mass. and later by the Cabot Manufacturing Company in Bratenwill. During World War I, in which he served as a First Lieutenant in the Chemical Warfare Service, he went to Clemson College as a Professor of Weaving and Designing in 1923. During World War II, he served as Acting Dean at Clemson. He retired from academic life shortly before his death. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Lena B. Eaton; one son, Russell B. Eaton of Landberg, Pa.; one daughter, Mrs. Howard L. Hunter of Cleveland; one sister, Mrs. Felix A. Burton of Waban, Mass. and three grandchildren.

1909 Edgar Ford Sewall M. D., 63, a practicing physician in Somerville, Mass. for the past 35 years, died suddenly March 22 at his home. Born in Newburg, he prepared for Bowdoin at Somerville Latin School. In college, he was a member of the Massachusetts Club and was a member of the varsity track and football teams. His fraternity was Delta Upsilon. He was graduated from the Tufts College Medical School in 1913. He was a member of the Kiwanis Club of Somerville, the Massachusetts Medical Society and the King Solomon Lodge, A.F. and A.M. Survivors include his widow, Mrs. Edna Sewall, a son, Dr. Edgar F. Sewall Jr., 39, a daughter, Mrs. Stuart F. McDonald, a brother, Arthur J. and six grandchildren.

1926 Paul Ashton Smith, 45, died suddenly in a Bangor hospital on March 15. He was born in Corinna and attended Corinna Union Academy and Phillips-Exeter Academy. His fraternity was Alpha Chi Omega of Boston. He was a member of the Phi Delta Kappa fraternity. He attended Harvard Medical School and was a member of the Maine Medical Society and served as a physician in the Maine Medical School. He died in a hospital in Bangor after being admitted for treatment of a heart condition. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Stuart F. McDonald, a brother, Arthur J. and six grandchildren.

1942 Charles Haskell Bowers M. D., 59, died February 21 at Baltimore, Md. Born in Newton Highlands, Mass., he attended Newton High School and Huntingdon School before entering Bowdoin. He was a member of the freshman and varsity track and cross country teams, and a member of the college band. After graduation from Bowdoin, he entered the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine and received his medical degree in 1915. He interned at Rochester, N. Y. At the time of his death he was serving as the resident pathologist at the Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. He was a veteran of World War II. Surviving are his widow and son, Walter P. Bowers II. He was a member of Kappa Sigma and Phi Beta Pi.

MEDICAL SCHOOL

1898 Samuel Wright Crittenden M. D., 92, died March 27. He was a native of Oswego, Pa. He attended Dartmouth College prior to entering the Maine Medical School. He served his internship at the Hare Hospital in Haverhill, Mass. For 16 years he was assistant superintendent of the Boston State Hospital and concurrently was an instructor in psychiatry at Tufts School of Medicine. He was a veteran of World War I.

1899 Oscar Edwin Hanson M. D. died March 29 at Greene. He was born at Lebanon in 1872. He attended the Nichols Latin School and was graduated from Bates College in 1896 prior to entering the Maine Medical School. He practiced medicine at Greene from 1899 until his retirement in 1948. He was a member of the Maine Medical Association. Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Sadie M. Hanscom and his two sons, Robert O. Hanscom of Lewiston and Basil C. Hanscom of Waterville.

Where There's A Will There's A Way to help Bowdoin College

The College has received the following legacies:

$17,372.88 from Walter L. Sabin, of Milford, Conn., to establish a scholarship for students from Oxford County.

$10,000 from William N. Crownell of New York, for the general purposes of the College.
News of the Classes

1884 Ernest Smith writes that he has just completed the willow section for Dr. Harrington's book, Flora of Colorado.

Charles Torrey, "dean" of all Protestant creative Biblical scholars and Yale's Professor Emeritus of Semitic Languages, recently read a paper on "The Relation of the Moham dean Koran to the Bible" at the 159th annual meeting of the American Oriental Society in Harkness Hall at New Haven, Conn.

1886 In a mid-winter issue of the Pulp and Paper magazine, there is an article commemorating Walter Wentworth for his 50 years service in the field. He has been manager of the Penobscot Chemical Fibre Company at Great Works since 1899.

1887 Leander Varney's address is 7 Hilltop Road, Bronxville, N.Y.

1889 William Emery still keeps up his interest in genealogical and historical research, his latest published compilation having been the genealogy of the prominent New Bedford family of Retch. Author of half a dozen books and numerous manuscript family records, he has explored the history of various leading Maine and Massachusetts families. For the Sylvia Ann Howland trustees in other years, he ascertained the 459 heirs under the million dollar will of an aunt of the famous Hetty Green.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Furbish observed their 52nd wedding anniversary on March 10. Lory Prentiss is planning to make a cross country trip from California to attend his sixtieth reunion in June.

1895 Word has been received by the College of the death of Arthur Wiley. Further details are not yet known.

Edgar Meade Simpson, who has been "lost" in the college records for many years, is the owner and manager of the three Diamond S Ranches at Hood, Cal. He writes an interesting account of his experiences. Following fifteen years at sea, during which he was master of a four-masted barkentine and served with the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, he spent several years at his father's Oregon mill and shipyard. Simpson's hobby is the collection of old stage coaches; they have been used in several motion pictures. There are two Simpson sons, Meade 18 and Michael 16. Their father hopes their school grades may permit them to come east to Bowdoin.

1903 Secretary, Clement F. Robinson
200 Main Street, Brunswick

Franklin Lawrence has been elected a director of the Bates Manufacturing Company of Lewiston.

Donald MacCormick is retired from the William Penn Charter School and living in Ellsworth.

Their experience may help answer your career question

The five men pictured above were among the large number who last year asked us a lot of questions about career opportunities.

One of their favorites — and probably yours too — went something like this: “What kind of earnings can I expect to make, especially during my first few years?”

In a way, that’s a difficult question, because the answer depends entirely on you.

Perhaps the best way to answer it here is to give you some figures on what others have done. As an example, let’s take the young men you see at the top of this page.

They are the five new men taken on last year by one of our Boston agencies. They ranged in age from 24 to 31. Only one had had any previous experience in our field, and this was limited to a few months. They began their association with us by taking our training course.

By the end of their first year — in a job that put them on their own, and in which they were their own masters — they each written from $250,000 to $380,000 of life insurance. Their incomes ranged from $3532 to $5645. With renewal commissions, first-year earnings will range from $5824 to $9702. The average: $7409.

Four of these men, mind you, had no previous experience selling life insurance. Yet they all made a flying start. And their financial futures are as unlimited as their individual ability, energy, and initiative.

In addition to high-average incomes, they enjoy many other advantages. Among them: being their own boss; associating with congenial men, most of whom are college trained; financial advancement that depends on themselves rather than on seniority; working with the first-chartered, fastest growing company in our field; and, perhaps most important, the deep satisfaction of knowing they are performing a tremendously valuable service for their friends and clients.

If you’d like more facts and figures to help you make a career decision, I’d be happy to supply them to you. Just drop me a line at the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company, 501 Boylston Street, Boston 17, Massachusetts. The name is H.C. Chaney, Director of Agencies.

These Bowdoin men are now New England Mutual representatives:

Earl Wing of Kingfield has been appointed Judge of Probate for Franklin County. His office is in Farmington.

HOTEL EAGLE WELCOMES YOU!

Yes, Bowdoin men and their families will find a friendly welcome awaiting them at Brunswick's best hotel, five minutes' walk from the campus.

The same friendly atmosphere that you remember is still here. But we have modernized the house throughout, installed more private baths, enlarged the dining room, built on a sun porch where you can enjoy meals outdoors in complete comfort, and re-decorated and painted the house throughout.

You'll find the same high quality of food here as in the past and sleep restfully in our clean, fresh rooms.

You can be assured of finding in the Eagle a modern and attractive hotel where you and your families may stay in complete comfort while you are in Brunswick.

And in our efforts to give you this fine service we deeply appreciate the support of Bowdoin undergraduates, alumni and friends.

Massacre at Fort Loyal

After the destruction of Falmouth (now Portland) in King Philip's War the colonial government erected Fort Loyal, establishing a frontier post there under command of Captain Silvanus Davis. The fortress was located on a sandy bluff at the water's edge on the spot where the roundhouse of the Grand Trunk Railroad later stood for years—an unfortunate choice of location, as was proven later.

By 1690 the French and Indians began to gather on the islands in the Bay, preparing for an all-out attack on the settlement. This came in 1690, after preliminary skirmishes on Munjoy's Hill—where thirteen men under Lieutenant Thaddeus Clark were killed—and at the outlying farms, where houses were burned.

The terrified inhabitants fled to the garrison houses, of which there were four at the time. One, the stone house of Captain Lawrence on Munjoy's Hill, was near the present burying ground; another, near the foot of Exchange Street, possibly Lieutenant Ingersoll's house; another, south of the first meeting house; the fourth, believed to be the house of one Elihu Gifford.

The attack on the town was sudden and fierce. By nightfall the garrisoned people had used all their ammunition, and fled under cover of darkness to the fortress. The savages then entered the town in full force and set torch to the houses before concentrating on the fort on the morning of May 16th.

For five days and four nights the brave band of English defended themselves. When the savages, under direction of their French commander, started mining under the fort on the sea side, Captain Davis realized their position would soon become untenable and asked the French commander for safe conduct for the survivors to the nearest English settlement. This was granted, but when the fortress gates were thrown open the Indians rushed in and completed their work of destruction, sparing neither wounded, women or children, and only stopping when but four or five men besides Captain Davis were left alive.

These were taken as prisoners over land and water to Canada—a journey of untold hardships of which Captain Davis' own report says merely: "It took about twenty-four days before we arrived at Quebec." The town of Falmouth Neck was left an absolute wilderness behind them.

June 16, 1949

Voted that the Governing Boards of Bowdoin College desire to place on record the gratitude of the College for the generous support of the alumni both of the Sesquicentennial and the Alumni Funds during the past year. With increasing admiration we have followed each year the splendid efforts of the alumni in their annual gifts, and are also deeply appreciative of their response to the appeal for capital funds. We desire to thank all the contributors, all the committees, officers and agents who have worked so hard and so unselfishly in behalf of the College, and all who in any way had a part in the satisfactory achievement up to the present and who will we are sure keep on building the Bowdoin of the future.

Sent to the Board of Overseers for agreement.

W. H. Farrar, Secretary.

In the Board of Overseers of Bowdoin College, June 16, 1949

Read and agreed to.

Joseph A. Aldred, Secretary.

THUS spread upon the Trustees' records is the formal recognition of appreciated alumni support during the past year. Members of the Governing Boards are alumni, too, and their arduous and devoted labors constitute a Bowdoin service not easily over-appraised. Long deferred needs of the College have made necessary the Sesquicentennial Fund appeal — an extraordinary appeal for capital sums and equipment. The Trustees and Overseers incorporated into the enduring records of the College their thanks for the heartening responses which their fellow alumni have made, not only to the Sesquicentennial Fund but also to the annual Alumni Fund, the proceeds of which have come to mean so much in meeting Bowdoin's current needs.

The 144th Commencement

As Reported by George Paradis '49

Members of the Classes of 1942, 1943, 1945, 1946, 1947, 1949, 1950 and 1951, 189, the largest group ever to be graduated from Bowdoin, heard President Sills stress in his Baccalaureate Address that "the well-educated man should learn how important it is to have some sure ground for passing judgment on men and affairs."

From Wednesday until Saturday, in the third week of June, things happened on the hour every hour. There was never a dull moment. The weather was excellent and the attendance was record-breaking. On Thursday Mrs. Sills was at home to families and friends of the graduates. President Sills was busy at meetings of the Governing Boards at which final approval was given to the construction of the new classroom building on the Delta and action taken to raise the level of staff salaries. No changes occurred in the membership of officers of the Trustees. The Overseers filled the vacancy caused by the resignation of Arthur Ham '08 by electing Ashmead White '12, retiring President of the Alumni Council. John W. Frost '04 and Harrison K. McCann '02 were elected president and vice-president, respectively, to succeed Clement F. Robinson '03 and Philip G. Clifford '03.

Reunions

1949 followed the pattern of recent years with increasing numbers of alumni arriving early for the preliminary gatherings on Thursday. Class banners appeared over dormitory entrances, registration tables began to function and reunion emblems and uniforms blossomed from Winthrop to Pickard Field where the 25-year class started proceedings with a bang. With a horde of cordial hosts, 1924 staged a reception for the Faculty, members of the Governing Boards and returning alumni of all classes and their families. It was a gala affair, well managed and with no stint on hospitality. To Chairman Brooks Savage, Class President Mal Morrell, Secretary Clarence Rouillard, Reunion Treasurer Jake Aldred and their many aides, an accolade for a notable Twenty-fifth—three days which will long be remembered by the more than fifty returning classmates and their many guests.

Dr. Henry Huston and Dr. George Bourne of 1879, sprightly as well as venerable, constituted the 100% attendance of the 70-year class. Seven members of 1894, under the leadership of Francis W. Dana, held their 55th reunion at the Harriet Beecher Stowe House. Strikingly attired in shoulder sashes, fourteen members of 1899 held their memorable Fiftieth at the Moulton Union. With bases at Lookout Point in Harpswell, Jack Frost's Topsham home and Jack Magee's Brunswick residence, 25 members of 1904 covered the waterfront at their 45th. Twenty of 1909 held forth at Appleton Hall, repairing to their Yarmouth annex, the home of Al Moulton, for their outing. The 35 and 30 year classes, 1914 and 1919, occupied the two ends of Moore Hall. Earle Thompson '14 was host at an outing at his place in Boothbay Harbor for his classmates and families, while 1919 feasted at the Harriet Beecher Stowe House.

Sam Ladd organized the twentieth reunion for over 45 classmates of 1929 at South Maine Hall, and arranged a shore dinner party at Sunset Farm in Harpswell. The 1934 class took over North Maine for more than fifty returning members. Bill Rounds served as major domo with Jack Arnold and Dick Davis as aides. A feature of their 15th was the distribution of souvenir highball glasses marked with College and Class insignia. The two junior classes, '39 and '44, were located in South and North Winthrop Hall respectively.

Over 50 thirty-niners were present and almost an equal number of '44 men were on hand. Jotham Pierce '39 worked out the plans for his class gathering, assisted by Dan Hanley and Tim Riley, who arranged for the class outing and dinner at Rock Hill Inn. Chairman Dick Johnstone, aided by Eb Ellis, Ross Williams and Roy LaCasce did the planning for the five-year class, which had its first reunion dinner at the Gurnet House.

Shore diners at nearby spots, many a quiet reunion at fraternity houses, reunion headquarters and on the beautifully lit campus filled Thursday evening.

Meetings and Elections

Friday, another perfect summer day, saw hundreds of new arrivals. As the Alumni Fund Directors and the Alumni Council met in annual sessions, the classes of 1939 and 1944 locked horns on the Delta in the annual softball game. Faithful Doc Lincoln '91 did the honors as umpire with Prof. Orren C. Hormell acting as unofficial manager of both teams. Coach Dick Johnstone led his '44 club to a victory over the ten-year men — score 5-4.

The Society of Bowdoin Women gathered for luncheon and a business meeting at the Parish House of the First Parish Church. Mrs. Chester G. Abbott was elected president with Mrs. Ashmead White vice-president, Mrs. Luther Dana secretary, Mrs. George H. Quinby treasurer and Mrs. Harvey D. Gibson chairman of the luncheon committee. Mrs. Sills was elected honorary president of the group.

Following luncheon at the Union the Alumni Association held its annual meeting in the Lounge. Reports of the Secretary and Treasurer revealed an active and productive year. Officers of the Council and the Association for the ensuing year are

President, Stanley F. Dole '13; Vice President, William D. Hyde '38; Secretary, Seward J. Marsh '12; Treasurer, Glenn R. McIntire '25. Newly elected Council Members at Large to serve for four years are Kendrick Burns '14, Karl R. Philbrick '23 and Prescott H. Vose jr. '29. To fill the unexpired term of Ashmead White '12, who had been elected to the Board of Overseers, the Executive Committee elected Theodore L. Fowler '24. It was announced that the Alumni Fund Directors had organized with the following officers: Chairman, Leon V. Walker jr. '32, Vice Chairman, William P. Sawyer '36, Secretary, Seward J. Marsh '12. New directors appointed for three years are Charles H. Bickford '14, Harrison M. Davis jr. '30 and Richard B. Sanborn '40.

Cheering Commencement news was that the new Classroom Building and its adjacent Smith Auditorium were to be constructed at once. The site was dedicated with appropriate exercises over which Harold Lee Berry '01, chairman of the building committee, presided. He introduced President Sills who thanked the alumni for making possible this first unit of the $6,000,000 development program, and retiring Sesquicentennial Fund General Chairman Philloon who also thanked all supporters of the Fund and ventured the prediction that, next year, a similar ceremony would be held on the site of the new Chemistry Building.

The annual meeting of Phi Beta Kappa at which fourteen new members were initiated, a demonstration regatta by the Sailing Club in the New Meadows Basin, fraternity reunions and an organ recital in the Chapel by Harlan Peabody '50 crowded the afternoon hours preceding the always popular reception by President and Mrs. Sills at which Dr. and Mrs. Gross assisted.

Many alumni returning from class outings on campus swelled the attendance at the notable production of Aeschylus' The Seven Against Thebes in Memorial Hall. Directed by Professor Means, with the assistance of Professors Quinby and Dane, the Commencement play was produced by the Classical Club assisted by the Masque and Gown. An informal dance in the Union Lounge followed the play.

No Rain

On Saturday morning the traditional Commencement procession headed for the 63rd time by Chandler's Band and followed by President Sills with honorary degree candidates, members of the Faculty and the Governing Boards, graduates and alumni formed by the Chapel and marched through the Class of 1875 Gateway to the First Parish Church which was filled to capacity with parents and friends of the graduating class.

After the prayer by Bishop Hale of Boston and music by the College Choir, the Commencement parts were delivered. Charles W. Carruthers '50, a February graduate, gave an address on The Fallacies That Endanger Democracy, Frederick W. Willey jr. '47, spoke on The Ultimate Ideal and the Hopeless Quest. Peguy, Politics and Principles was the topic of Basil Guy's speech. Lawrence M. Burke jr. '50, later declared winner of the Goodwin Commencement Prize, spoke on The Source of Freedom.

Bachelor of Arts degrees were presented to 187, with two members of the group receiving Bachelor of Science degrees. Four members were graduated summa cum laude, three magna cum laude and 28 cum laude.

For the first time in the history of Bowdoin Commencements, two of the graduates, John H. Nichols jr. '49 and George E. Qualie '48, were commissioned second lieutenants in the U. S. Marine Corps Reserve by Lt. Col. J. J. Rooney of the 2nd Infantry, USMCR.

Honoris Causa

President Sills then awarded the seven honorary degrees and, in apt phrases as always, welcomed the distinguished recipients to the Bowdoin family.
The Society of Bowdoin Women and their wares were in evidence all over the campus, in the Library, the Union and even in the Sesquicentennial Fund Headquarters. Mrs. Florence (Karl '23) Philbrick and Mrs. Doris Ashmead '12 White are seen unloading Bowdoin matches and Bowdoin note paper. Photographer George Paradis '49 is neatly mirrored in the Simonized fender of the White car.

Boyd Wheeler Bartlett '17 of the United States Military Academy "representative of that extraordinary group of teachers trained at Bowdoin who have made no slight contribution to our American academic world," Doctor of Science; Emyr Estyn Evans, visiting Tallman Professor from Queen's University, Belfast, Ireland, "informal ambassador extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary from Northern Ireland to a country that still respects freedom," Doctor of Science; Robert Hammond Haynes '19, Assistant Librarian of Harvard College, "gladly honored by his alma mater which has always respected books, learning and scholarship and which regards the library as the heart of the College," Master of Arts; Samuel Lincoln Forsaith, President of the Brunswick First National Bank, "never too busy to render service in any good cause... symbol and personification of the friendly ties that have bound college and town together for more than one hundred and fifty years," Master of Arts; Marie Peary Stafford, of Washington, D. C., "interesting author and brilliant lecturer... fittingly honored this year on the fortieth anniversary of Peary's discovery of the Pole," Master of Arts; James Rhyne Killian jr., President of Massachusetts Institute of Technology, "a competent scientist and an administrator with few superiors... gladly given this modest vote of confidence at the start of his administration," Doctor of Laws; Harold Hale Murchie, Chief Justice of the Supreme and Superior Judicial Courts of Maine, "learned in law, of calm judicial temperament... interpreting the law humanly and generously," Doctor of Laws.

Commencement Dinner

After Commencement exercises and the procession to the Gymnasium, gaiety reigned once more. Cheers for "Casey" and congratulations to the new graduates were being given on all sides. As customary, the Alumni feasted on Maine lobster and chicken in the cage as did the Society of Bowdoin Women in the gymnasium. President Sills opened the luncheon speeches with his report on the State of the College.

Chief Justice Murchie brought the greetings of the State of Maine in the absence of Governor Frederick Payne. Martin H. Lee '50, already, by Faculty vote, recipient of the Lucien Howe Award, was called to the rostrum and presented the Andrew Haldane Cup for outstanding qualities of leadership and character. The cup was given by Haldane's fellow officers in memory of his heroism and death in the Pacific during World War II.

Named by his fellow alumni the alumnus of the year, Sumner T. Pike '13 was presented the Alumni Achievement Award in recognition of his many unsung services to Bowdoin and Bowdoin men. As he accepted the award from Council President Ashmead White '12, he assured the audience that "Hickenlooper is not going to like this." President Killian responded for the honorary graduates, expressing the pleasure of all recipients at being adopted into the Bow-doin family. Speaking for the Society of Bowdoin Women, Mrs. Stafford expressed her life-long love for Bowdoin and stated her delight that she was now officially a member of the College.

Alumni Fund Chairman Kendrick Burns '14 reported that $65,000 of the goal of $70,000 had been realized as of Commencement Week. He thanked the contributors for their participation in the Fund and stated that he hoped the goal would be reached by June 30, the official end of the 1948-49 campaign.

General Wallace C. Philoon '05 announced that he was retiring as General Chairman of the Sesquicentennial Fund, thanked all who had helped in the intensive effort and reported that $1,907,734.85 had been received to date. In recognition of his loyal services, Harvey D. Gibson '02, Honorary Chairman, presented General Philoon with an inscribed silver platter, a gift of the Governing Boards. Gibson also announced that Harry L. Palmer '04 would assume General Philoon's duties as Chairman of the Sesquicentennial Fund.

Granville S. Gilpatrick '24, on behalf of his class, handed to President Sills a check for $16,000 as the 25th Reunion Gift. This was the largest amount ever to be contributed to the College by a twenty-five year class.

The 144th Commencement Week activities were officially brought to a close with the singing of Bowdoin Beata by the entire group present under the direction of Precentor Thomas P. Riley '39.

The 1948-49 Alumni Fund
Chairman Kendrick Burns Reports

The sincere thanks and appreciation of the College and of the Alumni Fund Directors are tendered to the industrious Class Agents and the more than 3000 contributors whose efforts made possible our annual gift of $68,530.22. We failed to reach either of our objectives — $70,000 from Seventy Percent of the alumni — but we did a commendable job in a difficult year.

On Alumni Day next fall, the Alumni Fund Cup will be presented to the Class of 1924. In observance of their 25th Reunion, 1924 enrolled well over one-half its members in a successful all-out endeavor to assemble the largest Twenty-fifth gift on record. A performance figure revealing nearly 175% of their Alumni Fund objectives wins the Cup and establishes a mark for other classes to shoot at. Congratulations.

The following seventeen obtained our wanted Gentleman's Grade of Seventy Percent participation: the Old Guard, 1899, 1900, 1901, 1902, 1903, 1904, 1905, 1906, 1907, 1912, 1913, 1914, 1916, 1921, 1922, 1929, and Perfect Gentleman's Grades of 100% were reached by 1884, 1886, 1888, 1889, 1890 and 1898 of the Old Guard. Their results counted heavily toward our recording an over-all alumni participation of just over 50%. Our hope is that we shall reach that Gentleman's Grade. Bowdoin's alumni group is growing. Attainment of the Seventy Percent goal becomes more difficult but we can reach it. Whatever the size of our contributions, let's make them. When 70% of us are sharing in our yearly Alumni Fund gift, we can be pretty sure that Bowdoin's current needs are being met.

As the accompanying tabulation shows, twenty-one classes use four figures to express their gift totals. Our particular thanks to them. I am confident that increasing emphasis on broad participation will put many more classes in that "grand" category.

The Whispering Pines will carry a complete report of the 1948-49 Alumni Fund with detailed reference to outstanding performances so I shall not indulge in personal references here. Agents, I am sure, know how important their jobs are and how sincerely the College is grateful for their work. Few Bowdoin services are more important and worthwhile. To have produced, in addition to large contributions to the Sesquicentennial Fund, an Alumni Fund gift which amounts approximately to the income on two millions of endowment which Bowdoin does not have, is a splendid job.

Bowdoin Has A New Treasurer

Treasurer and ex officio Trustee of Bowdoin College for the past 25 years, Philip Dana '96 has asked to be relieved as of September 1. The unanimous choice of the Finance Committee and President Sills as his successor is Roland E. Clark '01, Vice-President and Trust Officer of the National Bank of Commerce in Portland.

Upon acceptance of Mr. Dana's resignation, President Sills said:
"In relieving Mr. Philip Dana at his own request of the arduous burdens of his office the College loses the services of one of its ablest and most devoted officers. For twenty-five years Mr. Dana has been the ideal Treasurer, fulfilling the exacting duties and requirements of that office to the complete satisfaction of everyone but himself. He has been generous, broadminded and very human in all his dealings. In recognition of his services, in 1926 his College conferred upon him the honorary degree of Master of Arts, and at Commencement this June he was given by his fellow Trustees the unprecedented honor of being named upon the date of his retirement Trustee Emeritus.

"The College is very fortunate in the choice of his successor. Mr. Roland E. Clark of the Class of 1901 has agreed to take the office for the next few years. An Overseer of the College, a member of the Finance Committee, and for many years a member of the Visiting Committee, Mr. Clark is thoroughly familiar with the business of the College; and as head of the Trust Department of the National Bank of Commerce in Portland, and as former President of the Trust Division of the American Bankers Association, he is well and favorably known in business and banking circles in the state and nation."

The new Treasurer prepared for Bowdoin at Ricker Classical Institute and received his LL.B. at Georgetown in 1905. He practiced law in Houlton until 1917 when he entered the service. During World War I he rose to the rank of major in the U. S. Army and, upon his discharge, entered the banking field in Portland. His duties as treasurer of the College will not conflict with his banking activities.

The gospel according to Steve Schaap '49 of Rotterdam, the Netherlands, is that more U. S. colleges and universities should adopt the Bowdoin Plan.

Steve was able to get his degree from Bowdoin this past June through the Bowdoin Plan and he was so pleased with the opportunity that he wanted others to share his good fortune. So a month before graduation he decided to tour the country, spreading his gospel.

Having no funds, but some ability as a public speaker, he approached Alfred H. Fenton '31, Publicity Director of the Sesquicentennial Fund, and posed the problem of getting speaking engagements along his proposed route as a means of financing his trip; Fenton got hold of Lions Club and Rotary Club rosters and went to work. Synchronizing Steve's itinerary with the scheduled meetings of these service clubs, he then mailed out a form letter advising one and all of Steve's plan.

The response was most satisfactory. Five days after graduation, Steve was addressing the Schenectady, N. Y. Rotary Club. His next stops were Erie, Pa.; Toledo, Ohio; and Lansing, Mich. A cancelled engagement at St. Paul upset his plans somewhat, but he was able to survive by visiting Richard Van Orden '51 at Grand Rapids, Mich., and a former professor, Newton Stallknecht, at Bloomington, Ind. Thereafter business picked up and Steve had engagements at Grand Island, Neb.; Atwood, Kan.; and Modesto and San Jose, Calif.

As the ALUMNUS went to press, Steve was about to start back from California with engagements ahead of him at St. George, Utah; Winslow, Ariz.; Sweetwater, Texas; Lubbock, Texas; Natchitoches, La.; and New Orleans, La.

Admissions

A resume of the activities of the Office of Admissions during the past year shows that, in general, the practices and policies which have been in operation have had beneficial results. More than 150 schools have been visited, and at least 60 per cent of all candidates were interviewed at schools or at the College. Of the incoming freshman class more than 80 per cent of its members were interviewed.

This past year the number of applicants decreased noticeably for the following reasons: (1) a greatly reduced number of veteran applicants, (2) fewer random applications by boys seeking admission to at least a half dozen colleges, and with the advice of school authorities a more careful selection of colleges by candidates based on their qualifications, (3) our efforts to encourage only qualified boys to apply, (4) the tendency for boys to attend college near at home for financial reasons. Even though the ratio of applicants to boys admitted was lower than in recent years, it was still possible to exercise a real selection in picking the Class of 1953.

When a candidate applies for the College Board Examinations, he is required not only to state the colleges to which the examination results are to be sent but also to state the order of his preference of those colleges. At all colleges this question of preference has presented a major problem. At Bowdoin we have tried to be as fair as possible in dealing with it. We have not insisted upon being the first choice of all our candidates. We have considered the filing of an application prime evidence of a boy's desire to attend Bowdoin, and we have only required that he make a wholly frank statement of his real preference. Well-qualified boys we have admitted even though Bowdoin has not been their clear-cut first choice.

In order to give each candidate further freedom in choosing his college, all letters of admission, of rejection, or of placement on the waiting list were mailed on May 18th, eight days after the receipt of all College Board Test results. In addition, each successful candidate was given until June 15th to give notice of his intention to attend Bowdoin or to go elsewhere! Bowdoin, incidentally, has been the only small college in New England to give all of its candidates four weeks in which to accept their admission and enough time to allow them to hear from any other college to which they may have applied.

We shall continue to carry out these practices because we believe that they are fair and that in this way they meet the schools and the boys half way in helping to solve the problem of being admitted to college. We urge boys to visit as many colleges as possible and to investigate the position of each college relative to the problems mentioned above and to other important questions. The response from schoolmen, parents, and boys to such a program has been encouraging to the point where it seems proper to continue in that direction.

The assistance of the alumni has been helpful in many specific instances during the past year. Offers of aid have been numerous, and they are hereby gratefully acknowledged.

Data concerning the incoming class will be furnished in the next issue of the ALUMNUS. It is expected that the maximum enrollment set by the Governing Boards of 200 freshmen and 25 transfers will be effected in September.

Dramatics

In many respects the past season has been the most successful for the Masque and Gown since the outbreak of the War. Very few colleges can boast a program containing a tryout of a new play by an alumnus, a popular mystery play, four original one-acts by undergraduates, and revivals of Shakespeare and Aeschylus. Methods of production have also been varied and, considering our limitations in staging, reasonably effective. Examples of "arena"-style, proscenium-stage, and Elizabethan-stage presentations have offered plays in both naturalistic and stylized forms. A considerable number of new acting and producing talents have been uncovered, and the program for the Ivy Play was more ambitious than anything attempted since the historical pamphlet on the Masque and Gown in 1940. And, finally, many members of the dramatic club have joined with faculty actors or directors in helping to re-establish a town Workshop Theatre.
Since both of the revivals have been played since the last issue of the Alumnus went to press, we should report primarily on them. Twelfth Night failed to attract a full house in its first performance as a benefit for the Town Hall stage but the Ivy audience was both large and enthusiastic. The comedy scenes were especially well played and the beauty and practicality of the setting were much admired. Certain of its features — notably the awning-type, over-proscenium curtain — were carried over for the Commencement production.

To have attempted productions of Shakespeare and Aeschylus within a month required both courage and the utmost care in planning. By starting rehearsals of The Seven Against Thebes months before its showing, Professor Means was able to bring his actors and singers to a peak of effectiveness despite the problems of Ivy final examinations. Mrs. Dane contributed music for the director’s translations of the choral odes; and the chorus of sixteen — comprised of townswomen, faculty wives and daughters, student wives and high school girls — mastered the melodies and antiphonal phrasing through a period of over three months. They were accompanied by two players of recorders who, like the chorus, were drilled in intricate movement about the stage during the great majority of the action. Since Aeschylus, more than any other extant dramatist, depended on his choral comment and movement rather than his actors to tell his story, this central group was largely responsible for the play’s effect.

The actors were well cast and beautifully costumed. Central in this group of thirty-three was Donald Dennis as the King of Thebes. Mrs. Nixon and Mrs. Means were responsible for the authentic design and delightful colors of the women’s costumes.

Faced with the problem of telling a somewhat static story with a very large cast on the stage of Memorial Hall, Director Means used varied stage pictures and fluid patterns of pageantry to build the emotional suspense from the attack on the city through the assignment of defenders of the seven gates to the death of the sons of Oedipus and the funeral cortège attended by his daughters. A large and attentive audience enjoyed the performance, which completes the cycle of representative plays by Greek dramatists whose work is extant.

Looking forward to the coming season, the Masque and Gown Executive Committee plans the tryout of a full-length student-written play in November, O’Neill’s S. S. Glencarvin series of one-acts in December, the student-written one-act play contest in March, Caesar and Cleopatra for Ivy, and Anthony and Cleopatra for Commencement. If this schedule can be followed, the College will be witnessing the first season of tryouts and revivals — excluding any popular Broadway successes — since 1938-39. The two final productions will be a heavy drain on finances which must be reduced with the shrinkage in the student body, inasmuch as all funds for dramatics come from the Blanket Tax and box office rather than from college appropriation. However, the earlier productions can be done with a minimum of expense, and the prospect of viewing Shaw’s girlish and Shakespeare’s mature Cleopatras should be worth the risk.

Governor Dummer is now a school of 210 boys and twenty-five masters. Students come from all parts of the United States to be prepared for college.

The size of the school and the number of instructors make possible small classes, individual attention, and a friendly, homelike atmosphere. Above all, the school emphasizes hard work and high standards in the classroom, on the athletic field, and in daily living.
The Meddiebempsters

The fame of Bowdoin's double quartet carries on. Due to the success of their European tour of 1948 and their many appearances during the past college year, the Meddiebempsters received an invitation from the Army Command again to present a series of concerts at European Army posts. Following a week of rehearsal at the summer home of Dan Kunhardt '49 in Francestown, N. H., the group took off for Germany at the Westover Airfield July 15. They expect to return the latter part of August. One welcome evidence of confidence in the ability of the Meddiebempsters to repeat was the government's offer to place each man on a daily allowance basis. Last year the boys were given only their travel expense. The following is the release of the Public Information Office at Westover Air Base.

The Bowdoin College Meddiebempsters are now touring the military installations in Germany and Austria. The group was invited by the Special Service Division of the Army to repeat last summer's trip when they entertained troops in Germany. They sing in Service Clubs, Hospitals, NCO Clubs, Officer's Clubs and other places where they can get a group of G.I.'s together. The augmented double quartet has a large repertoire of songs with novel arrangements. The men love to sing and all are fine individual entertainers. After several songs the Meddiebempsters have the audience singing with them. The men are all athletes and usually manage to challenge teams at the bases to games of baseball, football, soccer or other games. Originally the Meddiebempsters were recognized for their talent when they performed in Washington, D. C. in a show sponsored by the Bowdoin College Alumni there. Among the guests were Mrs. Truman, General Spaatz, General Arnold and numerous Senators and Congressmen. It was soon after the Washington appearance that the Army sent them the invitation to tour bases in Germany. The trip was so successful that this year the request was repeated. The group was flown overseas in a Military Air Transport Service Constellation from Westover Field, Mass.

An independent, self-perpetuating musical unit of the College, the Meddiebempsters rank high among such groups. Many hours of rehearsing are necessary to maintain their exacting standards. They are Bowdoin ambassadors par excellence.

Football Applications

They will be mailed to all alumni of known address about September 7.

Alumni Day
October 29

Application blanks for the Alumni Day Luncheon, on the day of the game with Bates College, will accompany the blanks for football tickets. Please remember that the College provides luncheon only for those who purchase tickets in advance.
Continuing a series of special summer events started last year, the College held an open house in honor of Sumner T. Pike '13 on Friday afternoon, July 22, and an open house for W. Hodding Carter jr. '27 on Friday, August 19, in an all-day benefit for members of the press from Maine, Massachusetts and New Hampshire.

The program on July 22 included a talk by Mr. Pike at the First Parish Church on the work of the Atomic Energy Commission, of which he is a member. Approximately 900 guests attended. A reception by President and Mrs. Sills followed on the lawn at the Moulton Union. In connection with the theme of Mr. Pike's talk, an exhibition of Life magazine photographs on atomic energy was open to the public at Hubbard Hall. The Walker Art Building displayed paintings by Merle D. James of Cushing, William Thon of Brooklyn, N. Y., and Andrew Wyeth of Chadds Ford, Pa.

Hodding Carter Day began at 9:30 a.m. with a talk by John T. Gould '31, author and editor of the Lisbon Enterprise, on "Newspaper Weeklies." He was followed by Edwin H. Blanchard '17, editorial writer for the New York Sun, who spoke on "Editorial Writing." Mr. Carter spoke at 11 a.m. on his editorial battles with Long, Bilbo, and Rankin, and again in the afternoon on "The Hidden South."

President and Mrs. Sills were again hosts at a reception at their home and garden to conclude the day. A Life magazine exhibit on press photography was open for inspection at Hubbard Hall, and paintings by H. Lester Cooke jr. of the Princeton University faculty were on exhibit in the Walker Art Building.

The New England Women's Press Association held a summer convention on the campus on August 19-20, and attended the Open House for Hodding Carter.

An informal reception for Commander Donald B. MacMillan on his return from the Arctic in September is planned as a further summer event at the College.

Athletics

Bowdoin’s 1949 spring sports program was a fairly successful one; both from the point of view of numbers of students participating and from that of victories in varsity competition. The track, baseball and tennis teams all won state championships, and the golf team finished in second place. Three firsts and a second in the four spring competitions with our three Maine neighbors is certainly close to par for the course. Prospects for success next spring in these sports is bright. This is particularly true in track, where Jack Magee seems to be building back to pre-war strength.

Jack Magee’s many friends were proud and glad to learn that he had been elected this spring to the “Hall of Fame.” A committee of outstanding track coaches were selected to nominate thirty track coaches, and from that list the track coaches of the country elected fifteen to the “Hall of Fame.” A few days after Jack received notice of this honor, his track team walked away with the state championship. In thirty-seven years as coach of Bowdoin’s track teams, Jack has had an outstanding record.

The prospects are bright for a good football team this fall, if this squad can cut down a little on the injury list that has handicapped the past two Bowdoin teams. The backfield candidates appear to be in the class of some of the pre-war teams when Bowdoin had such backs as Karsokas, Haldane, Frye, Soule, Melendy and others. The line still presents somewhat of a problem, but hopes are high that Adam can develop a front line that can block well on offense, and rush the passer on defense.

The schedule should be interesting. The first game is with Tufts at Medford, and the Tufts team, one of their best in years, will be pointing for Bowdoin because of what happened on Whittier Field last fall. Then, if the Polar Bears get by Tufts, they have a chance to upset Wesleyan at Whittier Field in what could be the game of the year. Wesleyan, undefeated for four years and generally regarded as the best small college team in New England last year, has a veteran team with several really fast and capable backs. Following two long trips to Amherst and Williams, come state series games with Colby and Bates at Whittier Field. The final game with Maine is at Orono, and this is the game above all others that the team would like to win. Every game on the schedule should be close and interesting to watch. Scholarships

culation scholarships have been awarded to 35 high-ranking students who will enter the College this fall.

The top award, the John Johnston Scholarship of $900, has been awarded to Robert M. Harriman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert F. Harriman of North Lovell. The Johnston Scholarship, established in memory of a famous Bowdoin scholar and graduate by his grandson, is given annually to a worthy and able student, preferably from rural Maine. Harriman graduated from Fryeburg Academy, where he stood first in his class scholastically, was president of the class, of the Student Council, and of the Varsity Club. He also was captain of football, won letters in basketball and track and was a member of the yearbook staff.

Five State of Maine Scholarships, of $700 each and awarded to Maine students on the basis of results in competitive examinations, have been granted to Donald C. Agostinelli of Rumford, C. Allan Cook of Portland, William S. Coperthwaite jr. of South Portland, Guy T. Emery of Falmouth Foreside, and John A. Gledhill jr. of Lewiston.

An equal number of Bowdoin Scholarships, also of $700 each and established for the benefit of out-of-state students, have been granted to Joseph A. Giordano of Philadelphia, David S. Keene of Wellesley Hills, Mass., Donald G. Lints of North Quincy, Mass., Bruce Wald of New York City and John N. Wisner jr. of Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Placement

The office of the Placement Bureau has again been one of the busy spots of the very active campus during the term just closed. This year because of the continuance of the accelerated program and the several graduation dates, undergraduate registration and vocational counsel and placement has reached an all-time high.

The following figures will give an indication of the activity for the six months period from January until June. During that time thirty-six national firms were represented on the campus for senior interviews. In addition contacts were developed and interviews arranged with many other companies off campus. Individual interviews were held on a carefully organized schedule only after applicants were screened as to their qualifications and briefed regarding the company and the opportunities available.

Total registration from both the February and June classes numbered 143 or 65% of the class. Individual interviews for graduating seniors totaled 504 resulting in 137 job offers with several still pending. Surveys report fewer offers per firm this year. The sharpest change found by the graduates this year in the employment market is the return of competition for jobs, in place of competition for employees. Employment standards are up and the mediocre and indifferent student has been harder to place.

The majority of men selected entered industrial training courses in the fields of their choice. The initial salaries compared favorably with other areas and averaged between $200 and $250 per month. Registrants have accepted opportunities in wide geographical areas and in diversified fields. A cross section of the list of placements indicates that registrants have selected positions in the fields of accounting, insurance, finance, utilities, credit, merchandising, education, textiles, public relations, advertising, and production. The shift to the buyers market has developed sales opportunities in greater numbers.

The Bureau continues to receive an unusually large number of requests from the field of education. As in the past, opportunities outnumber the qualified candidates, and most Bowdoin teacher applicants have now been successfully placed. Members of the Faculty, especially the Department of Education, have been most cooperative in teacher placement.

Recent surveys show that in another activity of the Bureau over 200 placements have been made for part-time work on the campus. Many of these positions were of a semi-permanent nature and, with present rates of pay, many students have been able to defray a considerable portion of their college expenses. A number of veterans' wives continue to be employed in positions of responsibility in the administrative and academic offices of the college.

The Placement Bureau's objective continues to be to help each Bowdoin man find the position for which he is best suited. In addition to the regular senior interviews, other conferences were held with students on vocational problems. This fall it will now be possible to conduct a vocational clinic. Plans are underway to invite to the campus a number of business leaders to hold informal discussions with undergraduates.

All registrants are screened before campus interviews and are requested to contact the Bureau before they seek the valued counsel of more than 300 alumni who are serving on the 35 voluntary committees throughout the country. A resume of any candidate seeking alumni assistance will be mailed to the committee chairman before interview. The Director, and the men guided and placed, are grateful to alumni everywhere for their sincere cooperation.

The Bowdoin Plan

Under the nationally-known Bowdoin Plan foreign students will receive free education at the College during the 1949-50 academic year.

Founded at Bowdoin two years ago by Joseph C. Wheeler '48 of Concord, Mass., the Bowdoin Plan has spread to some fifty other U. S. colleges and universities. Students from foreign countries are given free room and board by various fraternities, while the College provides free tuition. The Plan is designed to bring about international understanding through international education. Since the Plan originated at Bowdoin, thirty-eight students from fifteen countries have studied at Bowdoin.

The following is the list of students who are expected to come to Bowdoin in the fall, together with the fraternities sponsoring them:

- Joergen Kragh Knudsen, Denmark (Alpha Tau Omega); Wilhelm Haas, Germany (Alpha Delta Phi); Morito Inagaki, Japan (Chi Psi); Hans Hittmair, Austria (Zeta Psi); George Lorenz, Austria (Theta Delta Chi); Edmond Nasir Elowe, Iraq (Delta Kappa Epsilon); Athanassios Anninos, Greece (Psi Upsilon); Joseph Louis Pignollet, France (Sigma Nu); Sterghios Theordore Demetradies, Greece and Kien-Tien Fong, China (Delta Upsilon); Charalambos Vasili Demessinos, Greece and Yves Edmond Montet-Jourdan, France (Alpha Rho Upsilon).

The Bowdoin Plan

With the publication of its report of progress to the Alumni in June, the Sesquicentennial Fund has marked the first year and a half of its work.

Major General Wallace C. Philoon '05, USA (Ret.), who served as General Chairman from the very beginning of the campaign until the completion of this first phase, resigned July 1 in accordance with the conditions under which he accepted the task.

Under General Philoon, the Fund Office conducted a vigorous and most successful drive among members of the Governing Boards, Faculty, Students, Alumni and Parents. In the eighteen months during which he directed the Fund, total subscriptions reached $1,910,649.85, a record surpassed by few colleges.

With General Philoon's retirement from the campaign, Harry L. Palmer '04 of Skowhegan, a member of the Board of Overseers of the College, and retired Vice-President of McCann-Erickson, Inc., New York advertising agency, assumed charge of the Fund operation. He previously served in the organization as Special Gifts Chairman, and has now taken the title of "Executive Director" of the Fund.

The Alumni have done well in this first year and a half of their effort. The members of the Governing Boards, all of whom are alumni, have been most generous—contributing a total of approximately $600,000. The balance of the alumni have also subscribed a goodly amount—approximately $725,000. The latter figure, however, is still far away from the goal of $1,100,000 which was set for them. This gap must be closed, and the work with the alumni must be continued.

The ultimate goal of $6,250,000 by 1952 is a very long way ahead. In order to reach it, there must be further subscriptions from the alumni; but, more especially, many gifts in large amounts from outside sources. Special attention and emphasis will be given to the matter of securing these larger gifts, which are so essential for reaching the final goal.

The Fund work during the next three years will be carried on just as aggressively as for the past year and a half. Each and every Bowdoin alumnus must keep his shoulder hard to the wheel in support of all that is being done from Fund Headquarters at the College.

We are confident that such support will not be lacking.

Friends Indeed

Recognizing how important is the success of the Sesquicentennial Fund program to Bowdoin and to the community, the citizens of Brunswick and Topsham have decided they would like to get into action. Furthermore, they have.

The idea started with a group of local businessmen who, realizing what the College means to the community culturally and financially, felt that the townspeople should show their appreciation of the past by contributing to the future of Bowdoin. They asked Alfred M. Senter, President of the Brunswick Chamber of Commerce, to write President Sills and express the desire of the townspeople to help in the College's fund-raising effort.

As the result of this letter, President Sills invited the group to meet in the Moulton Union to discuss plans. Out of this meeting emerged the Bowdoin Friendship Club with Harry H. Smart, Brunswick automobile dealer, as executive chairman, and Ellis L. Aldrich, Brunswick lawyer and Bowdoin Father, as honorary chairman.

During the Spring months, an executive committee was formed and the Friendship Club laid down its plans. First of all, they decided, "participation" should be the keynote of their campaign. The committee felt that it would be far better to have a lot of people contribute than to place emphasis solely on large gifts.

With this thought in mind, the committee has gone along with its plans to a point where a house-to-house canvass is scheduled for August along with a street dance in the center of Maine Street in front of the Town Hall.

Other plans include a series of special events over the coming year, including dances, movies and musical events, to be climaxcd by a mammoth street fair next summer.

Already, before actual solicitation has started, the Friendship Club has nearly $2000 in pledges. Bowdoin Alumni in the community, as well as faculty members who have already contributed to the Sesquicentennial Fund, will be given automatic membership in the club. They are, however, privileged to increase their subscriptions — for the still better showing of the Bowdoin Friendship Club and to the benefit of the Sesquicentennial Fund.

of 1950. Every alumnus, therefore, can now assist materially by writing the Placement Bureau about job opportunities. This data will be relayed to the area chairmen. All communications should be addressed to the Director, Placement Bureau, 302 Massachusetts Hall, Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine.
Alumni In The News

John J. Magee, for 36 years coach of Bowdoin's track teams, has been elected to the Track Hall of Fame in recognition of his consistent ability to produce outstanding track teams. Jack has coached his Bowdoin teams to 15 straight state championships in the 31 meets that have been held since he joined the college athletic department in 1913. Not only is he famous within his own state, but Jack Magee has a reputation all over the nation as a tutor of Olympic stars and as a leader of track excursions to several foreign countries. Born in Newark, N. J., he was coach at Powder Point School in Duxbury, Mass., for a year before coming to Bowdoin. He coached at Olympic games in 1920, 1924, 1928, and 1932; was coach and manager of the American Track Team touring the Orient in 1934 and the team touring the Scandinavian countries in 1937. He has been a member of the New England Intercollegiate Athletic Association Advisory Board, Vice-President of the National Amateur Athletic Union, chairman of the National Amateur Athletic Union Records Committee, a member of the Foreign Relations Committee, and President of the Association of College Track Coaches of America.

Dr. Hollis E. Clow '25, Yale Medical School '31, has been elected President of the American Geriatrics Society. At present Dr. Clow, a Certified Psychiatrist and Neurologist, is Director of Laboratories and Internist of the New York Hospital, Westchester Division, in White Plains, N. Y., where he has been in residence since 1933. This hospital, a private institution, is one of the oldest in continuous operation for the care of mental patients. Dr. Clow's studies and experience in the field of psychiatry have been wide. In 1947 he made an important contribution to medicine with his extensive studies and reports on Electroencephalography which have aided in diagnoses of mental disorders. Until recently he was consulting psychiatrist for the Veterans Administration of New York City, in addition to his regular work. He is a Fellow of the American Psychiatric Society and a member of the American Medical Association, the New York State Medical Society, the University Club, and the Boys Work Committee of the White Plains Y.M.C.A.

Frank A. Farrington '27 of Augusta has been appointed Chairman of the Maine Industrial Accident Commission following nomination to that office by Governor Frederick G. Payne. A member of the Commission for the past three years, Mr. Farrington was graduated from Harvard Law School in 1936. He opened a law practice in Augusta and, in 1940, was appointed judge of the Augusta Municipal Court for two years. The following year he became deputy attorney general, and for three years was a member of the Maine Central Railroad legal staff. A native of Augusta, he prepared for college at Cony High School, and was active in varsity football, baseball and track as an undergraduate. He married the former Joan Sturtevant in 1929, and they have three children.

William Sanford Piper jr. '31 has been appointed principal of Ashley Hall School for Girls in Charleston, S. C. He assumed his new duties there on July 1. Since 1938 he has been on the faculty of University School in Shaker Heights, Ohio, where he served not only as teacher of science and mathematics, but also as Director of Admissions, Alumni Secretary, Director of Public Relations and organizer and director of the school's recent endowment fund campaign, which under his direction was over subscribed by more than 10%. Born in Worcester, Mass., he prepared at Deerfield Academy, and during his senior year at College was biology assistant and president of his fraternity. He did graduate work at Harvard, Johns Hopkins, and Western Reserve Universities, receiving a master's degree from the latter in secondary school administration. Before joining the faculty of the University School, he taught science and coached track and baseball at three private schools - Westminster School in Simsbury, Conn., McDonogh School in Baltimore, Md., and Beacon School in Wellesley Hills, Mass. He is a former secretary of the Bowdoin Club of Cleveland. With his wife and three children, Stephen 9, Richard 7 and Elsie 5, he will live in Charleston, S. C.

An article of high praise for Eaton W. Tarbell '37 appeared in the May issue of Architectural Forum. The article deals with his design for the modernistic Dryden Terrace apartments at Orono and marks the third time that the magazine has published architectural designs by Mr. Tarbell in the past two years. After receiving his degree in architecture from Harvard in 1941, he joined Stone and Webster in Boston for a year, then became assistant superintendent for a contractor building Army housing. In 1944 he established his own firm in Bangor, known as Eaton W. Tarbell & Associates, Architects. He has built 168 projects in New England with a versatility that includes houses, schools and theaters. His design of the Maine State Office Building Competition in 1946 won honorable mention. He is secretary-treasurer of the Maine Chapter of the American Institute of Architects, vice-president of the Maine Junior Chamber of Commerce, a member of the Thomas Newcomen Society and a director of the Bangor Chamber of Commerce. Married to the former Pauline A. Graham of Bangor, he has two children, Eaton Jr. 7, and Beverly 5.

Robert D. Barton '41 has been assigned to Rosario, Argentina, by the United States State Department to organize a United States Information and Educational Service Branch Office. Information about the United States is prepared at the Buenos Aires office and Mr. Barton directs its distribution in the Rosario area. He has been a Public Affairs Officer at Montevideo for the past two years. Born in London of American parents, he studied at Foxboro High School and Emerson School in Exeter, N. H., before coming to Bowdoin. During the war he served as a captain in the Marine Corps and was appointed Information Assistant in the Montevideo office of the U. S. Information Service in 1946.

A manuscript journal of Jacob Abbott 20 (later to be the author of the Rollo books) in the Bowdoin College Library, contains an account of a festivity at his class reunion, September, 1823. He made the 24-hour trip by packet from Boston to Bath, and by chaise to Brunswick.

When my class left college in 1820, they voted to provide 12 bottles of wine, one for each member; and appointed a committee to bury it safely in the ground, intending to produce it again when we should meet after three years to receive our second degrees. I was one of the committee for making the deposit and on Monday when several of the class had arrived in town, it was proposed to go into the woods and bring it forth. I was uncertain whether I could find it as we had made no mark for the purpose. But, we were met by a gentleman, who said, "If the tree had been so much cut and altered that we could not be certain as to the precise spot. . . . At last Cobb came on Tuesday noon, and we immediately adjourned to the spot . . . A promising spot was soon discovered, and the spade soon struck upon the lid of the box. We pulled out the bottles, found them safe, and carried them to Dowes' tavern in our handkerchiefs . . . The class had a meeting at two o'clock and voted that our wine should be tasted that evening. The appointed time we all assembled at a room at Dowes', and prepared for our toast. We spent the hours until twelve in hilarity and glee but without disorder, and then adjourned, after having drunk four of our bottles. We sent one of the remainder to Professor Cleveland, and for the rest, any one took them who chose. Every individual of my class was present at this meeting except Stone who was not in town.

Looking

It is hardly surprising that four bottles of wine divided among eleven celebrators caused no "disorder."

Although the Orient described in detail every other event of Commencement Week, all it had to say about the dance, which, to the young ladies was the principal happening, was this:

It became necessary on account of the rain to have the dance, which was to have been on the Green on the evening of Class Day, in the Tontine Hall. Although it was a great disappointment to be compelled to go indoors, yet it was a very pleasant affair. It has been a long time since we have had a party at which there was a nicer looking company of ladies and gentlemen. We hope to see them again next year, and on the campus, if the weather will permit.

On July 10, 1874, a class day "date" whose name was (and is) Harriet Shaw, sent out a poetic bulletin regarding the class day experiences of herself, Jeannie Shaw and Lissie Eustis. She said:

OUR TRIP TO BRUNSWICK

July 10, 1874

Come one and all, pray listen to me; and after you've heard, I know you'll agree that the jolliest time, for a regular train, is Class Day at "Bowdoin," State of Maine.

Backward

Three sweet creatures, bags in hand, arose at daybreak, to join the band of friends, of the Class of 74 — who started from Portland, twenty or more. Arriving at half past nine, they walked to "Aunt Mary's" to rest for a time. Refreshed and recruited, their frolics began, for each felt happy — she had a man. Halls, Chapel and Church, each in their turn, were viewed by the fair ones, the wonders to learn.

After dinner, the "Tree", after supper the dance, and the rain coming down. You could see at a glance that the feet of the ladies were unprepared to encounter the weather, at best, very bad. So rubbers were borrowed — "sevens by nine" — to protect the soles of their shoes so fine. Ahas for the size — "fifteen marked down." They must stuff the toes with paper brown; for sad would it be, if in lifting their feet, the rubbers were left midst the mud in the street.

And now for the dance. Arriving there, each young man with his "nibbie" fair, stroll through the hall, with satisfied mien, stroking his moustache and smiling serene. The music, the best in all the land, is certainly that of Germania Band. Its waltzes so lovely, its polkas so merry, intoxicate one like "Tom & Jerry." But look at the clock — Alas! How time flies, under the glances of melting eyes, Goodnights are whispered, home all wend their way, to dream of the dancers and jokes of the day.

Next morning at five, the three did arise and packed their bags; under auspicious skies they walked to the depot and (after eating) a gentleman friend who'd agreed on the meeting—became of the party, thus making it four all pleased with the trip, "quite much" if not more.

So after the manner of things on earth everything dies; that has its birth, farewells were exchanged, between friend and friend, and the visit to Brunswick came to an end.

Rain on the night of the "Dance on the Green" became a Bowdoin tradition. But it has been a long time since class day guests got up at five o'clock the next day to walk to the station and take an early morning train for home.

Now ninety-six, Miss Shaw writes this "addendum" in 1949:

Dear friends,—I pray you listen well,—for I've a different story to tell. When young we think: as I grow old I'll take my ease in silks and satins, if you please; no worries or frowns will be my share,—I'll sail along without a care. But that, my friends, is very rare. We guard each word, for fear someone with a knowing nod will say: I heard her faller in her speech,—and at her age that phrase so slick is just enough to make one sick?

Why mention age? For life is a prize,—the sometimes we doubt it. That's when we're cross and want to flout it.

Twenty-two graduated at Commencement. The principal speakers at the dinner were Cyrus Hamlin '34, Gov. Garcelon '36, and Prof. Packard '18.

During the spring only four games of baseball were played with other colleges. Bowdoin beat Colby twice and lost to Bates twice.

Bowdoin won the Worcester meet. The final score was Bowdoin 23; Williams 22; Amherst 19; Brown 18; ½; Wesleyan 15-½; Dartmouth 14; MIT 11; Trinity 6-½; Maine 6.

The last event of the day was the pole vault. A Wesleyan man easily won first. Clarke of Bowdoin and a Williams man were tied for second. Instead of dividing the points, which would have given Williams the championship, Bowdoin insisted on its right to have the tie vaulted off, and Clarke won. The Orient said, "While Browser's able to walk, his nerve never fails him. He was the coolest man in the crowd."

Town and college went wild when the news came in. A victory procession down Maine Street, illuminated and decorated for the occasion, marked the end of a spirit of hostility between students and townfolk which had shown itself in recent years.

The Maine meet was won handily, but the baseball team made a poor record. Bowdoin "played her usual Ivy Day game, and lost seven to four."

The Germania orchestra played for Ivy Day as it had on Class Day twenty-five years before and almost annually in the interval.

"The signboard recently put up on the street corner has made the interesting disclosure that our principal street is named Maine, not Main Street."

During the summer, Prof. Henry Johnson and his daughter Helen took a bicycle trip in England.

"Merrymeeting Park...is more beautiful this year than ever before."

R. E. Clark '01, recovered from scarlet fever after four weeks' quarantine under the care of his mother in his dormitory room.

Five clubs in various courses were organized during the year.

It was announced that senior vacation and the annual day of prayer were abandoned for the future.

1924

Under the auspices of the Student Council an inter-fraternity council was organized.

The track team won a dual meet from Brown; won the state meet for the sixth consecutive time; and was second to Boston College by 1½ points in the New England meet.

The baseball team had a poor season up to the very last, losing most of its games; then won three in a row from Bates, Maine and Colby, and the championship.

Bertrand Russell, philosopher and pacifist, lectured on Chinese and Western Ideas of Life; and John Albee of Boston on Timekeeping and Timepieces.

Paul Nixon's Plautus was published.

Ivy Day: Garland, marshal; Charles Hildreth, prayer; Jones, presiding; Fasso, orator; Leighton, poem. The wooden spoon was not presented to Foster, the popular man, because he was participating at the New England meet.

Class Day: opening, Rowe; poem, Watson; oration, Hall; history, Gray; parting, Brisebois; ode, Keniston; presiding, Mal Morrell; marshal, Hardy.

Commencement play was Macbeth. C. F. R.

This first novel of Arthur Stratton when it came out last fall aroused a good deal of discussion, criticism, and controversy in some undergraduate and alumni circles. The fact that it was written by a member of the English Department and inscribed to the widow of a most distinguished Bowdoin alumnus, naturally made it of interest; and because, as it was termed on the jacket, "an electric novel of young Americans in these last years of peace and war", there were varied expressions of opinion, some favorable and some heated. Now that the smoke has somewhat cleared, it may be time for brief comment in the Alumnus even if the present reviewer, a somewhat old-fashioned and strait-laced usher of the Virtue and Piety phrase in the Bowdoin Charter may be a bit prejudiced. Not long ago in talking with a young author he made a statement very revealing of the modern point of view, that young novelists are very much afraid of being insipid. Such a danger Mr. Stratton has clearly avoided. At times in his novel he writes as if he were discovering and unearthing the scummy side of life and as if he were compelled to reveal several sordid and sorry details. Much in the book is not in accord with classical standards of good taste; but then do not such standards belong to an age that is past and gone? Several readers have expressed themselves as offended by the obvious references and satirical allusions to Bowdoin and Brunswick; but the college, the town, and even the much maligned fraternity can probably stand the uncomplimentary references.

There is no question of the ability of the author. He writes clearly and well, and at times in certain descriptive passages with beauty. Nor is there reason to doubt his sincerity as a realist. He handles the dialogue with ease and vigor. Of his characters it can be said that for one reader there is hardly one attractive or winning person. The interesting review in the Quill by Mr. Jared Weatherill thinks more highly of the character drawing and perhaps his the nail on the head by quoting Abe: "I am a modern man. We were born into the death of a system. Chaos is our natural state. We could control the world if we could control ourselves, but we don't want to. We like to see things burn." Frustration is thus the order of the day, and to many is given the impression of immaturity. There is too much shade, cloud and storm; very little sunshine and no calm weather.

Those of us who have read Mr. Stratton's earlier Atlantic articles and think highly of them and of him who know also his very real ability look forward with interest to his next novel and hope that it will be neither insipid nor electric.

Osgood portrait of Hawthorne

This third biography of Nathaniel Hawthorne in less than a year is the most remarkable of the three because it combines fine scholarship and understanding of the subject with a beautiful style. In this respect it is the most satisfactory.

Perhaps the most successful way to read a biography of a nineteenth century New Englander who spent a large part of his life on its rocky coast is to read it on an island composed only of fishing villages where the sea beats ceaselessly against its granite-crowned, rocky shores, and the only sound is the lonesome cry of the gulls as they wheel and turn over the shore or allow themselves to be carried by the various shifts of the wind. Because in such a location, free from the petty interruptions of daily life, the reader can give his whole attention to Mr. Van Doren's book. When he raises his eyes for a moment from its pages, he sees a landscape dotted with small frame houses, forest, rocky shore and sea which cannot be unlike the country Hawthorne wandered over in those first thirty-odd years of his life before he became involved in a more public life.

In such an atmosphere the beauty of Mr. Van Doren's prose, the events of the life he is writing, and his interpretation of Hawthorne can be fully appreciated.

Mr. Van Doren brings no new information, no startling disclosures or interpretation to his biography. He covers the biographical data, drawing freely but authoritatively from all available sources necessary. But in his interpretation of Hawthorne's character and writings, he skilfully combines the man and the writer and uses the tales and romances to describe and reveal his subject.

His critical studies of the tales and romances are blended with the narrative so that each contributes to the other's effectiveness. What is more, his treatment of the writings of Hawthorne is so interesting that one is tempted to start reading Hawthorne from the very beginning all over again. Not many biographers have succeeded in achieving this to a world of his own. Perhaps the reason lies in the fact that in this biography Hawthorne is revealed as a literary figure, rather than a Puritan, a misanthrope or a provincial countryman who happened to be a writer. Mr. Van Doren recognizes his genius without ever forgetting that he was also a human being.

To some students of American literature, Mr. Van Doren's silence on Hawthorne's friendship with other literary contemporaries, particularly Longfellow, may be disappointing. He remarks early in his book that Hawthorne was no particular friend of Longfellow during their college days, but says nothing of their long friendship later, from 1837 until Hawthorne's death, nor does he mention the Evangeline incident. In spite of this, he quotes Hawthorne letters to Longfellow which reveal a warm friendship existed. Emerson, Melville, and Thoreau receive much more attention than Longfellow within whom Hawthorne had the longest friendship.

Hawthorne has received a great deal of attention in the past year. Three biographies, a book of excellent scholarship on his later works by Professor Edward H. Davison of Ohio University, and the selection of his letters and romances published later, should make even more available the continuous interest in him and his writing. All of these books are the result of long hours of research and an intensive study of Hawthorne's life and character. From each we have learned more of this native of Salem who turned from the careers of his forebears and his contemporaries and which remains interesting a century later.

Upon completing Mr. Van Doren's volume, the reader remembers that in his Preface, the author says that one of his obligations is to his mother, who gave him, as a graduation present 33 years ago, the Old Manse Edition of Hawthorne's works. We, too, can be glad for that gift which resulted in this excellent study of Nathaniel Hawthorne.

MANNING HAWTHORNE

The most recent of Mr. Coffin's books, solidly stocked with much enjoyable poetry, proves one of his most attractive productions. The thirty-seven poems and twenty pen drawings of One-Horse Farm make so thoroughly self-contained a work as to constitute virtually one poem and one picture, the product of an assured and consistent mind. Probably the only feature subject to dissent is the subtitle, "Down-East Georgics", for the poems are fundamentally neither Virgilian nor New Englandish. Coffin's art no more stems from East of Boston than Frost's from North of Boston. In considering him it is important to know where to find him. We must, so to speak, know the city to which our letter should be addressed. His work stands in fact much closer to the Wordsworthian than to the Virgilian tradition. In his Georgics, it will be recalled, Virgil celebrates progressive farming (so one horse for him) and free farming (a man working alone using the strictest of classical forms, while Wordsworth, despairing of political ideals which had been devastated by the dark equity of the French Revolution, turned to rural, childhood memories as the mainstay of his best poetry. This attitude has been the mainstay of much of the world's poetry ever since. Stylistically considered, Wordsworth's "natural" language is simply the eighteenth-century style with its starch removed. His basic philosophy and idiom still persist in the hands of many gifted poets. Today, however, his model is a distinguished leader. In a critique of his work it will be well to forget Virgil. Moreover, it would be a mistake to assume merely because of the subject matter that his book is peculiarly of America, of New England or of Maine. Its art and sensibility stem from the traditions much broader than any of these, considerably broader even than the horizons of the English tongue. He is not in the least provincial, though he tempts his critic to become so.

With certain of the larger considerations of thought, emotion and art raised by his volume this review does not presume to deal further. Much however remains to be praised on the basis of an intimate and a less comprehensive view. The finest features of the poetry are to be seen not so much in sharp image or phrase as in lyrical feeling and feeling observed. Of this Coffin must be confessed that the actual biblical couplets learned of rather too readily to fluency and that such familiar scenes as ploughing, haying and harvesting, save under most exceptional circumstances, invite repetition of well-known thoughts and phrases. The sparkle of imaginative thought — which to be imaginative must, of course, be in a sense new — is best seen in poems with slightly unusual subject matter, as "Water-Fence", "Herring-Smoking", and "Banking the House". Even stronger than these descriptive pieces are "The Boy Sleeps Away from Home", and "The Club", a poem describing a league of boys with the child whose age is midway in a large family. Some lyrics of mood, simple and unassuming in all respects, have much beauty, as "Milling Time", and "The Shortest Day of the Year". Ship-building has been relatively as prominent as a theme in successful poetry produced in Maine as it has been in the industrial progress of the State. It is therefore pleasant to observe the tradition well sustained — possibly even excelled — in "New Daughter", the most imaginative poem in the book, inasmuch as it treats of the subject without naming it. "Boy Fishing" sustains traditions of New England mysticism; one can easily imagine Thoreau enthusiastic about such a piece. Probably the two finest poems are profoundly lyrical, "The Boy Isn't There", treating with new delicacy the familiar subject of childhood's absent-mindedness, and "The First", expressing the shock of a sensitive child on shooting his first bird. The second poem even impinges upon allegory.

The only lyric showing imagination and thought for man's social life is the last in the collection, "The Best Crop Will Not Keep". It wistfully reflects on conditions all-too-true north of Boston and as far even as Newfoundland: large families send most of their children South and West; children of fishermen and lumbermen work in factories of Massachusetts and Connecticut; rising generations of sea-captains become capitalists of inland industry elsewhere. The thought is sufficiently large to be sobering.

The pictures are a distinctly happy and fitting complement to the poems, showing what Blake would have called "their creator's "versatility". They are stronger and more original in their decorative than in their dramatic elements. One may possibly regret that so many figures are shown from the rear. Or is this a subtle reflection of the conservative style of drawings? This is a question which Mr. Coffin is perfectly fitted to answer. He may be a suspect thirty years ago. We must acknowledge that he has been praised and attacked with equal zeal. Poetry during these years has explored strange and wondrous worlds, with some splendor and much oblivion. But much in Mr. Coffin's work undoubtedly stands as true art and poetry. Whatever may be the merits or defects of more adventurous voyagers, in reference to radicals who question his worth we may alter Shakespeare's ancients' words to constitute our reply: "he is that he is, and they that level at his offenses measure up their own".

DAVID R. PORTER, Worship Resources for Youth: The Association Press; $2.50.

Worship Resources for Youth is a book which contains a wealth of helpful material. It should be welcomed by all who are called upon to lead services of worship in schools or college chapels. The author knows modern youth and this knowledge is reflected on every page. It is refreshing to note the absence of any trite or sentimental material. It is devotional in the highest sense, conducive to meditation and reflection, to prayer and worship.

The major part of the book contains material for fifty-eight different services of worship. The plan centers around a single theme and includes a series of readings from the Bible, a related prose selection by an outstanding spiritual leader, some lines of poetry and a brief prayer. The services are listed under nine general subjects as they bear upon the questions and experiences of youth. Among these subjects are: "Who and Where is God?", "Man Responds to God", "Life is Battle", and "Objective: A Brotherly World".

The author tells us that he was prompted, in part, to prepare this book by the requests of deans and chaplains, and camp leaders who wanted help in leading worship services for youth. After a careful reading of each section it is evident to this reviewer that their requests have been met.

The book also lends itself to individual use. By reading the two pages devoted to each theme, it can be used by an individual for a daily devotional period. With this in mind a parent might well hand it to a son or daughter going off to school or college.

Bowdoin men will note that one theme—"Hard Right Versus Easy Wrong"—takes its title from a published prayer by former president William De Witt Hyde, which is used, "O Lord, give us clean hands, clean words, and clean thoughts. Help us to stand for the hard right against the easy wrong. Save us from habits that harm. Teach us to work as hard and play as fair in thy sight alone as if all the world saw. Forgive us when we are unkind, and help us to forgive those who are unkind to us. Keep us ready to help others through at cost to ourselves. Send us chances to do a little good every day, and so to grow more like Christ."

In addition to the fifty-eight suggested themes for services of worship, there are sections on additional Bible readings, morning prayers, litanies and graces. Again one is conscious of the wealth of material gathered by the editor who must have spent years in ingathering this wealth. In his morning prayers, there are but few selections from the historic liturgies of the church. The author has drawn instead from the prayers of men who have known youth while serving as headmasters or chaplains at colleges.

The last section is entitled "The Why and How of Services of Worship". It begins with the statement that "There is no live issue before Americans more important nowadays than religious education for youth". The author points out that "education at its highest quality places nourishment of the inner man in the hands of the church. The original meaning the word education implies that man notes that "we have been under the mistaken impression its source was the Latin educare, meaning to draw, or lead out. Instead educare, meaning to feed or nourish, is the source of the word "education" and it is this original meaning the word education implies that.

AUTHORS

Arthur M. P. Stratton, formerly Associate Professor of English at Bowdoin, is now engaged in writing another novel which he hopes to have printed within the coming year. Mr. Stratton received the Croix de Guerre from the French Government for distinguished service as a member of the American Field Service in World War II.

The editors hope that it is not necessary to identify Mark Van Doren.

Robert P. T. Coffin '15 in his latest work, which did not reach the editor in time to be reviewed in this issue, returns to prose. It is entitled Coast Calendar and is illustrated by the author. Professor Carroll S. Towle '22 of the University of New Hampshire will review the book in the October issue.
DETOIT

The Bowdoin Club of Detroit held its annual meeting at the home of Stanley F. Dole '13 on June 2. Mr. Dole, newly elected President of the Alumni Council, reported on Council and College activities. Bowdoin wives and parents of students now in college shared the pleasant informal meeting. The club decided that it could not now consider undertaking a concert by the Glee Club because of a small scattered club membership. A fall meeting will be held when some member of the college staff can be present. Hillard S. Hart '21 is the new President and Council Member; George O. Cutter '27 was re-elected Secretary.

NEW HAMPSHIRE

The annual meeting of the New Hampshire Bowdoin Club was to have been held at Laconia but because a meeting place was not available, the meeting was transferred to the Exeter Inn. Twenty-five members attended. President George D'Arcy '33 introduced Scott Simpson '03 who spoke for the alumni, Director of Admissions Hubert S. Shaw '36 who told of admission problems, and Professor Herbert R. Brown who gave one of his famous sparkling reports on the state of the College. The club accepted the invitation of E. Curtis Matthews '10 to meet as its guests at a lobster dinner in Portsmouth in early autumn. It is hoped that next year's annual meeting may be held in Laconia under the auspices of Dr. Philip A. LaFrance '27.

New officers elected are: President and Council Member, George C. Monnell '36; Secretary, Ezra Pike Rounds '20. Nearly 200 alumni are in the area of the New Hampshire Club and the secretary asks the help of all to the end that the club may become a vigorous unit in the chain of Bowdoin alumni activity. He is the Director of Admissions at Phillips Exeter Academy.

NEW YORK

On Friday, May 13, a group of Bowdoin men doing graduate work at Columbia gathered for luncheon in the university Faculty Club to greet President Sills. Roswell C.McCrea, Dean Emeritus of the Columbia Business School, formerly of the Bowdoin faculty, Prof. Leland M. Goodrich of Brown University, visiting Professor of International Organization and Administration at Columbia University and Prof. Henry G. Russell, visiting Associate Professor of Religion at Columbia on leave from Bowdoin, were guests.

After the luncheon President Sills spoke informally about affairs at the College, and said that he thought there were more Bowdoin men doing graduate work at Columbia than any other university except Harvard.

PORTLAND

More than 75 members of the Portland Bowdoin Club attended the annual dinner meeting at the Falmouth Hotel on Tuesday, May 17. President William B. Nulty called on Stanley H. Low for the treasurer's report which revealed a balance of over $160 after a contribution of $631 to the Sesquicentennial Fund from the proceeds of the Messiah concert. Officers elected for 1949-50 are: President, Richard S. Chapman '28; Secretary-treasurer, Stanley H. Low '35; Council Member, William B. Nulty '10.

President Sills was the only speaker of the evening. Appearing before the Portland Bowdoin Club, as he put it, "for the nth time", the President gave his customary review of the year on the campus. With about one and a half millions received in the Sesquicentennial Fund and bequests amounting to more than another million, Bowdoin's financial situation is substantially improved. Music and the Political Forum are examples of superior student activities. A vigorous Student Council is now planning an increased amount of student government. The undergraduate body will number about 900 next full and, since the Naval Air Station is to be closed, housing presents problems. The College is fortunate that no temporary buildings have been necessary but the President believes that a new dormitory might well be erected as an investment. How and whom to admit remains difficult despite the fact that the number of applicants has fallen off. There are still twice as many applying as can be accommodated. That our screening is good is evidenced by the fact that last year’s class has the best campus record for several years. The Administration intends that Bowdoin shall guard its deserved reputation for high scholastic standards.

Bowdoin neither expects nor desires state or federal aid. It wants to remain independent. President Sills believes that if aid is to be given it should be given to our primary and secondary schools. Colleges will ben-fit from needed improvement at those levels.

SEATTLE

The Bowdoin Club of Seattle was organized at a meeting held on June
4. Present were Mr. and Mrs. Dwight
R. Robinson ’07 and their daughter,
Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth R. MacLean
’26, Mr. and Mrs. Edward O. Leigh
’12, William F. Finn ’05, Mr. and Mrs. Paul W. Muehlen ’43. Muehlen, who has organized recent meetings, was chosen Convenor and Council Member. A fall meeting in Tacoma is planned, before which Mr. and Mrs.
Robinson will entertain the group at cocktails. The club’s spring meeting will probably be held at Wenatchee or Yakima. This newest of Bowdoin Clubs is an active one and all Bowdoin men in the State are urged to make their presence known to Convenor Muehlen at 1411 Fourth Avenue Building, Seattle.

Necrology

1897  Daniel Weston Elliott, 75, died on July 6 in Cambridge, Mass. Born in Brunswick on April 26, 1814, he was the son of Daniel and Sarah Weston Elliott. While in college, he was elected to Phi Beta Kappa and Alpha Delta Phi fraternities. He served as Editor-in-Chief of the Bugle. He taught drawing in Lynn, Massachusetts, for several years and then went abroad to study interior decorating. Upon his return in 1903 he entered the interior decorating firm in Boston, where he remained until his death. He is survived by two nephews, Francis P. Freeman ’22 and Elliott Freeman ’18, and two nieces.

1898  Harry Clifford Knight, 72, died at
New Haven Hospital, New Haven, Conn., on July 29. Born in Pittston on February 2, 1876, the son of William A. and Mary McFadden Knight, he prepared at Gardiner High School. In college he was active in the Deutscher Verein and was a member of the baseball team. He taught in New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut schools for four years before joining the Southern New England Telephone Company as general canvassing agent in Connecticut.
Four years later he was elected Assistant Secretary and Treasurer of the company, and in 1916 became a member of the board of directors and member of the board’s executive committee. A year later he was named Vice-President and General Manager, and in 1930 became President serving in that capacity until his retirement in 1941. A prominent New Haven civic leader, he was a member of the City Plan Commission of New Haven, the New England Council, a director of the Union and New Haven Trust Company, the Securities Insurance Company, the New Haven Community Club and Grace Hospital. For eight years he was President of the General Hospital Society of Connecticut. Yale University conferred upon him an honorary M.A. degree in 1935, and he received an honorary Doctor of Science degree at Bowdoin in 1938. Surviving him are his wife, the former Mabel A. Brown of Bath whom he married on August 6, 1902, and a son, Gordon C., ’52 of Waterbury, Conn.
His fraternity was Alpha Delta Phi.

1898  Rey. Robert Robertson Morson, 80, died on April 23 in Beverly, Mass. He had retired from his church in 1944 because of illness and for nearly two years had been confined to his bed. Born on January 6, 1869, in Dundas, P.E.I., the son of Richard W. and Janet Robinion Morson, he received his early education at Prince of Wales College in Charlottetown. Following three years at Bangor Theological Seminary, he entered Bowdoin as a junior, and was active in debating and prize speaking.
In the year of his graduation he married Florence Mills of P.E.I. and was appointed pastor of the Congregational Church in Winthrop.
Succeeding parsonages were at St. John, N. B., Yarmouth, and Palmer, Mass. He was a trustee of North Yarmouth Academy, a member of the Congregational, the Hampden County Association of Churches and Ministers, and Phi Beta Kappa fraternity.

1899  Arthur Stephen Libby died of coromary occlusion in Mooseville, N. C.
On September 24, 1948, at the age of 71. He was born in Conema, the son of Clements and Estelle Allen Libby. His life was one of constant and distinguished service to society and of intense devotion to the welfare of youth. After a brief and humble beginning as high school principal, he received an A.B.
from the University of Maine which institution employed him as a principal. He was appointed as a professor in Bowdoin as the equivalent of its own Ph.B. and soon thereafter received his first college appointment in 1903, when he became Instructor in French at Brown University. From 1904 to 1912 he was Professor of Modern Languages at Converse College, S. C. Meanwhile in 1910, he was Delegate from South Carolina to the International Congress of Education in Brussels, Belgium. From 1912 to 1914 he traveled extensively in Japan, China, India, the South Seas, Siberia, and Africa. In 1915 he was Lecturer for the Department of Education at the San Francisco Exposition. During World War I he served first as Instructor in French in the 27th division, later as Army interpreter and staff officer, holding the rank of Major. From 1917 to 1919 he was Acting Professor of History and Political Science at Wofford College, S. C. From 1919 to 1930 he was Dean of the School of Commerce and Professor of Political Science and International Law at Oglethorpe University. In 1950 he organized the Libby Graduate School of Business Administration and Finance and became its Head and in the following year, he founded the University of Robert E. Lee at Atlanta, Ga., in which the Libby Graduate School was incorporated, and became President of the new institution. From 1924 until his resignation in 1947, he was Mayor of North Atlanta, a town which levies no taxes on its residents and permits no lawyers in its court. Directly after his election as Mayor, he converted the North Atlanta court into a "court of conciliation", conducting the trials in his classroom and laboring to bring litigants to agreement by reasonable persuasion.

He was married in 1907 to Miss Cora Steele of Mooresville, who survives him. Other survivors are a brother, Forrest Libby of Corinna and several nieces and nephews. Throughout nearly half a century devoted to the training of young men and women, so keen was Dr. Libby's sympathy for students struggling against great odds that he was continually putting forth a helping hand to the underprivileged, a part of which was self-sacrifice. For some time before his death he and Mrs. Libby had been considering the establishment at Bowdoin of a fund, the income from which should be not given, but lent, to needy students in the belief that the responsibility of repayment would tend to strengthen the character of the recipient more than would a gift. Mrs. Libby has recently given to Bowdoin a scholarship fund of $1000 to be administered on this principle and to be known as the "Arthur Stephen Libby Memorial Fund". Dr. Libby's services and attainments were widely acknowledged. He was a member of several professional organizations, on the campus of which were A.M. degrees from the Sorbonne and Brown University and a Ph.D. degree from the University of Paris. He was a member of the American Legion and of several professional associations and honor fraternities.

1999 William Townsend Vezie died on March 25, 1945 at his home in Chicago, Ill., after a short illness. Born on September 29, 1874, in Bangor, he was the son of James P. and Susan Townsend Vezie, and prepared at Bangor High School. As an undergraduate, he was active in the recipient of the Glee Club, Chapel Choir and was a star end on the varsity football team. He entered business in New York City as a bond salesman, but moved to Chicago with the Terra Cotta Company after brief business ventures in Texas and Idaho. He remained in Chicago for the rest of his life. Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Clara H. Vezie, three daughters and two grandchildren. His fraternity was Delta Kappa Epsilon.

1906 Philip Freeman Chapman, 61, died from a heart ailment on May 20 aboard the super freighter "South Bend." Among his following injuries received several previous in an automobile accident. He was born in Portland on November 3, 1865, the son of Mayor Charles J. and Annie Hinds Chapman. He prepared at Portland High School and Phillips-Exeter Academy. Graduated from Harvard in 1886, he was admitted to Harvard Law School and received his L.L.B. at Harvard Law School. Former president of the Chapman National Bank in Portland, he was instrumental in the construction of the Chapman Building that housed it, and also held a major interest in the Portland Evening News until it ceased publication in 1933. His other interests included real estate development and shared largely in the creation of Wildwood Park at Cumberland Foreside. For many years he was the law partner of Owen Brewster, on whose gubernatorial staff he served as military aide. Mr. Chapman retired from business five years ago and since that time had divided his time between his home in Portland and his winter home in Daytona Beach. He was a former director of the United States Trust Company, the Portland and Ogdensburg Railroad, a trustee of the Maine Eye and Ear Infirmary, the Y. M. C. A., and was a charter member of the Portland Kiwanis Club. He was also a Mason and a former director of the Bowdoin Alumni Fund. Surviving besides his wife, he was two brothers, Robert F. '00 and Harrison C. '10; a son, Philip F. Jr., '38; two daughters and a sister. His fraternities were Alpha Delta Phi and Phi Beta Kappa.

1917 Paul Hayes McIntire, Portland school principal of Urban District 1 for the past 14 years, died on August 14 at his home in Portland. Born on October 19, 1885, in Maine, he was the son of Edwin M. and Grace Luftin McIntire. He prepared at Greely Institute. As an undergraduate at college he was a member of the College Band and Orchestra and the Classical Club. Following his graduation he was appointed submaster at Greely Institute, resigning two years later to become principal of Wells High School. Joining the faculty of Portland High School several years later, he was appointed in 1955 to the position he held at the time of his death. Active in educational organizations, he was a member of the State Teachers Association, past president of the Portland Teachers Association, a member of the Kiwanis and Woodfords Clubs, and for many years was connected with the Portland Children's Theater. An accomplished organist, he played for various churches and groups. He was a member of Woodfords Congregational Church. Surviving him are the wife, the former Helen L. Hatch; two sons, Dr. Clarence E., and Paul jr.; and three sisters. His fraternity was Zeta Psi.

1919 Lewis Albert Burleigh Jr., Augusta insurance supervisor, died on August 11 in Augusta from self-inflicted wounds. Born on July 20, 1897, in Augusta, he was the son of Lewis A. '91 and Caddie Brown Burleigh, and the grandson of former Governor Edwin C. Burleigh. He prepared at Cony High School and was a member of his college class football and rifle teams. He was graduated from Harvard Law School in 1922 with an L.L.B. degree and opened a law office in Augusta. On July 6, 1922, he was appointed United States Commissioner and became insurance supervisor in 1936. Active in civic affairs, he was a director of the Augusta Trust Company, director and treasurer of the Augusta Y.M.C.A., and a director of the Augusta General Hospital. He was married in 1914 to Miss Annie Huey, a former director of the Bowdoin Alumni Fund and was an Alumni Council Member from 1958 to 1941. During the first World War he was commissioned an ensign in the Naval Air Corps. In 1923 he married the former Harriet Medlicott, who died in 1935; he was married in 1937 to Ursula Maher, who survives him with four children: John M. '49, Lewis A. Jr., Barbara and Sylvia. His fraternity was Delta Kappa Epsilon, and he was also a member of Phi Beta Kappa.

1919 Ruef Whitney Whitcomb, 52, died on May 28 at his summer home in Ellsworth. Born in Ellsworth Falls on June 25, 1896, he was the son of Charles M. and Hattie Whitney Whitcomb. During service in the first World War he attended Bristol College in England, entering Bowdoin upon his return, where he was a member of Kappa Sigma fraternity. He completed his college course at the University of Maine, receiving his degree in 1920. That year he joined Liberty Mutual Insurance Company in Boston, Mass., rising to Assistant Regional Claims Manager. He remained with the company until his death. With his wife, the former Hazel Jones, he lived in Wellesley, Mass. He was a member of the Masonic Lodge at Ellsworth. Surviving, besides his wife, are his mother and a twin brother, Eben M., 19.

1921 Charles Alton Jordan Jr. died on August 3 at his home in South Weymouth, Mass. He was born on April 25, 1897, in Lisbon, the son of Charles and Lala Jordan. He was born on October 23, 1898, in Brookline, Mass., the son of Jeffrey and Caroline Davis Richardson. He prepared at the Stone School. Leaving Bowdoin, he entered the investment security field in Boston. He was in Brookline. Surviving him is his wife, the former Henrietta Wing. His fraternity was Delta Kappa Epsilon.

1929 Mayo Hamilton Soley, 42, Dean of the Medical School of the State University of Iowa, died from a self-inflicted bullet wound on June 21 at his home in Iowa City. He was born on April 14, 1907, in Malden, Mass., the son of Walter H. and Grace Mayo Soley. He prepared at Malden High School, Mander Hall School and Hebron Academy. As an undergraduate he was active in hockey and tennis, and was a member of Beta Theta Pi fraternity. Continuing his studies at Harvard Medical School, he received his M.D. there in 1933, then was appointed physician-instructor in medicine and pharmacology at the University of California Medical School at San Francisco. He came to the State University of Iowa on July 1, 1948, as Dean of the Medical School and Professor of Internal Medicine. Dr. Soley had done extensive research and was the author of various medical articles. A member of several professional organizations, he was a member of the American and California Medical Associations. Surviving him are his wife, the former Karolina B. Jump, and three children, Mayo R. 7, Charles H. 4, and Jane Elizabeth 1y.

William Bennett Bean, head of the department of internal medicine at the State University of Iowa paid tribute to his late friend and associate, Dean Mayo H. Soley, in these words.
"A Very Parfit Gentil Knight"—

Mayo Soley came to us with the fervor of high ideals and hopes that he might supply the college of medicine in Iowa with the leadership needed to attain excellence worthy of the people of the mid-continent of our land. Brining with him the untrammelled pride and reserve of a New England heritage to which was added the enthusiasm of the West Coast, he epitomized the traits which have given greatness and beauty to the nation.

He had achieved distinction as a physician. He had done imaginative research of high originality as a student of the processes of disease. He had made his mark in the field of medical school administration.

Motivated by a profound feeling for the patient and the student, the warmth of his presence made him a sympathetic teacher. Because he was always a student he was a superb clinician. His leadership was recognized by membership in the significant medical societies, and service on national committees and editorial boards.

But this array of notable attainments is only the cold list of what a stranger might say in tribute. His warmth and color gave to them a meaning which kept him high in the affectionate regard of his fellows.

He was the cherished center of a devoted family. He was a thoughtful and devoted friend. There was about him the style and elegance of the sunny side of the hill on a spring day. His energy and enterprise found outlets in varied sports in which he went beyond proficiency, for he was satisfied with nothing short of perfection.

Into everything he put a prodigy of effort, carrying on his multitudinous tasks with verve and buoyancy. With high sense of duty, sound scholarship, keen intellect and ready wit he had at his command the mass of detail needed to direct a college of medicine. What he had achieved in the face of innumerable difficulties in one short year had won for him not only respect and admiration but the sympathetic support of his associates.

With such qualities and character he brings to mind the grace and skill, elan and manliness of the Elizabethan gentleman. Beyond anyone's thought he was impatient of delay and drove himself relentlessly but without bitterness to reach his goal. With so much of the path traversed he was suddenly overwhelmed, a martyr to his own idealism.

"He was a very parfit gentil knight."

1930 Douglas Fosdick, 49, died of heart disease on July 25 at the Central Maine General Hospital in Lewiston. He was born on April 26, 1900, in Somerville, Mass., the son of Herman and Una Colwynhous Fosdick. He prepared at Edward Little High School in Auburn and Hebron Academy. In college he was a member of the Glee Club, editor of the "Bugle", active in the Masque and Gown and Chapel Choir. His fraternity was Theta Delta Chi. He joined the staff of the Portland Evening News and was also with the Associated Press in Augusta before becoming secretary to former U. S. Senator Wallace H. White, Jr. from 1931 to 1935. He went into advertising with an agency in New York City but returned to Maine in 1940 to publish the Runnaford Falls Times for the next eight years. For several years he has been a partner in the Fosdick-Payson advertising agency of Auburn and Portland, and was a director of the Lewiston Trust Company. Surviving him besides his wife, the former Ann E. Johnson, are two daughters, Carolyn and Una; two sisters and a step-father.

1933 Francis Pope Marsh, 39, died in a rest home in Salem, Mass., on June 4. Born on May 31, 1910, in Danvers, Mass., he was the son of Frank W. and Harriet Hutchinson Marsh. He prepared at Tabor Academy. Following graduation he entered business in Danvers, Mass. He was a member of Psi Upsilon Fraternity.

Once again the Class has registered 100% in the Alumni Fund. Jack Dana's efforts have been responsible for making this a habit with us.

whom we had expected but who were hospitalized at a late moment — Wallace White and Cony Sturgis. The hospitality of the College, the weather and good fellowship all contributed to a “really a good time.” We were walking along to take our places for the parade, proudly displaying our 1899 insignia, when we met two alumni still more proudly bearing the insignia 1879. “Whoop!” said we. “We thought we were somewhat of an ancient class; here you are the class of 20 years before us!” Came the smiling comment, “You are mere children.” They were Henry Huston and George Bourne, 100% of their class. We registered 50% of ours. Present were Greenlaw, Came, Churchill, Cleaves, Godfrey, Hall, Hills, Lavertu, Marston, C. H. Merrill, Smith, Towle, Varney and Libby. Edward Godfrey was Reunion Chairman.

HOTEL EAGLE WELCOMES YOU!

Yes, Bowdoin men and their families will find a friendly welcome awaiting them at Brunswick’s best hotel, five minutes’ walk from the campus.

The same friendly atmosphere that you remember is still here. But we have modernized the house throughout, installed more private baths, enlarged the dining room, built on a sun porch where you can enjoy meals outdoors in complete comfort, and re-decorated and painted the house throughout.

You’ll find the same high quality of food here as in the past and sleep restfully in our clean, fresh rooms.

You can be assured of finding in the Eagle a modern and attractive hotel where you and your families may stay in complete comfort while you are in Brunswick.

And in our efforts to give you this fine service we deeply appreciate the support of Bowdoin undergraduates, alumni and friends.

Some 25 of us met at North Appleton on Thursday of Commencement week, and proceeded to Pickard Field headquarters for lunch. Class President Mal Morrell called a business meeting after lunch, following which we visited Bowdoin-On-The Air quarters in the Union. The Secretary had recorded a talk on "What Happens to a Bowdoin Class 25 Years Out?" which was played back for classmates. Special tribute was given to members of the class who served in the war and those who have died since graduation. Our reunion program continued with a very successful reception at Headquarters, where we entertained Faculty and Governing Boards and friends of the College. Friday we had a class picture taken and filled a bus for Bailey Island for a first-rate shore dinner at Jaquish Inn. Honorary members of the class Adam Walsh and Jack Magee gave brief talks, and the Secretary shared with the class his discovery of an unpublished version of Lewis Carroll's Loomus "Jabberwocky". Back at Headquarters after the dinner, Snapper Ross took over at the piano for the rest of the evening. Saturday noon we were pleased and proud as Granville Gilpatrick handed President Sills our check for $16,000. Because of repeated requests, and with apologies to Lewis Carroll, the Secretary's poem is reprinted:

SNAPPERROSS

"Twas aldrd, and the towlestone djinn
Did roth and morrell far and nigh;
All gonya was the cousins chin.
And the ingraham on rye.

"Beware the SNAPPERROSS, my son!
That bites like hill and claws to ribbons;
Beware the blッチford bird, and shun
The even Fowler gibbons."

He took his putnum pine in hand,
Longtime the griendell foe he sought;
So resect he by the litchfield tree
And stood awhile in thought.

And as in burnell thought he stood,
The SNAPPERROSS, with eyes of flame,
Came goselin through the weymouth wood
And blanchard as it came.

One, two! One, two! and thru and thru
The savage pike went snicker-snick!
He left it dead, and with its head
He went mcmenamin back.

"And hast dow slain the SNAPPERROSS?
Porter there, my lovel-lee boy!
O happy jour! O sinon pure!"
He churchilled in his joy.

"And you shall have a bishopric,
And a rove of pies baksed by Lavigne's,
And a johnson-johnston gilpa-trick,
And your fill of canned jardines."

...Tis aldrd, and the towlestone djinn
Both roth and morrell nigh and far;
All gonya is the cousins chin.

FACULTY

Prof. Herbert B. Brown received an honorary LL.D. degree from Lafayette, his alma mater, with the following inscription: "Loyal alumnus, eminent scholar and fine teacher, we welcome you back for new recognition by your own college", Doctor of Literature. He was principal speaker at the annual conference of Maine Principals of Secondary Schools held in Augusta in May. This summer he is teaching a course in American novel at Bread Loaf School of English.

Prof. Nathan Dane II '37 has been elected president of the Maine Audubon Society.

Prof. Jean Louis Darbelnet was recently conferred the Palms of Officier D'Académie by the French Government at Lafayette Day ceremonies in Boston.

Professor and Mrs. E. Estyn Evans have returned to their home in Belfast, Ireland, after having been in Brunswick for the past eight months where Dr. Evans has been visiting professor of geography and anthropology on the Tallman Foundation.

Dr. Alfred O. Gross showed colored pictures of Florida and Arizona birds at the annual meeting of the Maine Audubon Society in Portland on May 6. Dr. Gross was elected a director of the Society.

Mrs. Frances Robinson Johnson, widow of Professor Henry Johnson, professor of modern languages at Bowdoin until his death in 1918, died at her home in Brunswick on August 1. Mrs. Johnson was the first graduate of Wellesley College. Her daughter, Mrs. Stanley P. Chase, wife of Professor Chase, survives.

Prof. Samuel E. Kamerling has been appointed president of the Brunswick Girl Scout Council.

Prof. Edward C. Kirkland received an honorary Litt.D. degree from his alma mater, Dartmouth, with the following ascription: "For the good literature with which you clothed the story of American economic history, Dartmouth deems you a most worthy recipient of her Doctorate of Letters." Prof. Kirkland's mother, Mrs. Mary C. Kirkland, died at her home in Brunswick on May 19. She was in her 85th year.

Prof. Eaton Leith played the leading role of Stage Manager in Our Town, the May production of the Brunswick Workshop Theater. Mrs. Ann P. Daggett took the part of Mrs. Webb. William W. A faculty testimonial dinner in honor of Dean Paul Nixon's 40 years service to the College was held at the Union on May 25. Prof. Orren C. Hormell presided and Prof. Herbert Ross Brown served as toastmaster. President Sills spoke on behalf of the College, and Prof. Robert P. T. Collier read a poem written expressly for the occasion. Dean Nixon was presented with a copy of the Oxford Book of Medieval Latin. In his talk President Sills recalled that his appointment of Paul Nixon as Dean was the first he made as President of the College. "I feel that if all the appointments I have recommended since then had been of the same nature and quality, by this time we should have had a pretty distinguished faculty. We do not honor Paul Nixon simply because he has completed the fortieth lap in the rather grinding academic long-distance race but because in those long years as scholar and translator, as essayist and teacher, as dean and friend, he has done so much to make Bowdoin a fine college."

President Sills received his tenth honorary degree at Boston University, June 6. President Daniel L. Marsh conferred the L.H.D. with the following acclamation: "Kenneth Charles Morton Sills, President of Bowdoin College since 1918, thus distinguished as the oldest college or university president in New England in terms of length of service; authoritative educational administrator, active in civic and church affairs, exemplary in character, the type of gentleman who has won the reverential respect which New England has traditionally loved to give to her college and university presidents. — I confer upon you Boston University's honorary degree of Doctor of Letters of Humanity."

Mrs. Sills has been re-elected president of the Western Maine Wesleley Club.

First Court in Portland

The first Court proceedings concerning Portland of which record still exists was a General Assembly ordered by Sir Ferdinando Gorges at Saco in June, 1640. The record is preserved as part of the York County Records.

The first General Assembly at York in 1680 appointed Anthony Brackett as Lieutenant of Casco (now Portland) and Thaddeus Clark as Ensign. Apparently there was much over-lapping of authority in early court appointments. We find that Thomas Gorges, cousin to Sir Ferdinando, was appointed Steward General and held court at Saco in September, 1640; George Cleaves, Portland’s first mainland settler, was commissioned Deputy President of the Province of Ligonia and held court first at Saco, then, in December of 1648, at Casco. In 1678 Thomas Danforth, Deputy Governor of the Massachusetts Bay Province, was appointed President of Maine and also “held court.”

The first “Superior Court” was held on the Neck in 1760 and the records of the Registry of Deeds and of the Courts were started that year. Also two counties were added that year—Cumberland and Lincoln.

Land disputes were seemingly never-ending then, mainly due to the practice of the English King’s appointed governors in handing out land grants indiscriminately. Indian affairs; the proper defense of the settlements against Indian depredations; who should pay for arms and ammunition for the common defense and how much; suits for slander; settlement of petty quarrels between neighbors; all kept the courts of the day busy. Parson Smith in his diary has preserved for us many an on-the-scene description of these court proceedings, from the lengthy prayer at opening of court to the gentlemen wining and dining sumptuously on the best the town could afford when court adjourned.

By 1760 some semblance of civil rule was established in Portland. Records state that the first sheriff of Cumberland County was Moses Pearson. William Tyng was appointed his successor in June, 1767. This same Tyng was elected representative to the General Court in 1771 and 1772. Interesting moments of the Tyng family, among others, are preserved by the Maine Historical Society.

In 1772 the first murder trial was held in Portland. There being no other building large enough that was available, court convened in the First Parish Meeting House, and in this incongruous setting one Goodwin was tried and sentenced to execution.
